Canadian Government Agent Ball, at Birmingham, England, quotes one of the largest flour dealers in England who has lately had a trial order of 500 bags of flour from a Chatham, Ont., miller, as saying : "We beg to say this is the finest Canadian patent we ever saw. It makes a splendid loaf, in both bloom and texture. We are trying to buy a line for shipment, and we feel bound to say if your Canadian millers can ship us flour of this kind, and keep shipping up to this quality, they will have very little trouble in displacing the fine Winter patents on our market that we are now getting from the United States."

Grain Standards Fixed.

STANDARDS for grain grown east of Port Arthur were on Monday last fixed by the board appointed by the Dominion Government, consisting of W. D. Matthews, chairman ; Thomas Flynn, H. N. Baird, J. L. Spink, John Carrick and C. B. Watts, of Toronto ; John I. A. Hunt, of London ; James Dunlop, of Hamilton ; William Brodie, of Quebec ; E. F. Craig, chief Dominion grain inspector, Montreal ; E. Adamson, chief grain inspector at Toronto, and J. Hurley, grain inspector at Peterborough.

Generally speaking, the standards for most grains grade higher this year than last, although there was not a little inferior grain submitted that had to be rejected altogether. Mr. W. D. Matthews, chairman, however, expressed his pleasure at the unusually high quality of the grain. For some lines standards were not made, owing to the lack of samples, these including No. 1 Spring wheat, No. 1 goose wheat, extra white Winter wheat,

No. 3 and No. 4 barley, and No. 1 and No. 3 peas. In other varieties of wheat the standards were higher than the act calls for, and standards were made for No. 2 Spring, No. 2 goose, No. 1 white Winter, No. 2 white, No. 1 and No. 2 red Winter.

In respect to peas it is pointed out by the board that the quality is not yet what it should be. Last year the examiners directed attention to the spread over the province of the pea bug, and said that unless something was done to check this pest the industry would be seriously injured. This year some little improvement was shown, due, it was believed, to some extent to the action of the Government in placing proper information before the farmers.

The examiners considered that for oats the weights should be the same for white, black and mixed, and the Department of Trade and Commerce will be recommended to instruct the inspectors to issue certificates in accordance with this decision.

The standards for corn were left as in the past to the Montreal Board, and the standards for buckwheat were left for the Toronto examiners to deal with. Both will be fixed later.

The weights per bushel in the other standards were arranged as follows:—Oats, No. 1 white, 34 pounds; No. 2 white, 32 pounds; No. 3 white, not less than 30 pounds; rye, No. 1, 57 pounds; No. 2, 56 pounds; barley, No. 1, 49 pounds; No. 2, 48 pounds; No. 3, extra, 47 pounds.

The Army of Corn.

All Summer long the army stands
In ranks erect and clean,
The garrison of level lands
And of the hills between.
The armies of the wind and rain
Come shouting to the fight;
Alert upon the spreading plain
The corn waits in its might.

It flaunts its tasseled banners high,
And beats each swaying shield,
Until the Summer's battle cry
Is chorused from the field.
Victorious and sturdy still
It rises from the fray,
And rustling chants of gladness fill
The long hours of the day.

The dawn's first tender, rosy blush—
The hailing of the morn—
Finds, shrouded in a peaceful hush,
The Army of the Corn.
But friendly breezes come and go
Till dying afternoon
Hears, faintly sighing, soft and low,
The echo of a croon.

And so, serene and bold and brave,
All through the Summer long
The gleaming banners proudly wave
In cadence with the song.
Until the golden Autumn morn
When there will come to spoil
The standing Army of the Corn
The hopeful Troop of Toil.

Flour Mills in Manchuria.

The number of flour mills at Harbin has increased to six, with a daily production of 8,000 poods (288,896 lb.)—a little over 1,474 bbls., writes Henry B. Miller, United States Consul at Niuchwang. This flour is pronounced entirely satisfactory in quality wherever it is used, and is gradually controlling the market of Manchuria. It has reached Port Arthur in small quantities, but has not yet interfered to any appreciable extent with the importation of American flour, although doubtless it will have its effect in time.

Oregon Wheat Crop Short.

The Portland Oregonian estimates the wheat crop of the Pacific Northwest as follows:

	Bush.
Oregon	11,400,000
Washington	19,100,000
Idaho	4,250,000
Total	34,750,000

These figures show a shortage of 7,000,000 bushels, compared with those of last year, and are 12,000,000 bushels under those of the record year of 1901.

This shortage should supplement the Osaka Exhibition in developing the demand for Canadian breadstuffs in the Orient.

Cereal Notes.

The Toronto agency of The Natural Food Co. has been demonstrating of late for the benefit of the representatives and staff of several of the local wholesale houses.

The "Force" Co. are inaugurating another advertising campaign in which our old friend Sunny Jim again figures, but this time in an up-to-date and recent photograph.

The large factory of The Swiss Food Co., Toronto, is being worked to its fullest capacity and is unable to cope with the largely increased demand of the present season. Outside of the local distribution the export trade is very satisfactory, and heavy shipments have recently been made to European countries.

The French are the largest bread eaters in the world. The consumption of wheat in France is sufficient to give every man, woman and child in the republic 480 pounds of bread a year, or about one and one-third pounds per day. This is considerably larger than the per capita consumption in England and that, in turn, is at least a bushel per capita more than our own.

A few years since wheat bread was consumed by the generality of people in Germany only in such forms as rolls, rye bread being the staff of life, "Weissbrodt," as wheat bread is usually called, was distinctively a breakfast bread. Now, however, we are told that wheat bread is commonly found on the supper table, as well as at breakfast, and is supplanting rye bread to a great extent.

The nutmeg supply of England and her colonies is almost entirely in the hands of Dutchmen. The bulk comes from the Island of Banda, and over 80 per cent. of the world's crop from the Dutch West Indies. The fruiting powers of the trees are remarkable. They start fruiting when about 12 years old, and yield regularly for 60 or 80 years. They carry blossoms and fruit without intermission through every month of the year.

TEA REPORTS.

IN their tea circular, dated London, September 24, William James and Henry Thompson, say: The market this week presents no new features. Common tea has been rather easier and medium grades devoid of character have also participated in a slight reaction, but those invoices with desirable cup quality have sold freely at fully previous quotations. Home consumption this month to date shows an expansion of over three quarter million pounds, but export has fallen off some 600,000 pounds, the total clearances, however, showing a slight increase.

INDIAN.—Total offerings of this season's tea to date, 259,000 packages, against 304,000 packages a year ago. The tone has been firm for price teas and at decline quoted on 17th inst. buyers have come in freely. Fine and finest are getting scarcer but continue to command good prices.

CEYLON.—A steady demand for good teas which have again been strengthened by competition on behalf of exporters. Common tea has been competed for on rather lower basis than previously ruling.

CHINA.—Chief demand continues for common to good low grades of black and red, both old and new seasons, from 4½d. to 5¼d. per lb. Medium to good have sold in some quantity from 6½d. to 10d., but there is hardly anything doing above that price in the absence of export enquiry. Green teas in auction have passed with better spirit.

Gow, Wilson & Stanton, under date of September 25, report that buyers are showing timidity owing to increased crop reported, but private cables show increase is not continuing in same proportion, and should official wire confirm these, growers will be in a strong position.

INDIAN.—Some indifferent teas have been offered and quotations for same have been marked down quite ¼d. per pound. A few mediums have sold at slightly cheaper rates, but a good demand at satisfactory quotations has been recorded for best liquoring kinds.

CEYLON.—Market has been fairly steady, and quotations, except for lowest grades, have been maintained. Only small quantities are expected to be brought out for the present.

JAVA.—Javas were mostly of useful character and met with a steady demand at prices showing little or no alteration on previous quotations.

The Dairy Commission of Minnesota has made a ruling to the effect that coal tar colors shall not be used by creamery managers after January 1.

TRAVELLERS ENTERTAINED.

ON Friday last Francis H. Leggett & Co. entertained their travellers to a luncheon at their factory, on King street, in New York. This luncheon was unique, because of the fact that nearly every article served was of their Special Premier Brand. Fruits, fish, meats, olives, butter, cheese, vegetables, coffee, in fact everything was of Premier standard, and the guests thoroughly enjoyed the luncheon, over two hundred people partaking of this delicious repast.

Mr. F. H. Leggett, president, and Mr. John C. Juhring, vice-president and secretary, were present and did the honors for the firm. After the luncheon the party were shown through the factory, equipped with all the latest automatic machinery for the preparation of the food stuffs made by this firm. Over six hundred hands are employed in this factory; everything is kept clean, and the goods packed in handsome packages. In the shipping room were noticed boxes and cases labeled in a number of different languages. While there a very large shipment was being prepared for South American points.

Among the novelties noticed was the telautograph, an instrument for electrically reproducing, at a distance, handwriting, drawings and similar matter, and may properly be called the writing telegraph. This machine is in operation between the office in the warehouse on Hudson street and the factory on King street. The operator writes on the machine, which somewhat resembles a telephone, except that it has a large glass case in front on which is recorded the exact handwriting of the operator on the other instrument. There is no chance for mistake, the reproduction is exact, and a copy is kept of each day's messages. The telautograph has been adopted by the United States army, and is a machine of very great merit, and reduces the danger of mistakes which so frequently occur by telephone.

After the enjoyable inspection of the factory and the sampling of the goods at the luncheon, over a hundred jolly travellers and their friends, making a party of over two hundred people, went aboard a neat little steamer, chartered for the occasion by the firm, and were given an enjoyable trip around the Island of Manhattan, where an excellent opportunity was afforded of inspecting the magnificent harbor of New York. Mr. Juhring, of the firm, was active in looking after the interests of his guests, who joined in a very hearty vote of thanks to the firm for the very enjoyable day. Almost every State in the Union was represented by the travellers, one of whom, who represents the house in West Virginia, was F. J. Fortier, formerly of Prescott, Ont. On board the steamer was a first class lecturer who pointed out and explained to the visitors points of interest in a bright and entertaining manner.

Last year this firm gave their salesmen and friends a coaching party, which was also very enjoyable. It is needless to say that the relationships between employer and employe in this firm are of the most harmonious nature.

ITALIAN FIGS

THE fig forms an important article of the diet of the poorer classes in Italy; in fact, the total failure of the crop would be a grave national disaster, says The Scottish Trader. Figs are susceptible of various kinds of treatment. They are, perhaps, the most nourishing of all fruits. They can be canned, stewed, preserved, candied, made into puddings, and used in a variety of ways which seem at present unknown. Their introduction as a popular food would be a great boon to the carrying trade, to the importer, and to the general public. Of the fig-growing districts of the world, South Italy is one of the most important, for, although the tree grows all over the country, it is only south of the Tiber that the fruit can be dried for export, the most northern district being Pozzuoli, which includes the island of Ischia, where the cultivation of the plant is very extensive. Going further south we find centres of cultivation at Reggio, Bari, and Cantanzaro, not to mention Sicily and the Lipari Islands, where a large business is done. As a fresh fruit it forms an important article of food, as the different varieties last through the months of June to September. Soon after this the dried figs come in, and these are sent all over Northern Italy, and are also a large item of Italian export to France. The Italian fig is smaller and less sweet than the Smyrna variety, hence the latter has the command of the British market, and the export of Italian dried figs to the United Kingdom is a negligible quantity. That the best Italian fruit might find a profitable market there seems likely, especially as those grown on the volcanic alluvium of Ischia and Pozzuoli are well flavored, have a fine white skin, and are particularly sweet. They are, besides, grown quite near the coast, and this is always a beneficial condition, probably owing to the climate being damper than it is inland. The trees require very little water; in fact, the growers never resort to irrigation, the natural rainfall in Italy being quite sufficient for them. Dry weather is essential at the time of the fig harvest, as the fruit should be sun-dried, and when the weather is wet the fruit is either spoiled or else artificially dried in primitive ovens, and in order to do this it is often split up.

The Italian fig is preferable to that of Spain, Portugal, or France, but in size and quality is inferior to that of Smyrna. In the important question of albuminoids, upon the presence of which the nutriment contained in the fruit depends, Italy again takes the second place and Smyrna the first, but in fatty qualities there is no appreciable difference.

The packing and curing in Italy are also behind the age. As the fruit is grown so largely for home consumption the packing is done as cheaply as possible. Moreover, those which are exported are not very largely used as human food, but for distillation and for the adulteration of coffee and similar substances, and consequently neatness of packing and general appearance are not studied as they deserve to be. There are three principal ways of curing in Italy, adopted promiscuously throughout the country. The usual way is to pick the fruit at daybreak and split it up as far as the stalk. The fig thus split is laid in the sun. This plan has many advantages, because bad or sour fruit can be readily detected, the sun has more power, and the labor of turning the figs which is necessary when the fruit is dried whole is avoided. When picked and split the fruit is laid on wicker frames or straw mats with the interior part upward, otherwise the contents would run to waste. They are left thus for eight or ten days, according to the weather, and are then put in baskets and immersed for a minute in boiling water. As soon as they are dry again they are ready for packing.

Another method is to split and dry the figs as above, and to insert into the pulp an almond or a piece of citron, or simply sprinkle the whole pulp with aniseed. Figs so treated are largely used in Italy, and find a certain amount of favor in the foreign markets.

The third way of drying is to dry the fruit whole. This is effected by spreading it out on mats made of cane upon low beds of earth to ensure greater warmth, and turning the figs every day or oftener if labor is procurable. The most careful curing in this district is done at Catanzaro, whence some 800,000 pounds weight of figs are exported annually.

Owing to the scarcity of wood very primitive methods of packing are used in Italy. Mats containing about 40 pounds weight of fruit are made of Esparto grass, and are the most common packages for all figs destined for distillation and kindred purposes. Table figs are generally exported in round drums made of thin wood, containing about 15 pounds of fruit. For home use the figs are generally strung on split canes or Esparto straw. Two canes are thrust through the figs till a flat mass of figs is formed, four inches wide by 20 inches long. The best of the many varieties grown in this district is the "Fico Trojano" or Trojan fig, its name clearly indicating its Asiatic origin.

A STORE IN PEKIN!

The business streets of the cities and towns of the Celestial Empire are remarkable for the number of long signs of many colors announcing the articles for sale on the shelves.

We show to-day a true picture of a store front in Pekin where CHINESE STARCH is sold.

This product, next to tea, commands the largest sale. Its general use can be noted by observing the pedestrians, all dressed in immaculately-white and well-glaced linen.

It is a well-established fact that CHINESE STARCH is king and master of all that pertains to starching and glacing. Its superior qualities have won the favor of all laundresses and no other starch can displace it.

CHINESE STARCH is also a favorite with the grocer, as it is easily sold; it is never complained of by his customers and never returned.

Ladies do not require to send their linen out if they use CHINESE STARCH—the labor is light and the work turned out perfect.

If you have not tried it, order a case from your jobber. It is sold everywhere.

JAM DEAR IN BRITAIN.

NOT for five and twenty years has jam been so dear as it will be for the next twelve months, says The Scottish Trader. The soft fruit season has just closed, and raspberries made as high as £45 and even £50 a ton. The plum season is in full swing, but values range from £30 to £40 a ton, so that jam cannot possibly be cheap. The above quotations refer to jam fruit only. Of course, dessert raspberries made considerably higher prices. We saw quantities sold at 9d. and 1s. a pound first hand, these prices being equal to £84 and £112 a ton respectively. As to the plums, the Victoria, Ponds Seedling, and Prince of Wales plums are making from 7s. to 10s. a half-bushel. The former is largely used by jam makers, being in fact one of their stock plums. At from £30 to £35 there are buyers open to purchase hundreds of tons of plums. These fruits, especially the imported samples, are more plentiful than raspberries, currants, or strawberries were. The jam manufacturer is depending upon the plum to replenish his stocks, though the latter will at the end of the stone fruit season be far under the average of previous years. The bulk of the plums on sale at the present time come from Holland, Germany, and France. Though it is stated in the official statistics that American plums are on the market here, they are never used for jam, being far too expensive. Continental plums are plentiful. About 100,000 packages of these fruits have been unshipped in English ports during the past six days. Out of this quantity over 80,000 packages full had been grown in Germany. This season German shippers are monopolizing the plum trade of the British markets. Quite 75 per cent. of the plum jam that will be sold as new season's jam this year will have been made from German plums. Of course, these increased foreign fruit shipments are due to the failure of the British fruit crop. If German plums were not used in English jam we should get little of that popular preserve this season. As it is, despite the seemingly large arrivals referred to, English jam will be unusually dear. The Scotch, and particularly the Blairgowrie growers, furnished large quantities of raspberries for the jam manufacturer this year. They asked and obtained very high prices for their fruit, but it was good. The industry is a growing one, and the prices that were realized during the past season cannot fail to stimulate extended culture. The representatives of the commercial jam-makers journey long distances to this famous raspberry and strawberry growing centre for their jam fruits. With such prices ruling, and the shortage, also a slight rise in the cost of sugar, jam, and in fact all fruit preserves, will be dear during the next year. It is unfortunate that jam-makers have not only had to face a great shortage of fruit and high prices, but that sugar has also increased in value.

THE COCOANUT'S BY-PRODUCTS.

A cocoanut grove begins to bear fruit after six years, the crop being gathered about two years later. Almost every part of the tree can be utilized. The coarse fibre of the bark is woven into the familiar cocoa matting, and used for all sorts of rough purposes. The leaves will serve as a thatch, and the strong midribs make excellent brooms or twine. The big central leaf bud is cooked and eaten, tasting much like cabbage. On the more southern islands the flower bud is often sliced off at the tip, a small bamboo tube is hung under the cut and the sap is collected. It is the sap which is the "tuba" or palm wine often referred to. The same sap of the cocoa, when boiled down, yields sugar which compares favorably with that of the maple in its seductive flavor.

CANADIAN PRODUCTS FOR DUBLIN.

A DUBLIN correspondent writes to "The Grocer" as follows: "The object of the proposed exhibition in London of Canadian products is to stimulate Canadian trade with Great Britain, but it is doubtful if Canadian trade with Ireland or Scotland will be benefitted by this exhibition. If Canadian exporters are really desirous of getting a market for their goods in Ireland or Scotland the surest and most expeditious way of doing so is to hold exhibitions of Canadian products in Dublin and Glasgow, either permanently or temporarily. In Ireland some such method is absolutely necessary in order that the people may see for themselves the class of goods which can be bought from Canadian manufacturers, and thereby close the Irish market to American and other exporters. As regards the proposed London exhibition, it will have no effect on the consumers or traders here, not one-tenth of whom will as much as hear of the exhibition. It may be mentioned that the writer suggested to the Canadian Department of Agriculture some months ago the advisability of having an exhibition in Dublin of Canadian goods, and, while admitting the advantages to be derived, the Department did not see its way to take the matter in hand. It therefore remains for the Canadian exporters desirous of extending their trade to Ireland to take the matter in hand, and it is very probable that if they do so they will receive the same assistance from the Canadian Government as is being given to the London project. Dublin, it may be mentioned, is exceptionally suitable for such an exhibition. It is the chief city of Ireland. The world-famed Horse Show is held annually in Dublin, as well as Spring and Winter cattle shows, when the city is thronged with people from all over Great Britain, and at all times during the year large numbers of country people come to town, so that an exhibition in Dublin of Canadian products would popularize them not only amongst the people of the city, but amongst the people of the country. A permanent store to exhibit and push the sale of Canadian products is absolutely necessary in Dublin.

A CORRECTION.

In our report last week of the dinner tendered by Mr. Shaw T. Nishimura, representative of the Central Japan Trading Agency, to his Montreal tea friends, it was stated, "Mr. John Carsley, of Carsley & Co." This was an error. Mr. John Carsley is sole proprietor of The Ozo Co., Limited, and the M. Lefebvre Vinegar Works, and is in no way connected with The Carsley Co., Limited.

A NOVEL DEVICE.

An up-to-date grocer in a certain district of the metropolis is about to employ a rather novel method of calling the attention of his customers to both old and new lines, says Grocery (London, Eng.) Last year he used the same method with much success.

It is this. He picks the largest walnuts he can find, and splitting them in two, he extracts the nut. Then he inserts a short and pithy circular printed in three different styles, and glues the two halves of the walnuts together.

Then he places three of those loaded walnuts in a small bag to which a neat ticket is attached, bearing the legend: "Some nuts for you to crack." These bags he gives away to customers, and finds that this device answers the purpose very well.

The Essex Tobacco Crop.

THE Essex County tobacco crop is estimated to be 300,000 pounds short of last year, when about one million was the amount grown. Rot, which attacked the young plants in the Spring and made it impossible for growers to get sufficient plants for their tobacco fields, is given as one reason and for another the excessive cold nights during the Summer stopped growth and prevented full development. It is expected by the growers, however, that competition for the crop will keep prices up and so partially compensate for the shortage.

London Tobacco Notes.

THE month of September was a very busy one with London manufacturers. Following we give the Inland Revenue returns for September.

Cigars, ex-factory	$11,299.14
Cigars, ex-warehouse	4,954.65
Tobacco, ex-warehouse	1,392.25
Raw leaf tobacco for use	5,876.66
Malt	7,576.26
Spirits, ex-warehouse	6,079.58
Other collections	75.24

In several of the factories preparations for the Christmas trade are already being made. Handsome packages appropriate to the coming festive season will be turned out by several, if not all, of the factories.

As mentioned in previous notes, the continued wet weather is causing considerable inconvenience, it being next to impossible to get tobacco dried, and in some instances fires have been resorted to.

Mr. Gar Stirton is now representing Stirton & Dyer on the Winnipeg to coast trip. This firm have recently opened a warehouse in Winnipeg for distribution of their goods in the West.

J. A. Thomas, Brener Bros.' representative for the West, reports business booming in Manitoba and the Territories, as a result of recent immigration and abundant crops. The situation in British Columbia is also much improved, strikes in various places having been amicably adjusted.

O. E. Brener returned from Dawson on September 21 and is much pleased with his trip to and from that country as well as with the country itself. Mr. Brener does not advise anyone to go to Dawson unless they are in possession of a sum of money amounting to at least three or four thousand dollars. This amount represents the capital necessary to work a claim. Prices have settled down to almost normal conditions, it being now possible to secure A1. board at ten dollars per week, whereas a few months ago a dollar was charged for a steak, and trimmings extra. Mr. Brener is interested in several mines in Dawson, and may possibly go in again next Spring.

Mr. Young, late with J. Warttig, has joined the staff of The Daly Cigar Co.

For the small sum of $4 a smoker can get a very good cigar in Cuba, and he will get considerable for his money. This particular cigar is packed in a handsomely decorated box and wrapped in imported Japanese rice paper; it measures sixteen inches long and nearly one and a half inches in diameter and is made from a choice selection of leaf grown on a well-known Cuban plantation.

Much may be said for and against cigarette smoking, considerable of which pro and con is superstition and imaginative. Many seem to think that cigarette paper is poisonous, while, as a matter of fact, it is absolutely pure. The paper contains no arsenic and cigarettes do not contain opium, as some seem to think. Inquire the price of opium per ounce, if you are able to obtain it, and it will readily be seen that its high cost prohibits its use in cigarettes, which are comparatively cheap.

Found 500 Cigarettes.

A resident of l'Ange Gardien found a tag in the woods near there last week which was redeemed at the office of The American Tobacco Co., Montreal, for a box of 500 Sweet Caporal cigarettes. On Labor Day night, at the illumination of Montmorency Falls, three balloons were liberated, each one of which contained a tag—one entitling the finder to a box of Sweet Caporal cigarettes, another to a box of Glorias, and the third to a box of Red Cross smoking tobacco. This is the first tag reported found. L'Ange Gardien is about seven miles from the spot at which the ascensions occurred.

A Remarkable Exhibition.

A LARGE number of people have visited the shop of Mr. P. Roy, 1921 St. Catherine street, just west of St. Lawrence street, Montreal, to see a notable display there. On exhibition was the box in which Hardy, the famous tight-wire performer was encased when he walked across the Montmorency Falls. The box is three feet by four feet and a half. The holes show where his arms came through and the lookout hole is where the intrepid acrobat gazed out on the great landscape and saw the yawning abyss and mighty torrent over which he was walking. The box was an exact representation of a package of Sweet Caporal cigarettes. Tastefully arranged about the box in Mr. Roy's window are frames containing photos of the event. There is the vast concourse of people on the bridge, headed by the brass band. The mighty gathering looking at the daring feat, the cheering multitude welcoming Hardy after he had accomplished it. The wire upon which Hardy walked was four hundred and sixty feet in length and three hundred and thirty-five feet above the water. From eighteen to twenty thousand people witnessed the startling performance which, it may be mentioned, was one of the original and remarkable advertising devices of The American Tobacco Co., the manufacturers of "Sweet Caps." Mr. Roy's cleverly arranged window shows a background of Sweet Caps, and few window decorations on the street were examined with more interest than that which so well illustrates one of the most daring feats since the days of Blondin, the crossing over the Montmorency Falls on a wire, by a man encased in a box.

Crossing Montmorency Falls on a Wire.

"Honors have come to men,
My juniors at the Bar;
No matter—I can wait,
So I have my cigar.

"Ambition frets me not,
A cab or glory's car
Are just the same to me,
So I have my cigar.

"I worship no vain gods,
But serve the household Lar;
I'm sure to be at home,
So I have my cigar.

"I do not seek for fame,
A General with a scar;
A Private let me be,
So I have my cigar."

Thos. Hood.

Failed to Smoke Her Out.

A company of Edinburgh students were starting for Glasgow on a football excursion and meant to have a railway carriage to themselves. At the last moment, however, just as the train was starting, in hastened an old woman. One of the young fellows, thinking to get rid of her easily, remarked, "My good woman, this is a smoking carriage!" "Well, well," answered the woman, "never mind, I'll mak' it dae"—and she took a seat. As the train started the word was passed round, "Smoke her out." All the windows were closed accordingly, and every student produced a pipe, and soon the car was filled with a dense cloud of tobacco smoke. So foul became the air that at least one of the boys began to feel faint. As he took his pipe from his mouth and settled back in his seat the old woman leaned forward. "If ye are dune, sir," she said, in wheedling tone, "would ye kindly gie me a bit draw? I came awa' in sic a haste I forgot mine!"

Whiffs.

Horrocks, the Toronto wholesale tobacconist, has recently made several large shipments of the Ronto cigar to Manitoba and British Columbia.

The Steele Co., Scott street, Toronto, have received several new consignments of pipes during the past week. Their stock is now very complete and calls for the early attention of the grocery trade.

DEPARTMENT OF ADVERTISING SUGGESTION AND CRITICISM

Edited by
W. Arthur Lydiatt,
TORONTO.

NOTE—Herein are discussed the principles and practice of advertising. Subscribers are invited to send Mr. Lydiatt specimens of their newspaper and other advertising, for the purpose of review in this department. Address care of Department of Advertising, THE CANADIAN GROCER.

The Time to Advertise is When You Want More Business.

IN a recent issue of The Chicago Sunday Tribune appears an interesting article on the psychology of advertising by Prof. Walter D. Scott, of the Northwestern University, who for years has been studying the leading advertising mediums, both periodical and daily newspapers, for Mahin's Magazine, a Chicago advertising journal.

He has conducted any number of experiments in order to determine the effect of various styles of ad. on the human mind, and his deductions as they have appeared in Mahin's Magazine have been particularly interesting, instructive and valuable.

Summing up his opinions, formed during his exhaustive study of the subject, he says:

Successful advertising is a form of hypnotism.

All men are naturally obedient.

Use the form of great command.

Make the ad. contrast with its environment.

Place the ad. near what will give it a pleasant impression.

Place the characteristic feature first.

Repeat the essential mark at every reappearance of the ad.

Have the illustration—or headline—represent what the ad. is, and not what it is not.

"It is assumed," Prof. Scott says, "that advertising efforts have a relation to psychology because psychology is the study of the minds of the people whom the advertiser seeks to influence. The advertiser's entire effort is to influence the minds of customers, and psychology teaches him how to do it.

"Advertising is a serious thing with the business men of to-day. It is estimated that the business men of the United States are spending $6,000,000,000 a year on advertising. What the advertiser is after is to learn the customer's wants, what will catch the attention, what will impress itself upon his mind and lead him to buy.

"He wants to know the minds of his customers.

"The theory of advertising is nothing but a stubborn and systematic attempt to understand and explain the workings of the minds of these very persons.

"Among the first requirements for the successful advertisement is that it make the least possible demand upon the intelligence of the reader. It must be simple, clear, direct, and therefore easily understood. It must at once attract attention.

"To do this it must be either a new thing attractively presented or an old thing presented in a novel manner.

"Direct command is the most effective form of advertising.

"'Try Ford's Pepsin' is a much better form of advertising than 'Ford's Pepsin is Excellent,' or 'Nothing better than Ford's Pepsin.'

"This is because people are naturally obedient. They are influenced unconsciously by suggestion. Unless their attention is called to the fact that they are following the will of another, they will, without realizing it, do as they are told because it saves them the trouble of thinking for themselves."

Another psychological principle which lies at the foundation of successful advertising is this: We think in terms of things. That is, men are for the most part not given to abstract thinking. Concrete forms, images of taste, smell, sight, hearing or touch form the coin of thought. The more concrete an advertisement is, therefore, the better advertisement it is.

It is here that the illustration is of importance. The function of illustration in advertising is two-fold—it must attract attention; it must aid perception.

Text and illustration must combine to emphasize by concrete symbols the important features of the thing advertised. If a piano is being advertised, pleasant sounds should be suggested. If it's candy, the mouth should be made to water. A pair of shoes should be made to impress one not only with their style, durability and cheapness, but also with their comfort.

As an example of the importance of suiting the character of the image suggested to the thing advertised, take the recent advertisement of a piano firm. There is nothing in the advertisement which points directly and peculiarly to pianos. Substitute the word "incubator" for the word "piano" in the advertisement and it is quite as intelligible, and reads as follows:

> "Ticknor Incubators.
> "If any one offers you a 'just as good' incubator at a lower price than the Ticknor costs, buy it, but be sure that it is 'just as good.' A reputation for reliable goods is better thaa a reputation for low prices. Our prices must be right, however, or there would not be to-day more than 76,000 Ticknor incubators in use."

There is nothing about sound in the whole advertisement, nothing suggestive of pianos or of this piano in particular.

Hardly second in importance is the position, or environment, in which the advertisement is placed. To make an impression the advertiser makes the generalization that it is necessary to look well to the make-up of the page upon which his advertisement is to appear.

Don't let the health food advertisement impinge upon the death column.

Don't let the advertisement of some "get rich quick" concern, that will arouse suspicion in the mind, appear next to the "ad" of the old reliable firm, or the latter will suffer.

Colors are important. Red is better than violet. Black letters on white are better than white letters on black.

In spite of the enormous increase in the amount of money spent in advertising during the past five years it is safe to say that every month sees a large increase in the intelligence shown in the expenditure of the money and a proportionate increase in the value of the returns.

In his investigations Prof. Scott studied 4,000 magazines and periodicals, examined 25,000 newspapers, read 75,000 letters, collated all the advertisements ever published by the leading magazines. He spent 500 hours on a single line of ads.

These figures give some idea of the amount of work done, and add strength to the arguments and conclusions he sets forth. Lots of people have thought that advertising was too practical a thing to be aided by psychological study and academic theorizing. When, however, Prof. Scott comes forward with some hard-headed sensible conclusions as to the form and contents ads. should have in order to be most effective — when these conclusions are based on such a vast amount of study and experimenting, the psychological side of advertising becomes important to those of us who spend any considerable amount of money and effort in influencing the minds of the people.

It is interesting to note, for instance, that a suggestion by direct command, as "Use or Try Smith's Soap" has been found to be more effective than a simple passive statement, such as "Smith's Soap is Best." Since Prof. Scott started his experiments several large advertisers have adopted his suggestion in this connection and proven his conclusion a correct one. To know that this direct command form of advertising is best, is of practical value to all of us, as one of the troubles we have had to contend with in doing effective advertising is the uncertainty of it. Anything then that will inform us so that we may be more certain of the possible results from our advertising, helps to make advertising a better investment. We have had no sure way of knowing what would best attain our end—this conclusion ought to help us considerably.

Prof. Scott hasn't solved the problem of human nature yet, but he has found ont a good many things which if we knew we could apply to our business with advantage. Medical science is more or less uncertain, too, but enough is known to render the guesses which medicine men make of practical value in a large proportion of cases.

It is iustructive to learn that all men are lazy. If we are to interest them we must make our ads. simple and plain so that no effort will be needed on their part to comprehend and become interested in what we say.

It is encouraging likewise to learn that it is the nature of men to obey. If we can convey our wishes to them without arousing their suspicions or combativeness we can lead them to do what we wish. Prof. Scott does not point it out, but this is a great argument for calm, common-sense, reasonable style of advertising, against the circus style, the exaggerating, impossible statements which must necessarily arouse suspicion and show the reader at once that he is being experimented with or that an endeavor is being made to fool him or lead him.

A fine, common-sense lesson which Prof. Scott learns from his studies is that men are attracted more readily by concrete statements than by abstract ones. This is an argument, therefore, for illustrations in ads. when they can be afforded, and also for specific incidents and examples, rather than grenalizing about our great bargains, the wonderful growth of our business, our desires to do business on the square, our great solicitude for our customers' welfare, our "finest in town" arguments, and so on. Think of the hundreds of merchants who sin against this rule every day.

Better read again this brief summary of what Prof. Scott has learned about advertising and its effects from actual investigation and test. Think it over a few times, practice his precepts, and get value out of his exhaustive study in the art of advertising.

OPENING OF A BRANCH TEA HOUSE.

THE consumption of the teas of India and Ceylon, both in Canada and the United States, has grown during the last decade to such proportions that many of the London and Eastern tea houses have found it expedient to pay steady and close attention to the requirements of the Trans-Atlantic markets, and agencies have been established in nearly all the larger cities on this side. This action on the part of the English tea houses is an indication of the value placed on the Canadian and United States trade by the more progressive English houses and the planters of India and Ceylon. When it is considered that of the 100,000,000 lbs. of tea imported into America last year 25,000,000 was produced by India and Ceylon, it is not to be wondered that London, Calcutta and Colombo are giving thought and consideration to this trade, and that branch houses are being established in the larger distributing centres. Of those tea merchants who have studied and watched this particular trade the house of Harrisons & Crosfield, London, and its Eastern branches, Crosfield, Lampard & Co., Colombo, and Lampard, Clark & Co., Calcutta, have taken a step which will undoubtedly be of great moment, not only to their respective houses but to the tea trade of Canada and the United States as well. Mr. A. Lampard, of the London house, some few months ago visited this country and the United States, and made a thorough canvass of the various tea distributing centres of the continent. His investigations and experience led to the opening in Montreal of a branch house under the name of Crosfield, Lampard, Clark & Co., and offices and sample rooms were opened in the Coristine Building. Mr. A. J. Williams, who was for many years on the London tea market, has been appointed general manager for North America. Mr. Williams is an experienced and expert tea man and his appointment is a tribute to his ability. Associated with Mr. Williams is Mr. A. Suter, who has also passed through the London tea market with many years experience. It is the intention of the firm to branch out and develop the trade in Indian and Ceylon teas, and agencies will be opened in the larger American cities as the trade requires. Owing to the growth of the trade in Indian and Ceylon teas in the United States, which trade, rapidly as it has developed in the past few years, is but in its infancy, it will no doubt be found necessary to open up further agencies. It will be the province of Mr. Williams to cultivate and stimulate the demand for Indian and Ceylon green teas in this market and to supply the grade of tea suitable for same.

A representative of THE GROCER visited the offices and sample rooms this last week, and through the courtesy of Mr. Williams a description of same was furnished him. The sample room is large, airy and well-lighted, with every modern convenience for tea sampling and drawing, well and systematically arranged shelves, canisters, tea drawers and tasting counters, and desks and tables for the clerks and typewriters. The private office is also fitted up conveniently and is on a smaller scale a duplicate of the larger one, so far as it contains a tea-sampling counter and appliances. All the supplies in connection with the sampling outfits were secured in London, and everything is of the latest and most convenient types. Counters, desks, and tables are of finely-polished quartered oak, and it is indeed one of the best equipped and handsomest tea sampling rooms on the continent. Mr. Willians is to be congratulated on having secured such splendidly equipped offices. The location is right in the centre of the tea and wholesale grocery trade of Montreal, and that city is favored in being selected as the headquarters for the American branch of such an old and well-established tea house as Harrisons & Crosfield. THE GROCER is pleased to find another evidence of the importance of Canada in the eyes of its English friends in the establishment of such an important branch house in this country.

Wasting Your Energies ?

If it pays to push an article, it pays to push it to some purpose and to push more with an object of gaining permanent trade than of temporary profit. If the demand for any article stops when you stop pushing it 95 per cent. of your energy has been wasted.

You waste no energy whatever in advocating the sale of the "Griffin" Brand of Dried Fruits and the "Thistle" Brand of Canned Fish, because people who buy them once will buy them again and again. Briefly, the intrinsic merit of both these articles backs up the highest praise you can give them.

"Griffin" Brand Dried Fruits.

Seedless Raisins and Prunes. Dried Apricots Peaches and Pears in all their original goodness. A revelation to the grocer who has been buying other Brands.

Selected with the greatest care and shipped in original boxes right from the Vineyards and Orchards on the Pacific Coast.

Look for the "Griffin" trade mark before you buy.

"Thistle" Brand Canned Fish.

Canned Haddies, Kippered Herring and Herring and Tomato Sauce. Selected, cured and packed by Captain Austin of The Thistle Canning Co., Little River, N. S.

Absolutely clean, rich, delicate, appetizing. Prepared right at the water side where they are caught. The brand of highest quality and so recognized the world over.

Subjects Being Discussed at Ottawa

Written for The Canadian Grocer by a Member of Parliament

CANADA is undoubtedly a fruitful country, and yet Goldwin Smith observed with truth that we produced here more politics than any other product per acre. It is said, give a Kentuckian a plug of tobacco to chew, a biscuit box to sit on, and a political opponent to argue with, and he is provided for for a whole day at least. From this we must take it that political interest is a marked characteristic of our race wherever found, and it will be found no less powerfully developed in the well-educated than in their less learned fellows.

The proof of this last assertion was once more given when, on Wednesday, Oct. 7th, Mr. Talbot, of Bellechasse, continued the revelations begun by Mr. Marcil, of Bagot, with regard to the G.T.P. petitions referred to in our last issue. He was cheered by his fellow Liberal members for making disclosures of conduct so disgraceful that silence would have been in better taste, silence that would undoubtedly have prevailed in affairs of private life, but which was broken because of the heat of party feeling, partisans seeing an advantage for themselves, and rejoicing in that rather than sorrowing in the disgrace to our political life as carried on apparently with organized effort and strong financial backing.

Mr. Talbot said in part: "Wholesale forgery has been committed by over zealous partisans, urged by unscrupulous but important newspapers of Montreal. These petitions contain the names of mere boys, names of people who live in the United States, names of people who have been dead for years, names of people who ought to be in lunatic asylums, names of people who, owing to their advanced age, are absolutely irresponsible, names of people who knew nothing of these petitions, and of people who when asked to sign absolutely refused."

Can anything more outrageous well be conceived? The right to petition Parliament is one of the most ancient and valued recognized by the British Constitution. True, owing to abuses in the past much more venial than those herein charged, the importance of petitions has been greatly minimized, but still they have retained no mean place in our constitutional machinery. If the perpetrators of such outrages as these are allowed to remain outside the prison walls, petitions in the future will be simply scoffed at, and impudent effrontery in public life encouraged. Nor is this the only aspect of the case. Even to-day it is difficult very often to induce our best citizens to enter political life, because of the unsavoriness of its surroundings—its intrigues, its trickiness, sometimes its foul corruption and dishonesty. In the United States this has become the rule, fortunately with us so far at least it is the exception. If such practices as these are to continue, we will in turn find ourselves in the same position as the United States—politics entirely given over to "professionals," with all that such "professionalism" implies.

In this particular case consider for a moment the hard place in which Mr. Borden, Mr. Clarke, Col. Tisdale, Mr. Brock and a score of other Conservative members find themselves. These men are the soul of honor, and yet these petitions are presented to check a scheme which they are opposing, and for them they will be in a measure held responsible, not responsible exactly, the members who actually presented the forged petitions will have to bear that, but associated with them, which is surely bad enough. Such tactics in a country like Canada, which has still that valuable asset, a public conscience, invariably come back on the heads of those who employ them, so that even from the standpoint of party expediency they are a miserable failure, and the charge of stupidity must be added to that of dishonesty.

We have referred to the fact that the Liberal members cheered Mr. Talbot, and we have reflected on their good taste for doing so. We credited this mistake on their part to the strength of party feeling, which we said was no less strong in the better educated than in the masses. Speaking of the latter, the writer was once present at a political meeting where one of the speakers assured his audience, which was largely made up of political opponents, that the Government which he was supporting had a surplus of several millions of dollars, and was in a most prosperous way financially. This announcement was received in silence, as was his assertion of great undeveloped natural resources; but when the rival orator assured the very same people that they had been plunged deeply into debt by the Government in question, and that their undeveloped resources were merely in the imagination and not in existence, this dismal picture was cheered with much apparent satisfaction and enthusiasm.

Of course, the feature of the week has been the passing of the Supplementary Estimates and the bringing down of the railway subsidies. The Conservatives say that the large amount of each is a sure sign of an approaching general election, while the Liberals do not admit the soft impeachment, but speak of the very rapid development of the country and the large outlay necessary to provide facilities for new neighborhoods and the increasing wants of old ones.

However this may be, the Conservatives seem really to expect an appeal to the country before another session of Parliament, and many, though not all the Liberals, are of the same opinion. Should it come, the chances are that a Winter campaign with all its attendant hardships would be thrust upon the poor politicians. Endless drives along the side lines through mud, through snow banks, in all sorts of inclement weather, and then an election day at last, upon which many voters, taking Canada as a whole, would necessarily be weather-bound, introducing still another element of chance into that conflict which Sir John classed with a horse race for the uncertainty of its issue.

The older members dread the prospect exceedingly. To a man who has already lived the three score years and ten and who is now drawing on the bounty of nature, so to speak, for his continued existence, a Winter campaign is a risk for which the life insurance companies should charge an extra premium as much as for active service in war, or a visit to a country of unhealthy climate. Fancy the school-house meeting; small room with a stove burning furiously, with a crowd of eager men, with a coal-oil lamp or so, and with a final heat of somewhere from 85 to 95. In this a man has to speak for an hour or two, and speaking warms the blood of the speaker at least, even if it fails to warm also, as it is intended to do, the blood of the listener. Then at last the meeting is over, and, thoroughly heated through, the unfortunate "spell-binder" betakes him to his cutter and drives perhaps ten or twelve miles through the bitter cold of a mid-winter night—result, pneumonia, with an even-up chance for life or death. Let the prosperous merchant who cons these pages think twice before he allows himself to be tempted from the calm and comfort of successful commercial life into the heart-burnings and hardships of politics, deceived by their glamor, coaxed

But to return to the supplementary estimates. Of course, the main expenditure is in connection with public works. Each little community presses for this, that or the other expenditure which, by petition or deputation, it asserts, is absolutely necessary and justifiable. Of course, say these special pleaders, we are against a large expenditure, we are economists of the most pronounced character, but we only ask $10,000, and, you see, in our case it is in the general interest of Canada that so prosperous a community should receive the government aid necessary to its proper development. And so, perhaps with a whispered word as to political results (this last not the least potent with any government), the $10,000, small sum that it is, is promised. But what a surprise! When this $10,000 is added to the other ten thousands promised throughout this great, big land of ours, we are startled by a total of millions —the sum which confronts us now.

There is no escaping the conclusion that in a young country, rapidly developing, with numerous requirements, expenditure will be large under any government, always provided times are prosperous and the revenue abundant. The Opposition of the day invariably enters solemn protests against the "extravagance" of the Government, as evidenced by the "enormous" total, and just as invariably refrains from challenging by a recorded vote any particular expenditure as it comes up in committee for fear of losing political prestige in the community which is seeking the grant.

In the nature of these grants this session there is nothing at all unusual—public buildings, piers, wharfs, light houses, etc., the same old things, but in larger measure. True, poor Captain Bernier has tried to introduce a new element in getting a grant for a Canadian expedition to discover the North Pole. But the captain has met with a reception to which the icy blast of the Arctic Circle would seem but a Summer zephyr. He forgot in his calculations that there is as yet no vote to be conciliated in that far away quarter of Canada, so his application must be pressed some other day. We have not time to consider it just now.

In saying that this year's vote is about the same as usual, we must except the vote on the militia, which has at last assumed fair proportions. When at the Colonial Conference in 1902, the Canadian representatives were pressed by the British Ministers to endorse a scheme by which a considerable force would be organized in the colonies for Imperial service, subject to the control of the British Government in case of war, the colonies, headed by Canada, objected to this scheme as a surrender in a measure of the powers of self-government. We will agree, said they, to improve our own defensive forces, and to this end will gladly receive the advice of experienced Imperial officers, but the disposition of the force must be ours, in war as in peace.

Lord Dundonald certainly ranks as "an experienced Imperial officer," and he has been most busily engaged since his arrival in Canada in formulating with the Minister of Militia a scheme for militia betterment. Thursday's session was entirely occupied with an exposition by the Minister of this scheme, with the criticisms called forth from other members of the House, and in voting the money necessary to make a beginning of it. While at present we have rather less than 40,000 stand of arms, with a requirement of not less than one hundred thousand, under the plan adopted, and as a rifle costs twenty-five dollars, it will at once be apparent that a very considerable sum of money is necessary to put matters on a better basis. Then there is the artillery, both field and garrison, for which more and newer guns are required, to say nothing of clothing and other military stores. For all these purposes a vote of $1,300,000 was asked, and it speaks well for the general acceptability of the measure that not one voice was raised against it, while the only complaints heard were from some honorable gentlemen who wanted a somewhat larger vote in order that the pay of the militia might be increased from its present rate of fifty cents a day to something nearer the current wage in other employment.

Lord Dundonald's plan contemplates a force of one hundred thousand men, of whom sixty thousand will be liable for active service only, with no compulsion to attend camps of instruction, but with a rifle for each man and a fair measure of instruction in its use. Of the remaining forty thousand all the city corps will drill each year at headquarters as is the present custom, and of the country regiments about half the strength will be called out for training.

CANADA'S CONSUMPTION OF TEA.

A correspondent writes to THE GROCER asking us to publish the consumption of tea per head in Canada and, if possible, by provinces. The statistics by provinces are not available, but by reference to the Trade and Navigation Returns for the last fiscal year the following interesting information has been gleaned :

	Lbs.
Tea imported under free list	18,008,331
Tea imported dutiable	611,776
Total imported	18.620,107
Total exported	1,859,820
Net tea consumed in Canada	16,760,287

Population of Canada by last census, 5,338,883.

Average consumption of tea per head in Canada for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1903, 3.139 lbs.

and Cold Storage News.

Government Creameries in N. W. T.

PROFESSOR J. A. RUDDICK, assistant dairy commissioner for the Dominion Government, in conversation with a representative of a Winnipeg paper recently, had the following to say of the dairy interests in the Northwest :

"On October 1 the output of the Northwest creameries exceeded that of last year by 100,000 lb. The increase has been mainly in Alberta. This year all our butter has gone to western markets or to the Orient. We have not exported any to the British markets, whereas last year we exported five carloads. The exhibit of dairy products at the Japanese fair at Osaka was an excellent advertisement and has already borne fruit ; we have two customers in that country as direct results of that exhibition. The trade in butter for the Orient is for the European resident there and not for the natives, and we have hope of working up quite an extended trade with warships touching at Nagasaki for coal. It is a good thing that this trade with the Orient has been opened up by the Government creameries as it requires some financing, and could scarcely be handled so well by private enterprise ; as it is necessary to have every facility for studying the market and also to be in a position to ship at once on receipt of a cablegram. Take the trade with the warships ; they sometimes stay two weeks at this coaling station and in that time it would be possible to get a supply of fresh butter to them from the coast. Part of the butter, especially in the Summer months, went forward in tins, but we are also shipping a considerable quantity in boxes of assorted sizes and it stands the journey very well and has been reported in very good condition on arrival. The Yukon trade is increasing and we have shipped to that point in boxes also.

"We are finding the plan of collecting the farmers' eggs and holding them for storage an excellent one. It worked well in the first season and has improved ever since ; but we find the greatest improvement in the eggs this year. Our plan is as follows : Each creamery patron has a number and this number we require him to mark in pencil on the eggs. No driver will accept the eggs without the number being on. These eggs are held at the creamery for a short time and then sent to the storage at Calgary. There all the eggs are examined and classified by an expert who has the egg lists in front of him and every farmer is credited with the exact number of each classification of eggs he has sent. We advance 15c. per dozen on the eggs at the time they are received and later the farmer gets the balance, according to classification. This year the average price to the farmer will be just about 20c. per dozen for the season, and we will have handled about 30,000 dozen. Last year we handled 21,000 dozen and the town of Calgary consumed the whole lot. We find that first-class eggs greatly increase the consumption, and it will be some time before this trade could possibly be crowded, because there is a market in the Kootenay and an ever-growing market in the Northwest Territories."

Frankfort Sausages.

The following directions for making the well-known "Frankforts" is given by The Butchers' Advocate : Take 25 lb. of pork, from very young, light pigs. The meat may be taken from the forelegs, the neck or the breast, and before weighing should be freed from all bones and outside skin, and then hung up to cool. The proportion should be two parts lean to one part of fat. Mince the pork into pieces about the size of a hazelnut, add ¾ lb. of salt, ¾ oz. of white Singapore pepper, ½ oz. nutmeg, and mince the whole, turning it often and continually cleaning the knives, adding a quart of water gradually while mincing. If very stiff, more water may be added. Then mince the mass into pieces the size of barley grains, and divide it all into chunks of the size required for each sausage, and throw them from hand to hand two or three times without kneading at all. Then prepare the filling machines, taking care always to fill the cylinder very full of meat, so as to leave no room for air. Put the meat into narrow pig skins, filling them very full, then turn each end up and tie the two ends together in pairs, weighing from four to five in every pound. Hang the sausages on clean smoking sticks and let them dry for five or six hours, then hang them pretty high up in the smoke house. Smoke with fresh oak, with an equal temperature of 72 to 78 degrees. Let them hang until they have a red-yellow color, which will be in about 10 hours.

Provisions in Trinidad.

Gordon Grant & Co.'s commercial review, dated September 10, Port of Spain, Trinidad, reports :

All hog products are in supply with a very small business passing. For ribs, loins, tails there is some inquiry, but short-cut pork and heads are in overstock and barely moving. Family beef is still much in excess of actual requirements, and there is not likely to be any improvement in values for some time. There is but a limited demand for Morlaix butter, which continues to be offered at $11 for old and $11.50 to $11.75 for new crop. Supplies of both are still largely in excess of requirements. Cheese is almost unsalable, the recent heavy arrivals, principally from Canada, having glutted the market.

English Potted Cheese.

A Windsor despatch announces that Mr. E. Harris, of Montreal, has been in that city looking for a suitable location for a wholesale cheese establishment. It is said to be Mr. Harris' object to make Windsor the headquarters for supplying Ontario with potted cheese manufactured in England.

New York's Meat Bill.

New York is the greatest meat-eating centre of the country, if not of the world, says The New York Times. There are in packing houses, butchers' shops and cold storage rooms about 3,500,000 lb. of beef on the average all the time, with 6,000,000 lb. of pork and 500,000 lb. of mutton and lamb. Roughly speaking, the city eats about 20,000,000 lb. of meat a week. A day's supply of pork averages 2,000,000 lb. and of lamb and mutton 250,000 lb. Most of this meat is killed and dressed in the West and shipped in refrigerator cars. The modern movement to make New York's meat free from all

THE PROVISION MARKETS.

Toronto.

The provision market is showing a firm tone. Medium hams are very scarce, and the same may be said of backs. The brisk trade in fresh loins is said to be the cause of the shortage in loins. Lard is off slightly since last week, and dressed hogs have shown a decided decline in value. Other prices are maintained without change. We quote:

CHEESE.

The market is again easier this week, as shown by quotations on cheese boards The recent inflation was not warranted by the condition of the market, and with the present reduction prices have probably reached their normal level, although a cable on Tuesday reported a further decline of a shilling on the English market. It might be of interest to note that for the week ending Oct. 5 the exports of Canadian cheese from Montreal and Portland totalled 108,877 boxes as against 26,264 boxes for the corresponding week last year. We quote :

Cheese, large	0 11½	0 11¾
" twins	0 12	0 12¼

Montreal.

EGGS.

There is nothing special to add to our report of last week. There has been active demand throughout the week for eggs of all kinds and the local market has been very firm throughout. Prices cannot be said to be higher although the market is in the sellers' favor. The small quantity of fresh eggs now offering, and the almost certainty of a constantly increasing demand, makes holders very independent. Advices from England are of a firm tendency, which also has its effect upon the local market. Pickled eggs now on the local market are quoted at 18 to 19c. For strictly new laid eggs as high as 21 to 22c. has been obtained. Selected stock is quoted at 20c., while for the ordinary common stock the price is 18c.

BUTTER

The market continues steady, although concessions on the part of sellers are said to be obtainable from last week's quotations, which we give again this issue. Factory men report that the make is falling off very rapidly. If receipts continue to decline there will not be much more butter coming forward than will be equired for the local trade. In any case the present prices are said largely to be due to local jobbers buying for their current trade, rather than for any export demand. The U. S. prices for creamery are considerably lower than are the Canadian and importers have been buying U. S. creamery in preference to the Canadian on account of the difference. Some Eastern Township creamery is quoted at 22c.; August butters are quoted at 20 to 21c.; held 19 to 19½.

CHEESE.

During the past two weeks the market has sagged from 1 to 1½c., and even at the lower prices the export demand is light, as is usually the case on a declining market. Recent rains will no doubt help pastures and sustain the present rate of production. Prices locally in a jobbing way are 11½ to 12c.

Provision Notes.

Sir Thomas Lipton is said to have disposed of his whole packing house interests in Chicago to a combine composed of rival packers, who will either completely change the management of the concern or close it down altogether.

A SHREDDED WHEAT LUNCHEON.

A complimentary luncheon was tendered the Toronto Press Monday noon by The Natural Food Co., at their offices, 32 Church street, Toronto. Manager Hewett, with radiant geniality, presided over a daintily spread board, and the men of the press were surprised and delighted at the various appetizing ways in which Shredded Wheat Biscuits and Triscuits could be served.

The menu called for tomato soup and meat sandwiches, oyster pates and cheese points, fruit salad dressing, olives, cafe noir and salted nuts, Shredded Wheat Biscuits or Triscuits forming the base o most of the dishes.

At the conclusion of the luncheon Mr. Humble, Toronto representative of La Presse, expressed the appreciation of the guests in a most eloquent and finished manner.

Among those present were : Messrs. J. A. Cooper, of The Canadian Magazine ; Nicholson, of The Globe ; English, of The Telegram ; Aikens, of The Star ; Humble, of La Presse ; Harris, of Saturday Night ; Anger, of The Canadian Churchman, and Gillies, of THE CANADIAN GROCER.

The luncheon was prepared by Misses Fluker and Reynolds, graduates of the Oread Institute of Domestic Science at Worcester, Mass., who have been attached to the company's staff. The services of these young ladies, together with refreshments, are placed at the disposal of churches and mistresses of households contemplating giving teas.

This is the third in a series of luncheons given by The Natural Food Co., who have thus hit on a most convincing manner of demonstrating the merits and possibilities of their products.

TEA REPORTS.

William James & Henry Thompson, writing from London, October 1, say : Reports of bad flushing weather continue from Ceylon, and the shipments thence for September, 5,500,000, make the reduction since June 1 over 5,000,000 in supplies available for the United Kingdom, or 7,000,000 for the nine months of this year.

INDIAN. — The demand noticed last week has been maintained, the buying being well spread over the trade both at home and abroad. There has been a general improvement in values of good tippy brokens, showing advance of 1 to 2d. on prices ruling early this month. Teas for price are lower. Importers feel statistical position hardly justifies the decline. Advices from Calcutta report a rather easier tendency.

CEYLON.—Offerings have been smallest for some time, and met with keen competition for nearly all grades, common qualities forming the exception, but even these were in the main steady.

CHINA. — Little change to report ; business has been on a reduced scale, but prices are quite maintained for all common to fair blacks from 4½ to 6d. per lb.

McMeekin & Co.'s notes for the month of September are in part:

INDIAN.—Tone of market has at no time during month been very active except for specially good teas, buyers being unwilling to go into stock. The average sale price for the month, however, was 8d. per lb., against 7½d. per lb. for the corresponding month last year.

CEYLON.—A moderate improvement in quality; at the same time a gradual diminution in the volume of the offerings. The average of public sale prices for the month was 7¼d. per lb., as against 6½d. for the corresponding month last year.

THE SALT SITUATION.

Editor CANADIAN GROCER:

Sir,—Referring to article in a recent issue of "The Canadian Grocer" headed "The Salt Situation," I beg to say that this company is neither directly nor indirectly connected with any other salt manufacturer, and is not a member of what your correspondent terms a "combine," therefore I cannot speak of anyone but ourselves.

Unfortunately we have not been able to supply our customers promptly, but the cause is far beyond our control. We were idle for five weeks, as it was impossible to get fuel delivered, although purchased at more than three times the ordinary cost; in addition, extensive alterations and additions, which should have been completed last May, are just nearing completion now, owing to the fact that iron and copper could not be procured by the contractor early enough to enable him to finish the work at time specified. As these alterations interfered with the existing plant, our output was reduced by more than a third, hence the delay complained of.

Is it fair we should be punished for the failure of the mines and railways to deliver fuel to enable us to make salt, or to enable foundrymen to make castings, or coppersmiths cast copper?

We are anxious to make shipments without any delay, and regret the inconvenience caused, but trust in a short time our capacity will be large enough to meet any demand which may be made upon it.

Your obedient servant,
E. G. Henderson, Manager.

SCOTCH AND IRISH WHISKY.

A VISITOR to the Toronto office of THE GROCER this week was Mr. J. C. MacLean, of Mitchell Bros. Co. and Mitchell & Co., Limited, distillers, of Glasgow and Dublin. Mr. MacLean landed in New York off the Campania, September 12, and has spent the intervening time in calling on the trade of New York, Boston, Montreal and Toronto, having experienced, as he quoted from an American friend he had met, "the time of his life" in Toronto. He was accompanied by Mr. J. H. Calvert, the company's representative for Toronto and West.

The Canadian people, like the Americans, says Mr. MacLean, in taking their whisky high-balls or like concoctions have not cultivated the discriminating taste which is only achieved by the connoisseur who takes his whisky neat. He was, however, very much taken with our country, and reported that Mitchell's whisky, both Scotch and Irish, was meeting with a very satisfactory demand, being found at all the best places. There was a good deal of Scotch whisky used in Canada, and he was of the opinion that the demand for higher-class goods was growing here.

In Scotch, Mr. MacLean mentioned Heather Dew, Extra Specially Cured, and Mitchell's Finest Old Scotch; and in Irish Mitchell's Cruiskeen Lawn and Special Old Irish as being of the right sort.

From Toronto Mr. MacLean left for Niagara Falls, and will take in Buffalo, Detroit and Chicago and most of the large American cities as far west as St. Louis.

He reports very encouraging results from his trip up to date.

PREFERENTIAL TRADE.

THE papers have been busy since last week with the discussion of Mr. Chamberlain's proposals for a radical revision of the fiscal policy of Great Britain. The contest is growing in interest, and despite the tremendous inertia of settled opinion which he has to overcome Mr. Chamberlain seems to be arousing the most enthusiasm. The man with a positive aggressive policy always commands an admiration and arouses an enthusiasm which is denied to the critic, criticize he never so wisely. His policy, moreover, is one calculated to appeal most strongly to what in no disparaging sense may be called the imaginative class. The unimaginative, hard-headed, pseudo-practical man can see in the preferential proposals only a tax on food, which means dearer bread, which means a smaller loaf for the working man, and is unable to see that there are immediate compensating advantages, and that the encouragement thus given to the production of food in the Colonies would soon enable the latter to produce sufficient quantities of grain to throw the whole burden of the tax on the foreigner.

However much free trade has done for Britain, and it is folly to dispute its benefits, the fact that all the other great powers have adopted protection puts a different aspect on the case. The mere assumption of retaliatory powers would, it should appear, bring about a modification of many of the more outrageous tariff thrusts which have been aimed at Britain by her commercial rivals. Of necessity raw materials must be free if the little island is to remain the workshop of the world, and the by no means indefensible inclusion of foodstuffs among raw materials must still further thicken the mist which is gathering round the perplexed Briton.

In the general wrack of political and economic faiths it would not be surprising should old John Bull turn from the brain-fatiguing crowd of political tonguesters, philosophic golfers and lone furrow orators to the one man who has a great definite programme, and confide his political destiny to the tender mercies of the late Colonial Secretary.

The comments of the British press have continued to be of the same contradictory nature indicated in our last issue. The weakest point in Mr. Chamberlain's plan, as pointed out by THE GROCER last week, was the assumption or argument, as Sir Wilfrid Laurier euphuistically termed it, that the colonies would "arrange their tariffs in the future in order not to start industries in competition with those already in existence in the Mother Country." It is yet possible that this part of the speech may be capable, satisfactory explanation, although comments thereon by the British press would tend to confirm the interpretation put on it here.

In any event such an arrangement is altogether out of the question. We intend to manufacture in Canada everything for which a bountiful nature has equipped us. But we realize that there are many lines we are not in a position to produce ourselves, which we are already importing from foreign countries or which we shall shortly so import.

Along these lines, and they are neither few nor unimportant, must our trade with the Mother Country be developed. Upon these let us increase the preference if necessary, and raise the tariff walls against those countries which exclude our products. Thus can we benefit at once ourselves and the Motherland.

Upon these lines we are thoroughly convinced can be formulated a preferential trade arrangement that will meet the approval of all men of moderation.

DRUMMING UP TRADE.

ONE development of the grocery business that is attracting more attention every day from the most progressive grocers is the winning of new customers. In the cities the grocers have acquired a craftiness in this respect that is worthy of remark. Every reputable means of securing as customers the strangers who may come in for casual orders is adopted. Bargains may be advertised in such lines as flour or sugar or some other lines which will have to be delivered.

In the delivery the fine work is done. The delivery clerk is chosen by the shrewdest grocers with care. He need not be as neatly dressed as the clerk behind the counter. (The nature of his work prevents that). But he must be courteous and, if possible, a good talker. When he takes his parcel he makes a point of seeing the housekeeper if he can, and with his most engaging manner he asks if there is anything more she would like "brought over in a hurry?" If not, would she like him to call to-morrow, or some day later in the week? All attempts may fail; then he departs, but the number is remembered, and some day during the next week or so, when there is some particularly nice fruit on sale, he brings over a basket for her to see at her own home.

In some cases, in the majority of such cases, the customer is not secured, but the average of new customers gained in this way is sufficient to induce the grocer to continue it year in and year out.

Another habit of many city grocers which has, after years of trial, been acknowledged as profitable in every sense of the word is that of calling once, and in some cases twice, each week for orders, which are delivered the same afternoon or the following day. This "order trade" is considered by some of the largest grocers to be the most satisfactory they do. Customers who send their orders in that way give the bulk of their trade to one man, can thus be depended upon for a certain amount of business each week, and as they trust the grocer as to matters of price and quality, there is little trouble on that score if the grocer knows his business properly.

Methods similar to these have, of late, been adopted in several country towns. A few months ago an enterprising general merchant, after deciding that his grocery business was not what it should be, secured the services of a young man with experience and a full knowledge of the grocery trade. In addition to a liberal salary he was promised a commission on all business secured over and above the past year's total.

The young man canvassed the town thoroughly, from house to house, prepared a series of bargains which at little loss attracted much attention and brought many new buyers to the store. In two years the grocery business done by that firm more than doubled. The new business done at the grocery counter had its effect on all departments of the store, which has, in fact, been given a great impetus by the young man's methods. All over the country more and more attention is being paid by grocers to "drumming up trade." The prophecy is made by some observers that the grocery store of the future will consist of a reception room wherein customers may be seen once in a while, but that the great bulk of the orders will be taken in the kitchen or over the 'phone and that the chief part of the grocery store will be arranged for the most economical storage, packing and delivery of orders.

A FOOLISH ARGUMENT.

"THIS country," said Mr. Ritchie, "must guard against giving the United States any cause for resentment against Great Britain, which would be the case if their neighbors, the Canadians, were allowed to send their wheat into England at 2 or 3s. a quarter less than America could. America would certainly punish Canada."

The above cabled extract from the speech delivered by the ex-Chancellor of the Exchequer, explaining to his constituents the reasons for his resignation from the Balfour Government, has created much surprise and no little indignation in Canadian circles. Such a statement by a responsible British statesman incicates either a poverty of argument or a deplorable ignorance of the condition of affairs on the North American Continent. "Whom the gods would destroy, they first make mad," and it would seem that the gods have marked Mr. Ritchie for complete annihilation, or he would never have had the madness to give utterance to such nonsense. We greatly mistake the temper of the British people if such pusillanimous arguments have the effect upon them which Mr. Ritchie desires. In fact, it would seem that Mr. Ritchie's own constituents repudiated the argument at once, for, if reports be correct, the uproar that ensued threatened to break up the meeting. Unless the hitherto proud self-reliant spirit of Britain has undergone a complete transformation, Mr. Chamberlain must gladly welcome this foolish argument of his opponents.

It is not surprising if some Canadians are asking how it is that Mr. Ritchie was ever considered eligible to fill the high and important position which he has just resigned. There are so many things, which it is evident, he does not know, and which any Canadian school boy could tell him. Some school boy could tell him—for evidently he does not know it—that there is a Congress at Washington which legislates in what it believes to be the fiscal interests of the United States without any consideration of British opinion. A glance at Mr. Balfour's "Economic Notes on Insular Trade" would show him that the average duty on the principal articles of British export to the United States is 72 per cent. Some one should tell Mr. Ritchie that Uncle Sam gives a preference in his markets to the products of Porta Rica, and that Cuba will shortly have a preference in the American markets under the name of reciprocity. Surely, what the United States does, Great Britain is free to do without fear of giving offence. Far from being offended, it may be that Uncle Sam's vanity would be tickled, since imitation is the sincerest flattery. If the American people have any weakness, it is their susceptibility to flattery.

But "America would certainly punish Canada," says Mr. Ritchie. And how, forsooth, would America punish Canada? Surely not by a hostile tariff, for in that respect the United States Government have already done their worst. The addition of a few feet more to the already insuperable tariff wall with which they have hedged themselves about is a matter which we might well regard with profound indifference. In what other way can Uncle Sam punish Canada? It would seem from an explanation which Mr. Ritchie has issued to the press that he has taken seriously the vacuous vaporings of Andrew Carnegie with regard to the possible withdrawal of our bonding privileges. To that idle threat reference has already been made in these columns, and it is scarcely necessary again to refute what no one in Canada or the United States takes seriously and what it is doubtful if the multi-millionaire himself regards as a serious threat. Mr. Ritchie should remember that those bonding privileges are reciprocal, and that the United States stands to lose as much or more than Canada from their withdrawal. To quote a vulgar phrase, Uncle Sam is not likely to "cut off his own nose to spite his face." We are by no means dependent upon American ports or shipping for our access to English markets, and should the American Government take this unkind and foolish step we can survive it as we have survived McKinley and Dingley tariffs.

This fiscal battle must be fought out on its economic and political merits. Canadians are not asking Great Britain to alter her fiscal policy unless she is quite persuaded that it is to her own advantage to do so. Very properly, we think, the Canadian Government are observing a strict neutrality. But so foolish and misleading an argument as that advanced by Mr. Ritchie should not be allowed to pass without a protest from this side of the water.

AN INVITATION.

SUBSCRIBERS to THE GROCER who at any time are in Montreal or Toronto on our day of publication (Friday) are invited to call at our offices and secure a copy of the current week's issue. If on a purchasing trip a glance over its pages may put you in possession of information of very material importance. By no means infrequently do subscribers tell us of having made this or that profitable stroke through information derived from our market reports or from hints thrown out editorially. The grocer who does not keep a keen eye on the markets is not conducting his business intelligently, as the competition of the age demands that he should.

While this invitation is extended especially for the latter end of the week it is by no means confined to that time alone. Our subscribers are always welcome at any of our offices.

MANITOBA MARKET NOTES.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 12, 1903.

Professor J. A. Ruddick passed through Winnipeg on his way west last week, and give some very interesting information on the success of the Northwest Government creameries in opening up a trade in the Orient, referred to at length in the dairy and provision department of THE GROCER.

The creameries are nearly all closing this week, and in a short time it will be possible to give the figures showing the make of the season. From what can be gathered from dealers and buyers the make will be well in advance of last year. Just what the average price has been, it is impossible to say at present.

The indications are that the make of cheese has been smaller, and this, in face of an increasing demand. It is known for certain that five cars of Ontario cheese are already under order, and some of them in transit from the east.

Mr. Wright, who represented The MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co. on the manufacturers' excursion, is reported to have done no end of business in the West.

Many of the manufacturers realized for the first time, that if they only make things good enough there is always a market for them in the West.

The windows which secured first and second prize in the window-dressing competition will appear in the Special Number of THE CANADIAN GROCER, which is issued next week.

HINTS TO BUYERS.

Contributors are requested to send news only, not puffs of goods they handle, or the arrival of standard goods that everyone has in stock, or that they are offering goods at close figures, or that they have had an unusually large sale this season.

In store with S. J. Major, Ottawa, large shipment of Dubois, Frere & Cagnon brandies, in casks and bottles.

H. P. Eckardt & Co. are selling a good flavored cane sugar syrup in half-barrels at a low price.

S. J. Major, Ottawa, report arrival into stock of fine lines of new salmon, pink and red sockeye, "O-Wee-Kay-No" and "Lion" brand, also pink Alaska salmon. Buyers interested should find values by writing for quotations.

Rowat's pickles in stock with Laporte, Martin & Cie., are offered at taking prices. A full assortment of all grades is carried in stock.

H. P. Eckardt & Co. report a large business doing in Ubero Coffee.

Buyers open for new valencia and loose muscatel raisins are referred to Laporte, Martin & Cie., who say they are ready to sell at interesting ptices.

"Wee Macgreegor," the new breakfast food offered by The F. J. Castle Co., Limited, Ottawa, has pushed into excellent favor. Inquiries are flowing in ahead of the firm's capacity to turn the goods out—It's "graun for the morn's mornin'."

The R. & J. H. Simpson Co., tea importers, Guelph, have recently taken into stock a large importation of new crop Japan teas to retail at 25c.

"Special values in new Eleme figs, 12-oz., 14-oz. and glove-shaped boxes, also 10 and 28-lb. boxes, are to be had," say L. Chaput, Fils & Cie., Montreal.

Simcoe Brand Chicken Soup may be had from H. P. Eckardt & Co.

New Eleme figs, extra choice quality, in 10, 20 and 50-lb. boxes and 1-lb. glove boxes, are in store with The Eby, Blain Co., Limited.

Laporte, Martin & Cie., have a small lot of new Eleme figs in 14-oz. and 10-lb. boxes, which they are selling at very low prices.

W. H. Gillard & Co. are in receipt of another lot of large samples of Paradise and Haycastle currants, of which they expect several carloads in a week ar at latest ten days. They state that this year the quality of Haycastle and Paradise is if anything finer than ever.

The R. & J. H. Simpson Co., wholesale grocers, Guelph, have received large shipments of dried fruits during the last week and report having booked a great number of orders for later delivery.

The Eby, Blain Co., Limited, are quoting low prices on new seeded muscatel raisins in packages. They have a car now in transit, and in view of the recent advance made by the California Seeded Raisin Association, their quotations are especially interesting.

L. Chaput, Fils & Cie. are offering special values in vinegars during the next few weeks. Some 25,000 gallons in barrels and half-barrels are offered, freight prepaid, in any quantity, to any railway station in Ontario, Quebec and the Maritime Provinces.

It will pay you to get prices from H. P. Eckardt & Co. before placing orders for new nuts.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. J. H. Gregg, the hustling young representative of Surprise soap, has had Ottawa City added to his eastern territory. A representative of THE GROCER ran across him in Ottawa last week, and the "Capital City" is now covered with signs declaring the merits of the goods he sells. Mr. Gregg reported very satisfactory orders.

That old veteran, Mr. John Everett, who has for more years than "man knoweth of" declaimed to the Canadian merchants the merits of Christie, Brown & Co.'s biscuits, was in Ottawa last week. John never grows old or tired, but then he says he has "the goods" to sell. John is never without THE GROCER. It comes to his home and he reads it. He says "it's the best that has been."

McGREGOR, HARRIS & CO.

A representative of "The Canadian Grocer" visited the factory of McGregor, Harris & Co. on Monday last and was surprised to note the many improvements recently made in their Pearl street factory. Their office is a model of neatness and comfort and their plant is of the newest and most up-to-date description. Cleanliness in everything appears to be a prime consideration, and the neat and bright appearance of the large staff of employes is fully in keeping with everything else in the building. The products of the McGregor-Harris firm have already an established reputation, the demand for their "Quaker" brand of marmalade being very large in the United States as well as in the home market of the Dominion.

T. Marion & Co., general merchants, Rapide de l'Orignal, are about to remove to Pembroke, Ont.

V. E. Paradis has been appointed curator to A. Lajoie, general merchant, L'Anse au Foin.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Toronto, Oct. 14, 1903.

GROCERIES.

A GOOD movement in most lines is reported by the wholesale trade this week. In fact, although the busiest season has not yet arrived, this Fall has compared very favorably with last as regards business, and indicates that we are still on the right side of the wave of prosperity. In spite of the trouble at the Soo, orders for the north have not materially slackened. Indeed, generally there is an improved demand for high-class goods. The outlook is regarded as bright. In canned goods the continued fine weather has relieved much of the anxiety about tomatoes, but there has been no change in quotations. A restricted demand is reported for coffee in face of the firm prices. Spices have shown no considerable movement since last writing, but maintain recent firmness. A fair trade is setting in in molasses and syrups at quotations given. In tea a scarcity of low priced is reported with a good demand for India and Ceylon greens. On British market teas of good quality are firm and little anxiety is felt as to excessive supplies. In dried fruits Valencia raisins are quite firm at the advanced prices. California fruit presents no particular feature. Prunes are inclined to be firm and currants easy. Locally the trade is reported as brightening. The sugar market, in which last week a decline of 10c. was announced, is firming to a rise, though no change has been made as yet, the indications being that New York prices will shortly advance, in which case Canadian may be expected to follow.

CANNED GOODS.

The continued fine weather has considerably relieved the anxiety as regards the tomato crop and it is now pretty generally believed that a pretty fair pack will be realized. The outlook for corn is not so encouraging. The high prices which prevail, however, will doubtless seriously affect consumption, for with corn at 90c. and tomatoes at $1.05 to $1.10 three for a quarter leaders will be out of the question. Were not the pack coming on a bare market there would be not so much cause for complaint on the point of supply. Salmon are still difficult to secure. We quote:

The coffee situation locally is strong with prices too firm for much trading. Stocks are light with dealers holding back for a fall rather than pay the high prices. An upward tendency is reported from the New York market with strength most marked in speculative circles. We quote:

SUGAR.

We have this week to report a greatly improved condition in the market. After going to press last week there were sales of centrifugal at 1-32 less than 3 5/16c., but since then the market has recovered this fraction and considerable business has transpired at the former figure, at which refiners are still buyers, but no sellers, holders being firm, and the indications are that next sells will be at a further fractional advance. Sales of raws total over 30,000 bags of various sorts. The apparent reason for the firmness is the improved condition of the European market, owing to the unfavorable weather for the beet crops, and prices there have advanced from 8s.8¼d. f.o.b. Hamburg, October shipment, to 8s. 11½d., and as we go to press, are quoted just fractionally lower, say, at 8.10½d. The weather conditions in Louisiana have also been very unfavorable, and present indications are that the crop will be only 215,000 tons as against 300,000 last year. Receipts at United States four ports for week ending October 7 were the smallest for many weeks, being only 13,276 tons. There was a reduction of 5,000 tons in meltings, which were estimated at 35,000 tons for the week. From these figures it will be seen that the total stocks for the week were reduced by about 22,000 tons, and the official figures are 150,941 tons, over 13,000 tons less than same time last year. Since the first week of July stocks in all hands have gradually been reduced 177,000 tons. All grinding operations have finished in Cuba, and the latest advices indicate that the remaining stock is only 117,500 tons, being 8,500 tons less than previous week. Combined stocks at European and American ports at latest uneven dates were 1,523,441 tons, which is 50,150 tons less than same time last year. It is estimated that these are 185,000 tons afloat to United States ports against 300,000 tons same time last year. Present indications are that the statistical position at Atlantic ports will continue to improve for some time to come. The firmness in raws has communicated itself to the refined market, and all cuts and concessions which American refiners have been making, have been discontinued, and there has been a largely increased demand from the country, the impression being that prices have touched bottom, as the margin between raw and refined ranges from 62⅛ to 67½c. as against 90c. per 100 pounds last year. There is no change to note in the situation locally, prices remaining as last advised, but there has been moderate buying following improved deliveries, and an expectation that Canadian refiners will quickly follow any upward movement in New York. SPICES.

Spices are holding firm although there has been but an ordinary trade done. New York reports announce that nutmegs are firmer with much higher prices more than probable. The market there is active, with large trading in cloves, nutmegs, pimento, cassia and pepper, with large exports of cloves to London. We quote:

Every Grocer's Safeguard

The plausible salesman with the (so-called) "just as good" Tea as "SALADA" Ceylon Tea is continually in your path, making all manner of absurd offers and promises, if you will only allow him to unload his burden upon you.

Don't you do it—you have probably quite enough "culls" already on your shelves that were guaranteed (?) to sell well, but didn't.

"SALADA" is the most profitable Tea to handle, because it has an established reputation for Quality, selling and pleasing everlastingly . . . and, there being an entire absence of "HOOK" about our ways of doing business, you can never get caught.

A few moments consideration to the foregoing will not be out of place.

TEAS.

The tea market, on the whole, is quiet. There is a scarcity reported in low-priced teas. Japans are in demand but with very few offerings. A fairly good business is being done in India and Ceylon greens, and in medium grade Ceylon blacks of good cup quality. China teas are quiet. In the London market the clearances for the month of September for all teas from the London warehouses as per official returns, were 18,323,525 pounds as against 17,179,860 pounds for the same month last year. Poor teas have been very low, but fine and finest have been strongly competed for, while the best Broken Pekoes, with a good show of tip, have met a keen demand and mark an advance. Excessive supplies are regarded as improbable, as the excess over last season available for the United Kingdom, estimated at about 12,000,000 pounds, can be easily dealt with. We quote :

GREEN FRUITS.

This week has probably seen the end of the open wholesale market at the foot of Scott street. Hereafter the receipts will be handled in the various commission warehouses. The season has been a very fair one except for peaches. This week grapes were the principal fruit on sale. We quote :

VEGETABLES.

Business is reported very good in vegetables, which have been favored by the late mild weather. Tomato vines have been nipped by the frost, but so far the tomato has not been injured. The potato rot which affects the tubers grown in low land is said not to be found in those grown on high land. The chief call this week has been for carrots, parsnips, turnips and onions. Prices have remained steady with few changes since last week. We quote :

QUEBEC MARKETS.

Montreal, Oct. 14, 1903.

GROCERIES.

GENERALLY speaking trade has been only fair during the week. Orders from the country are fairly good. Jobbers say payments, however, are not as satisfactory as the general prosperity of the country warrants, country merchants saying farmers, despite the fact of good crops and high prices for nearly everything, are not paying up as well as they might, and it is surmised that even the steady farmer has been dabbling in other stocks and ventures than farm products. In sugar a good business is prevailing, though the late decline of 10c. has not made any extra call on the trade. New York is down another 10c., but, at this writing, Canadian refineries have not followed suit. Teas have been rather quiet and no particularly noticeable feature to record. A few good parcels of Japans have been turned over at 17½ to 18 and 18½c. The demand for Ceylon greens continues steady. Molasses is quiet and prices unchanged. It is claimed some mixed molasses is being sold as Barbados here at 37½c., the genuine unadulterated bringing 38½ to 39c. for large lots, and 10 to 13c. in small parcels. Canned goods reports are more satisfactory. The Canners' Association report that corn and tomato deliveries would in all likelihood be made in full. This is satisfactory news for the jobbing trade. A fairly good trade is done in all lines of canned goods. Salmon is still strong and will not, in the opinion of the trade, be lower this season. Rice and tapioca are quiet ; little doing. Coffee is unchanged. Spices keep strong and tend upwards ; New York stocks are light and on export demand are growing lighter. In dried fruits the arrival of the Escalona is looked forward to as stimulating the demand for all kinds of Mediterranean fruits. She is expected here about the 21st inst. Sultanas are receiving lately more attention on account of very low price and good quality. In currants repeat orders for carton goods have gone forward to Patras. These goods are in good demand. Spanish onions are attracting attention ; shipments expected by Escalona are far short of requirements and prices may be enhanced on arrival. New Eleme figs via New York are selling rapidly. Nuts are also receiving attention, new Grenobles to arrive selling at 10 to 10½c. Grapes have arrived in smaller quantities. Apples are selling well. Trade is quiet in all other lines. Fish trade is good ; prices in herring are firming up. Vegetables are in good demand. Potatoes are coming in freely. Onions bring good prices, and some good lots are picked up. In eggs, local market has been active ; fresh eggs being scarce and demand increasing holders are holding out for prices ; English demand is strong and tends to hold prices up here. For butter and cheese particulars reference is made to the Dairy Produce section of this issue. Beans are reported somewhat easier. Hops are strong. Deliveries of new hops have been light so far ; the feeling generally is for higher prices this season. The reported failure of a portion of the Kentish crop has caused feeling of pessimism. Honey is unchanged.

SUGAR.

A fair trade is done in sugars, although the drop of 10c. per 100 pounds, noted last week, does not seem to have made it more active. A lot of 3,000 bags of imported damaged sugar (granulated) was sold at auction and appraised at 30 per cent. less than cost, but the surprising thing is that the bulk of it sold at 3.80, 3.72½ and 3.65. New York declined another 10c., and it is not unlikely that Canadian refiners may follow. This, however, is not a hard and fast rule. Raw sugar is reported steady. We quote :

TEAS.

Business in teas has been somewhat quiet during the past week. Japans continue firm ; some fairly good sales were made at 17½c. for good medium, and smaller lots at 18 to 18¼c. Ceylon greens are asked for freely and readily sold at 16 to 16½c. In Ceylon blacks business has been good, some nice parcels having been sold at 20½c. for fine quality. Indian blacks, low-priced teas, are readily taken. In China blacks there has been little doing. The same applies to China greens. We quote :

SPICES.

Spice market is exceedingly active. All grades are firm and in good demand. New York spot stocks are light, export shipments to London having lately been good. Nutmegs are firmer. Ginger, easy comparatively with other lines. Reports give Acheen pepper crop only 3,000 bags, a shortage of 3,000 bags as compared with last year. Hold a dime close to your eye with your right hand and a bright silver dollar a few inches away with your left; you cannot see the dollar because the smaller coin obscures your vision.

So it is with some people; in their eagerness to save a dollar they often lose sight of the fifty within their reach.

They would rather have a penny than a pound — if it meant spending the penny to get the pound.

CANNED GOODS.

It appears from reports gathered upon the street this week that our report in last week's issue as to the Canadian Canners' Association having sent out a circular stating that they could only make 90 per cent. deliveries of corn and 70 per cent. of tomatoes was in a measure confusing. It appears that no circular was sent out, though your correspondent's informant evidently was under that impression. Since the last issue of "The Grocer" the association have issued a notice that they had already packed 90 per cent. of their corn orders and expected to make full deliveries of orders already booked. As regards tomatoes, 80 per cent. has already been packed, and if the present favorable weather conditions continue they have hopes of executing all their orders for tomatoes in full. "'Tis a consummation devoutly to be wished," is the hope of the jobbing trade. Trade generally is good. Salmon is receiving attention, with prices ruling from $1.20 to $1.65. We quote :

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

As the time for arrival of the first direct steamer, Escalona, from Mediterranean ports, draws near (she is expected about the 21st inst.), the interest in Valencia, Malaga and other dried fruits increases. The recent sharp advance in valencias has toned up prices generally with possibly the exception of sultanas, which are very cheap this year and of good quality. A rumor on the street today gave out that sultanas had declined again, but this was contradicted in several quarters. So far as a slump in valencias after sailing of the Bellona, expectations have not been realized. Denia and Valencia shippers cable that no serious decline is looked for on the other side in time to be available for shipments by St. Lawrence River. In currants the demand has been heavy for cleaned and carton fruit, and already repeat orders have gone forward to Patras for the latter. In nuts advices received have shown a steady downward tendency. In peanuts reports say that the high grades as well as the cheapest are pretty nearly sold out. Farmers are just beginning to dig and crop will be about two weeks late and appears to be in fairly good condition, both as to quality and quantity. In Spanish onions, as a natural result of the small proceeds returned shippers on consignments in recent years, parcels afloat on the Escalona are quite insufficient for Canadian requirements, amounting as they do to less than 6,000 crates. As a consequence everything has been exhausted from first hands at prices said to range from 65 to 78c. (to jobbers), according to quantity. At this advanced date it would be virtually impracticable to import without risk of frost from Denia. New Eleme figs arrived and are selling in 10-lb. boxes at 10 to 12c. per pound. We quote :

GREEN FRUITS.

Market has been very good, especially in apples, fancy Winter stock selling from $2.50 to $3, and in good demand. Canadian chestnuts have been coming in freely and price has fallen to 10c. FISH.

Business is only ordinary. Salt fish is scarce, though dealers are hopeful if fishing weather continues favorable to see a better supply. Good salted red salmon are scarce, but some light salmon is being offered. Lately there has been a scarcity of smoked fish, but the future prospects are somewhat brighter. In fresh fish haddock and halibut are hard to get to any extent, while lake and river fish are plentiful and prices easing up accordingly. N. M. Smith & Co., Halifax, write their agents : "Buyers must have patience, as the scarcity of herring suitable for Montreal market is unprecedented." As regards codfish, John Sealy, St. John, N.B., advises his agents that an advance in prices of boneless fish is unavoidable, and it is only a question of time when further advance will be necessary, as fishing is about over and the accumulated stock of goods suitable for cutting is nil. VEGETABLES.

A fairly good business is doing. Supplies of potatoes are coming in freely from the farmers, some lots, however, being none too good. Onions have been contracted for with growers at $2 to $2.25 per barrel for red and yellow in large lots delivered on car. Jobbing prices are ruling from $2.50 to $3. Other lines are in fair demand. COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS.

Since our last report the bean market locally is reported somewhat easier, and slight reductions will be noted in the quotations which we give below. It is doubtful whether the present reductions will last very long, as Michigan quotations indicate that prices here are about 20c. lower than in Detroit. The drop on the Montreal market is due to the manipulations of certain brokers referred to in our last issue. Their deliveries are very light, and the market is still very uncertain, the probabilities being that another rise will occur shortly. We quote :

HONEY.

There is nothing to add to our report of last week. There are still large offerings, especially from the West, but buyers are not anxious to take very much of it, and jobbers generally are fairly well stocked. Buyers and sellers still persist in holding different views on the subject. We quote the following jobbers prices :

Strained, white	0 07½ 0 08
Clover and basswood	0 08 0 08½

MAPLE PRODUCTS.

Some very large sales are reported this week of pure Beauce sugar at 8 to 9c. It is said that about 200,000 barrels have changed hands of late for shipment to Chicago, St. Louis and Minneapolis. Otherwise the market is quiet and prices are unchanged. We quote :

EVAPORATED APPLES.

Very conflicting opinions are current as to the prospects of the evaporated apple market. For a week the market was firmer, but it is said that this was due to manipulation and that it cannot last. On the local market there has been a great deal of price-cutting, and it is impossible this week to give quotations with any degree of exactitude. It is said that great quantities of green fruit suitable for the evaporators are being exported to England and France, as it does not pay to evaporate them at the present miserably low prices which are being paid to the evaporators throughout the country. In New York the buyers are bidding lower prices for November delivery than for October, which indicates that they have little confidence in the future. We quote the following jobbers' prices, which are probably subject to some concessions :

New, in carlots	0 05½ 0 06
New, in jobbing lots	0 06 0 06¼

HOPS.

The local market is very strong and hop merchants are waiting anxiously for the season to get into swing. So far the deliveries of new hops have been very light and there are very few old hops on the market. The general feeling seems to be that prices this season will be considerably higher than usual. It is reported that in some parts of England the crop has been a failure, and everywhere the supply is lighter than usual in proportion to the demand. European advices report a very strong position. The total European crop for 1903 is estimated at 655,000 to 715,000 cwt., and the consumption at 735,000 to 785,000 cwt., which would indicate that the continent cannot possibly spare any this year for export. The United States crop is variously estimated at from 5,000 to 15,000 bales larger than last year; but to offset this there will necessarily be a smaller importation.

On the local market, buyers and sellers are keeping apart, as the latter are asking higher prices than the former are willing to pay. Dealers are filling the immediate wants of their customers with British hops at about 38c. Farmers are asking from 28 to 35c., which is higher than buyers think the consumer will stand for. In the absence of transactions on the spot it is impossible to give exact quotations. One large Canadian dealer says he will pay no more than 22c., as consumers will not buy Canadian hops at present prices.

POTATOES.

The quality of the potatoes offered on the Montreal market this week has been very satisfactory, and little credence is now attached to the alarmist reports current a few weeks ago. The market is firm, but at time of writing, there have been no changes since the report in our last issue. Dealers are paying 55 and 60c. per bag of 90 pounds, and are selling at 65c. in jobbing lots and 70c. for small quantities.

FLOUR AND GRAIN.

GRAIN.

There has been some slight improvement in the export demand for oats, but otherwise, business is quiet. No. 1 hard Manitoba is 1c. cheaper; No. 1 Northern has declined 1½c. Other prices are unchanged. General business is quiet owing to the scarcity of freight, most of the grain going to Boston and New York. We quote :

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

Office of THE CANADIAN GROCER,

St. John, N.B., Oct. 12, 1903.

The indications continue favorable for a large Fall trade. Labor is well employed, crops are good, there will be a large cut of lumber in the season just begun, and while existing industries are in active operation the gradual development of new ones continues. The markets show some slight changes.

OILS.

The market for burning oils is firm, and one dealer believes there is an advancing tendency. The volume of business increases as the season advances. In other lines there is no change since last report. We quote:—

SALT.

Shipments of Liverpool salt to dealers were large last week, and 3,500 sacks were sent by schooner to Eastport, Maine. The market is firm, and one firm remarked today that they would be glad if they could place their hands on another cargo. There is no change in quotations. We quote:—

CANNED GOODS.

The market is still a waiting one, pending further information with regard to the season's pack and the quantity of goods likely to be available for the trade here. The general feeling is of course firm, and an active demand is anticipated. We quote:—

DRIED FRUIT.

The season is still between the old and the new, and there is little to be said at present. Some new goods are coming along, and the markets are firm. This is especially true of raisins. Some new figs are due. Not much is doing as yet in the various lines, but a brisk movement is anticipated. We quote:

GREEN FRUIT.

There is an abundant supply of apples. Both here and in Moncton violations of the Fruit Marks Act have been punished by fine, which should have a good effect in securing the more careful packing and branding of apples. The only oranges offered are Jamaica. We quote:

FISH.

The market is very firm all round. Fresh fish are scarce, although some fresh herring came in from the islands last week. Large quantities of sardine herring were taken in the harbor here last week, hundreds of hogsheads and barrels, in fact, and sent to the factories at Eastport, which have been extremely short of supplies. Cured fish of all kinds are firm and in light supply. We quote:

FLOUR, FEED AND MEAL.

Flour prices are steady. Beans are higher. There is a fair demand for feed, except hay, which is extremely dull. There is a fair movement of lumbermen's supplies. We quote:

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, Oct. 12, 1903.

A WEEK of delightful Autumn weather has facilitated the securing of business, and all the travelling men are working their respective routes with much energy and success. Conditions are favorable to a large movement of goods, and wholesale houses all report the receipts of good orders. Money is circulating freely now that farmers and fishermen are receiving returns for their products. Collections have improved since the end of September. Manufacturing firms within the province are well filled with orders and labor finds abundant employment.

There have been few changes in market quotations since last report. The Acadia Refinery following the lead of Montreal reduced the price of sugar 10c. per 100 pounds, and this has led to more liberal buying of this article. Molasses continues very firm at this point, although some small outside traders, whose travellers cover a portion of the province, seem to have more stock than they desire to carry, and in their anxiety to make sales have shaded prices slightly. Holders here continue to predict an advance. The demand has improved. The jobbing prices here are as follows: Porto Rico, 43 to 44c.; Barbados, 39 to 40c.; Antigua, 34 to 35c.; Trinidad, 44 to 45c.; New Orleans, 29 to 34c.

Flour is firm and unchanged. Halifax jobbers have not responded to the mill advances as readily as those at some other Maritime Province points. The advance in freight rates between Ontario and the Lower Provinces, amounting to about 1c. per barrel, has now to be considered. Jobbing prices are as follows: Straights, $3.90 to $4; ninety per cents., $4.10 to $4.20; eighty per cents., $4.15 to $4.50; Ogilvie's Hungarian, $5.25. Cornmeal is easier at a decline of 5c., and is now quoted at $2.95; beans have also receded slightly from the high point of a couple of weeks ago.

Provisions are firm with a higher tendency in American pork. With the commencement of the local pack, domestic is less firmly held. Lard has declined to 10c. for pure. Beef is unchanged. Fresh meats are in good supply. Antigonish County sent 1,500 lambs to the Boston market this season, but the price there lately declined so that further shipments are not warranted, and the supply is being now sold in local markets.

Green fruits are in limited supply. About the only oranges to be had are Jamaicas, of which a small lot arrived by last steamer. Grapes and other Ontario fruits are not as much in evidence as in former seasons.

Cheese is jobbing to the trade at 12c., which is about the price buyers paid the factories last week. The market is easier but no one expects the jobbing price to go below 12c. Creamery butter is scarcer and prints are jobbing in Halifax at 22c. Dairy butter is in fair demand at 18c. for solids. Eggs are firmer, costing 18c. for fresh case stock; receipts continue moderate.

Owing to the strong export demand the offerings of No. 1 apples on the local market are light. Some Gravensteins sent to London netted the growers $4 per barrel. A man who shipped a lot in boxes with the apples wrapped in tissue paper sold at the equivalent of $7.66 per barrel. Late cable advices state the English market is declining, and advises exporters to hold shipments if possible.

Miss Woods, representing The Greig Mfg. Co., of Montreal, has been in a number of city grocery stores demonstrating the uses of Kkovah jellies, etc. She is now on a tour of the chief towns of the province on a like mission.

There is a great scarcity of grocery cod and herring, and prices rule high. Bank cure is firmly held. Our Lunenburg fishermen are asking $5 per quintal, but they will probably accept $4.75 ex vessel as fast as they can get their fish in marketable condition. Last sales were made at Halifax at $4.70 ex vessel.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, Oct. 10, 1903.

A RATE war in transportation of flour and wheat from the Pacific Coast to China and Japan ports, which has been on for months, in fact, for nearly all this year, has at last been settled by mutual agreement among the steamship companies engaged in the Oriental trade. The rate war was originally precipitated by The China Commercial Co., which was refused permission to land any more coolies or Chinese laborers in Mexico. Now that privilege has been restored, and the restoration of the flour and wheat tariff has been an immediate result.

The rate on wheat, which was $4 per ton before the war began is to be advanced to $5. On flour, the Asiatic Freight Association, the organization which includes all the trans-Pacific steamship lines, has decided that for the present the rate from San Francisco to the Orient shall be $3 per ton. Prior to the commencement of the rate war it was quoted at $5 per ton, but it was dropped to $1 per ton. The San Francisco rate, it is expected, will be raised again shortly to the original $5 per ton.

From British Columbia and Puget Sound ports, the cut rate for flour has been $3 per ton. This is now to be restored to $5. The new schedule of rates was arranged at a meeting of the Asiatic Freight Association, held in Seattle on Wednesday, the 7th inst. The restored schedule goes into effect on November 1. Already flour for November shipment is offering freely at the C.P.R. wharf. For months there has been almost a cessation of the shipment of flour from British Columbia ports, owing to the fact that the San Francisco rates were so greatly against the trade here.

While a large percentage of the flour shipped to the Orient is from the neighboring State of Washington, which is a large wheat producer, there is always a large quantity shipped by Canadian mills. This will be restored to its original status by the restoration of the freight rates, and it may be that the restoration may cause a revival in the efforts put forth to sell Canadian wheat and flour in the Orient.

The steamship companies affected by the new schedule, to which they all are parties, are the Canadian Pacific, Northern Pacific, Boston Towboat Co., Nippon Yusen Kaisha, China Mutual, and Ocean Steamship Co., in the north, and the Pacific Mail, Oriental and Occidental and China Commercial Co. in the south.

With the water in the Upper Yukon standing only 52 inches above the very minimum low-water mark on Monday and over 2,000 tons of freight on the wharves at White Horse—the head of navigation on the Yukon—the big transportation company, The White Pass & Yukon Co., have more than they can do to "deliver the goods" before the close of navigation. The appearance of ice on the upper waters of the Yukon and its tributaries is an indication that at best two weeks or so will be all that can be counted on to get the goods down the river.

Plans are being prepared for a new bank building to be erected on Hastings street, just east of the C.P.R. Commercial Telegraph office. It will be occupied in the early Spring by the Bank of Nova Scotia, which is to open in business here at an early date. This decision was reached a week ago on the occasion of a visit of one of the leading officials of the bank. The new building will be of stone, and two storeys in height. The upper floor will be fitted as chambers for the bank's solicitors, while the bank offices will occupy all the ground floor. Contracts will be let at once and the work proceeded with right away, so that the building will be completed by Spring.

With the advent of the Bank of Nova Scotia, there will be eight chartered banks doing business in Vancouver, and that despite the fact that the Bank of British Columbia was absorbed a year or so ago by the Bank of Commerce. Two branch banks are established in the east-end of the city,—on Westminster avenue—the Canadian Bank of Commerce and the Royal Bank of Canada. This makes really ten banking offices in the city.

The rapid growth of production and trade in agricultural products in the lower Fraser Valley is aptly noted from the cargo brought to port this week by the steamer Hamlin, a river boat, which runs direct between Vancouver and the town of Chilliwack on the Fraser river. The steamer had from various points on the river, in the one cargo, 700 boxes of apples, 220 sacks of potatoes, 1,100 sacks of oats, 100 head of live stock, and a large quantity of dressed meats, besides dairy produce, poultry, etc.

Yearly the number of ranchers and others engaged in working the soil in the valley of the lower Fraser is increasing, until the time seems to be approaching when a very appreciably less quantity of farm and dairy produce will be imported into the province.

The markets in the city this week are not of a very lively character. In fruits there is but little to note, except that the supplies are becoming restricted largely to British Columbia varieties, this being the season for delivery of apples, pears, etc. From California, outside of grapes and a few oranges, the supplies are very limited.

In dairy produce there is noted a stiffening of prices for creamery butter. At this season many of the creameries in Manitoba and the Northwest Territories are closing down. Another factor in improving prices is the tone of eastern Canadian markets, which have picked up owing to the improvement of the export demand. Locally there is sufficient.

The Manitoba and Northwest Territories creameries are holding what stocks they have on hand, but it is not anticipated that there will be a shortage. Dairy butter is a little firmer in price in sympathy with creamery, but as there is always an increase, comparatively in the quantity of dairy-made after the creameries close down, it is not expected that dairy prices will be very fancy. The best that is reported from the Northwest at country points is 15 to 16c.

Local butter is still fairly plenty, and it is likely to continue for some weeks yet. The creameries are, however, getting fancy figures for the butter they make. Prices for Northwest Territories creamery are 22½ to 23c.; for dairy, 18 to 20c., and all are steady.

Manitoba cheese is up so high that it is not to be bought. There is so limited a supply that it is all required for home consumption, so that little will come forward here. Thirteen cents has been offered ex factory, f.o.b. Winnipeg, for the make of one Manitoba factory and refused. Another factory would not look at 12½c. for its whole make. It now costs at least 14¾c. to land eastern cheese on this market.

Eggs, even case stock, are abnormally high here. The quotation is not less than 23c. for case stock, not candled; while local fresh are bringing 40c. retail.

OTTAWA TRADE GOSSIP.

BUSINESS among wholesale houses is reported good. Retailers have had a few quiet days owing to wet weather, but conditions are better and trade is picking up. The sugar market is reported to look stronger to-day in sympathy with London and New York, where an improvement is expected. Prices now are: Granulated, $4.12; yellows, $3.42. Advices in regard to valencia raisins point to higher prices; they are worth 2s. more than last week. California seeded are worth 10½c. here, which brings the price about the same as last year. Barbados molasses is very firm at 43c. No orders for tomatoes and corn are being taken less than $1.25 for tomatoes and $1.00 for corn, that is, with a guarantee of delivery. It is likely that the retail prices will be the same as last year, 12½c. for tomatoes and 10c. for corn and peas. Shelled walnuts are becoming scarce, and will likely be a great deal more so before any new stock appears. The time for the greatest demand is between now and Christmas. Prices are around 30c. now. Domestic sardines are higher in price.

Orders have been taken in the city for Allin's cider during the past fortnight, and it might be well to mention that in speaking with local retailers they all feel the retail price should be put on a better basis. It has always been a fad among the trade to sell at a profit of 3 to 5c. a gallon, which is ridiculously low. The Grocers' Association are considering the matter of getting retailers to advance the price 5c. a gallon.

The local cheese market is a little weaker than it was on Friday last; only part of what was boarded sold at 10⅝c. Some of the sellers would not take that figure, and are holding for better prices.

At the Fruit Exchange the quantity of grapes arriving this year is not as large as other seasons, and prices have been a great deal better. Concords have been selling from 22 to 25c.; Niagaras, 21 to 24c.; Rogers, 28 to 33c.; Delawares, 30 to 35c. Apples are coming in plentifully.

friends leave for New York on the 27th inst. as the guests of the Clique Tourists of that city. They are to be entertained by the New Yorkers on the 28th and 29th. This treat is a recognition of the entertainment given to the Clique Tourists when they visited Ottawa in June last. The mayor of Ottawa is expected to join with the Ottawans.

A number of grocers in the western part of the city have mutually agreed to close their places of business one hour earlier than usual. Instead of closing at 7.30 they now close at 6.30. Those in the arrangement are: Wm. York, R. Baird, H. W. Booth, A. P. Johnson, C. Blakeley & Co., N. S. Swertfoger and Ellis Bros. They all agree that it is a good arrangement, and although it is only in vogue since October 1, they would not go back to the old way. Their customers have fallen into the new order of things quite readily.

Mr. J. J. Levy, of United Factories, is in the city this week.

F. A. Scott & Sons have bought out the grocery business of Thos. Martin, Rideau street. Mr. John J. Smith is in charge of the new branch, and is well acquainted with that part of the city.

ENFORCING THE FRUIT MARKS ACT.

THE inspectors of the Dominion fruit division are now devoting special attention to the enforcement of the Fruit Marks Act. Several prosecutions have taken place in Ontario, all of which resulted in convictions, and several are now pending in Nova Scotia. These are mainly for marking inferior fruit No. 1; although there is such a large amount of first-class fruit in the country packers still persist in trying to palm off inferior fruit as No. 1.

Mr. W. A. McKinnon, chief of the fruit division, says that retailers are beginning to understand the scope of the act much better than formerly, and appear well aware of the existence of the law and of the fact that it is being enforced by inspectors. They also understand the fact that it is at the disposal of any private citizen. A prosecution is now pending in Toronto by a private citizen against a retailer who is said to have disclaimed responsibility. Only a single basket is involved, but it is clear that if individuals do not protect themselves in the case of single baskets, they are not likely to do so at all, as ninety per cent. of their purchases are of single baskets. It is announced that the policy of the Department will be to hold the retailers more strictly to account in the future for the packages of fruit which they pass on the public. If the retailers do not themselves complain when they find dishonest packing, it is because they are willing to share in the fraudulent profit. Of course the original packer will always be prosecuted when he can be discovered, but that will not excuse the retailer.

A VISISTOR FROM GLASGOW.

Mr. John C. Maclean, representing Mitchell Bros., Ltd., of Glasgow, distillers, and Mitchell & Co., of Belfast, Ireland was a visitor in Montreal this week. A representative of "The Grocer" had the pleasure of meeting him at the warehouses of Laporte, Martin & Cie, Montreal agents. Mr. Mitchell is at present on a trip through Canada and the United States, visiting the various agencies of his houses in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Toronto, Detroit and Chicago, and as it is his first trip to this side he is naturally very much interested and keenly observant of our Canadian and American business customs. The volume of business done by his companies in America since the introduction of their brands has increased to such an extent as to warrant a closer inspection of the field and its future possibilities. Mr. Maclean informed "The Grocer" that as far as the trade with Australia was concerned his companies' business has reached a most astonishing success and it is with a view of developing their Canadian and American trade that his trip was arranged.

MONTREAL GROCERS' NEW OFFICERS.

OF the newly elected officers of the Montreal Grocers' Association, Mr. N. Chartrand, the president, is an old and active member of the society. He conducts one of the most prosperous groceries in the west-end, on Seigneurs street, and is a man of energy and up-to-date ideas, and under his guidance the association should materially develop.

Mr. Beaudry, the secretary, is a young man, but that "crime," in the words of one of England's greatest statesmen, is counterbalanced by an activity and a clear business tact that has enabled him to become the owner of as bright and well conducted a retail grocery, provision and meat market as it has been the writer's privilege to inspect—the "Compagnie d'Epicerie Moderne," on St. Catherine street east, near St. Denis street. The association is to be congratulated on the selection of its secretary.

J. A. Beaudry, Secretary Montreal Retail Grocers' Association, 1903-04.

Mr. J. P. Dixon, the retiring secretary, was a man of unlimited energy, long business experience and a knowledge of affairs unusually well developed, and the association for which he acted as secretary about 16 years, owes much to his powers of organization. Mr. Beaudry has a hard man to follow, but it will only spur him on to equal the work of Mr. Dixon, and, like all ambitious young men, to try and do a little better.

The International Stock Food Co., with headquarters in Minneapolis, have established a branch factory at No. 4 Bay street, Toronto, under the management of Mr. E. B. Savage. Mr. W. B. Laidlaw will have charge of the office and sales department.

TORONTO RETAIL GROCERS' ASSOCIATION.

THE regular monthly meeting of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association was held in St. George's Hall Monday evening, October 12, with the president, Mr. D. Bell, in the chair. A complaint was preferred by certain members of the association that the price of "Force" was being cut by The T. Eaton Co. and others. The "Force" Food Co., which had already been approached on the subject, had stated that none who had cut "Force" had been receiving rebates. Eaton's had advertised two packages of "Force" for 25c., and sent out 50,000 copies of their catalogue containing the same. After considerable discussion the association decided to authorize the secretary to send an official protest to The "Force" Food Co. and enclose a copy of Eaton's latest advertisement of "Force" at 10c.

It was unanimously decided to support Mr. Chamberlain's new fiscal policy.

Several members expressed themselves in favor of using goods made in Canada as much as possible. Mr. Bell stated that there were as good articles put up by Canadian manufacturers as by the States. It would, however, take time to educate the consumer to this. There was a splendid opening, he thought, for a manufacturer of canned goods in Canada. Retail grocers here would welcome the day when they could offer their patrons Canadian consomme and julienne, which would compare favorably with the same article as made across the line. There was no reason why Canadian canned soups should not become as firmly established as Canadian canned chicken. The Aylmer Canning Co. at present were putting up a brand of chicken with which Americans could not compete in our Canadian markets.

A suggestion favorably received was that representatives from the various manufactories in Toronto be invited to lecture to the association at intervals during the Winter on the processes of manufacture.

"We want to know something about the article that goes over our counter," said one enterprising grocer.

FLOUR AND CEREAL FOODS

Cereals in the Retail Grocery Store.

"THERE is no doubt but the sale of breakfast foods, of cereals of all kinds, has developed at a great rate during the last few years," said J. F. Morrish, Yonge street, Toronto, the other day.

"During the Summer time the cooked or prepared foods sold in packages have had a sale which would have been impossible a few years ago. At this time of the year, while the sale of these goods is still worthy of our care and respect, the general tendency seems to be in favor of the unprepared foods, such as oatmeal, a food that needs to be heated, gives that degree of warmth and comfort in the morning which is so desirable in the Fall days. This tendency is always manifest in the Fall and Winter.

"This does not mean, mind you, that the sale of the package foods, which do not require cooking, falls away entirely. Each of these foods have their adherents who stand by them through all seasons, from Summer to Winter and from Winter to Summer."

"Is there much difficulty in keeping these foods?" asked THE GROCER.

"No, if one pays attention to a few simple rules he will have no trouble. In the first place, I have found it of advantage to buy often rather than in large quantities. Freshness is the great desideratum in any food, and it must be recognized that freshness cannot be retained in a cereal beyond certain limits. These limits will be extended to the greatest length by always keeping all stocks of cereals absolutely dry, or as near so as possible."

"Then you would not carry cereal stocks in your cellar?"

"Certainly not; the dampness of my cellar will not do harm to some goods we carry, but, while it is not damper than the ordinary cellar, it would be too damp to carry cereals in. In the storehouse behind my store I keep all such goods as cereals, teas, etc. Yet, as I said before, I find it advantageous to buy as frequently as possible. It pays to be able to assure customers that one's stock is in proper shape, and it is folly to assure them so unless it is the fact, for they can and do notice the difference when goods are not right. Then some other grocer gets a new customer."

Manitoba Grain Act.

The Senate rendered an important service to the western farmers recently in considering the bill to amend the Manitoba Grain Act, 1900.

Dr. Douglas objected to a penalty of $60 per day being imposed on the farmers who fail to load a car within 24 hours, on the ground that the farmers should not be subjected to a penalty several times greater than a merchant under similar circumstances. On behalf of the western members he asked that the amendment be stricken out, and the farmer be left subject to charges for demurrage under the general railway act. The motion was adopted.

Western Wheat Movements.

A despatch from Winnipeg announces that there were 186,880 bushels of wheat received for shipment at country points on Friday last by the C. P. R., and 163,000 bush. loaded for shipment. The total amount of wheat received to that date by the C. P. R. is 3,479,912 bush. The C. N. R. receipts average about 50,000 bush. daily, and shipments to date total 1,700,000. On Friday 276 cars from the Northwest were inspected, of which 92 cars graded No. 1 northern and 100 No. 2 northern. The weather is again most favorable for threshing and shipment.

Yields in U. S. Northwest.

The Van Dusen-Harrington Co., of Minneapolis, has been making a very exhaustive inquiry into the yield of wheat in the Northwest, and embodies the result in a report. The company bases its figures upon actual thresher returns, depending not only upon its own exceptional facilities for securing information, but obtaining reports as far as practical from the several large elevator companies with headquarters in Minneapolis. Through these various sources the companies obtained more than 1,000 reports of yields, as shown by thresher returns, and upon these it estimates the average yield of grain for 1903 in Minnesota and the two Dakotas as follows:

	Wheat.	Oats.	Barley.	Flax.
Minnesota	13.1	35.1	29.5	10.7
North Dakota	13.2	31 2	27.6	7.7
South Dakota	14.4	41.9	30.7	11.0

The Government report showed the 1902 yields to be:

	Wheat.	Oats.	Barley.	Flax.
Minnesota	13.8	30.7	28.5	10.4
North Dakota	15.9	41.9	31.6	7.2
South Dokota	12.2	38.4	29.2	7.5

When these yields are compared with those of Manitoba and our Northwest the American invasion needs no further explanation.

Opening for Cornmeal.

An opening in Britain is reported for Canadian cornmeal. Mr. P. B. Ball, the Canadian commercial agent at Birmingham, says that particular enquiry is being made in the Midlands for white cornmeal flour. A large order can be obtained, but quotations are required immediately.

Coarse and Fine Flour.

SPEAKING of the constant inclination, among British millers at least, to dress flour through finer and finer silk, Mark Laner, writing to The Miller, of London, gives it as his opinion that it is not the actual fineness of the dressing, so much as the greater evenness of the granules, that makes the finer flour superior. He then goes on to say:

"We can all understand that in dressing through a No. 8 silk we get a quantity of flour that would go through finer silk, all numbers up to 16, say. Taking well-purified middlings, and dressing the rolled product through silks of various meshes, I find that the coarse flour will make a better loaf than the fine, if there is no fine flour mixed with the coarse.

"For instance, take a three-sheet reel clothed at the head with No. 12 silk, middle sheet No. 9, tail sheet No. 8; the outsiftings from the No. 8 silk would make a whiter and stronger loaf than those from the 12 silk. Take a sieve purifier and get a sample of middlings from one section only. These middlings will make a splendid loaf even through a No. 1 or No. 2 silk, but mix several sizes of middlings and the result is not quite so good, and, of course, if there is flou mixed in as well, the loaf will be below grade.

"I have seen quantities of middlings caught off from the purifiers and sold to bakers as a special "flour," and the resulting bread was, I think, the best I ever saw. If we could only induce bakers in England to try middlings for their best bread, I think it would pay both miller and baker. How it would simplify milling if we could sell 'patent middlings' without having to reduce them to patent flour? I have seen this done on a large scale. In fact, in a 20-sack plant the firm were unable to supply the demand for these middlings for bread making, even though they caught off so many that the flour made from the remaining machines was not up to bakers' grade, even with first-class mixtures of wheat.

"As milling is done now, we are almost obliged to grind a straight-run flour right

British Imports of Flour.

A correspondent of The Liverpool Daily Post is authority for the statement that during the past cereal year, ending July 31, the United Kingdom imported from the United States and Canada no less than 7,099,000 sacks of 280 lbs. of flour, an increase of 620,000 sacks over the previous season, besides probably another 1,000,000 sacks from Hungary, South America, France, etc.

From the United States and Canada Liverpool received 1,133,000 sacks, London 2,669,000 sacks, Glasgow 1,440,000 sacks, Ireland 882,000 sacks, Bristol 439,000 sacks, Leith 436,000 sacks and sundries 100,000 sacks—total 7,099,000 sacks. And it is well known to persons in the trade that the failure of crops in Australia and South Africa last year diverted to those countries another 800,000 sacks of flour, 500,000 of which would, under normal conditions, have headed for the United Kingdom.

Sir William's Fine Crop.

A field of wheat at the farm owned by Sir William Van Horne, East Selkirk, has been the cause of a great deal of admiration, says The Selkirk Exporter. It was the first at the station, and in view of hundreds of people daily. Those who saw the field after it was cut were not backward in saying that the shocks were the largest of any they had ever seen, and that was saying a great deal in this prolific country. A few days ago this field was threshed out, and the yield from the machine was 48 bushels to the acre. There was easily two more bushels to the acre on the ground, as a heavy storm about a week before the field was cut caused much of the crop to lodge.

Reduction in Grain Rates.

A MILLION a year saved to farmers of the West in freight rates is the estimate Premier Roblin has placed on the cut the C. P. R. made last week in deference to the persistent agitation in the West. A drop in the rates on wheat of 3c. per cental, from 14 to 11c., will be a great boon to the Manitoba farmers, while the farmers of the Territories will benefit to the extent of 2c. per cental.

To secure this reduction Premier Roblin has consented to the Canadian Northern raising their rates from 10 to 11c.

These figures are for delivery at Fort William, and as prices in the West are determined by the prices at Fort William and Duluth, every reduction in the rates west of the head of navigation means so much more in the pockets of the grower.

When the Northern Pacific charter was granted, about 1888, the rate from points now fixed at 11c. was 24c. per 100 lbs. Upon the entrance of the Northern Pacific the rate went down to 21c. Two or three years later there was another drop to 17c., where it remained until the building of the Crow's Nest Pass Railway, when Mr. Sifton bargained for a reduction to 14c. in two years. Last year the Canadian Northern came down to 12c., but the Canadian Pacific did not follow, and now the C. P. R. rate takes another drop of 2c. from that fixed at the time of the Crow's Nest Pass bargain. That is, in 15 years the rates have been more than cut in two.

Macaroni by Machinery.

IT appears from a recently-issued Foreign Office report by Mr. Consul General Neville-Rolfe, on the trade of South Italy for 1902, says The Grocery Journal, that macaroni of all kinds is now made almost exclusively by machinery. It was thought some years ago that the old method could never be superseded, but improvements have been made in the machines, and whether it be that the public has become accustomed to the machine-made goods, or whether there is really no perceptible difference between them and the hand-made, the fact remains that the consumption increases annually. The motive power is usually water drawn from the mountain torrents and carried from the dam in a water furrow. A British firm here has been very successful in the production of improved machinery, which has enabled the factories to increase their output enormously and to reduce their labor account. It is largely this which has led to strikes in the trade during the past three years, skilled hands being in much less demand than under the old system, while there is hardly any difference, from the workman's point of view, in the employment of unskilled labor in the work of packing and drying, all the commoner sorts being dried on canes in the sun, or in the case of the small macaroni, such as is used for soups and kindred purposes, the paste is dried on the flat roofs of the factories. Torre dell' Annunziata is a town of 22,000 inhabitants, about 15 miles to the east of Naples. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the manufacture of macaroni, and there is a considerable and growing trade in its commodious harbor. Large quantities of grain are imported and exported again in the shape of macaroni. It is also a central depot of the coal trade, and of late years some large iron works have been established there. A good many British ships use the port in preference to Castellamare, which is about five miles further on, and is rather a military than a commercial port. The grain trade is largely carried in Greek bottoms, because there are no restrictions as to loading and water-line, and corn is carried by them in bulk without formalities. The wages also paid by the Greek companies are much lower than those of British companies, so that they are able to wrest a great deal of the Mediterranean trade out of our hands.

Price of Bread Reduced.

The Master Bakers' Association of Hamilton, feeling very keenly the competition from Toronto bakers and from others at outside points, reduced the price of bread on Monday last, the 12th instant, to 5 cents, and also decided to make the loaf the same size as that brought in from outside points. The following are the members of the association: M. Smith, J. Rodgers, W Reeves, jun., Harris Bros., Linkert Bros., R. B. Hill, T. Costello, R. Smith, W. Lees & Son, W. Dermody, A. P. VanFleet, E. W. Bateman, William Thresher, A. M. Ewing, William Hazell, W. Jarvis, E. Springstead, J. R. Beckett and Burke Bros.

"I'm sure I could do it

Cereal Notes.

E. D. Tillson, of The Tillson Milling Co., Tillsonburg, called on the GROCER on Saturday last.

Mr. Craig, of The Renfrew Milling Co., Renfrew, has been quite indisposed and confined to his house for the past few weeks.

Some time ago there was trouble between the master bakers and journeymen of Sacramento, Cal., during the progress of which many of the housewives of Sacramento took lessons in the art and science of breadmaking, so as to be independent in case of a strike. Most of them liked the results of their own handiwork so well that they no longer buy the output of the bakers, but make their own bread, and bakers' profits show quite a shrinkage in consequence thereof.

ENGLISH MANUFACTURING CONFECTIONERS TRY CANADIAN FLOUR.

AMONG the visitors welcomed at the Toronto office of THE GROCER last week were Messrs. George H. Davis and John Carr, directors of the large manufacturing confectionery house of Peek, Frean & Co., Limited, London, Eng. These gentlemen arrived in New York on the 3rd inst., and were on a flying visit to Canada and the United States for the purpose of looking into American business methods and organization, and more particularly of getting in touch with sources of supply for their raw material.

The firm is an extensive one, employing upward of 2,000 hands, and has specialized particularly on fancy biscuits, in which they do a large export trade, large quantities going to Australasia, where New Zealand proves the heaviest consumer. They also export considerable to Canada, their Canadian agents being Chas. Gyde & Co., of Montreal.

About a year ago the firm was made into a limited concern, and as an instance of that "go" which we are apt to regard as particularly American, it might be noted that they put a new sweet cake, Pat-a-cake, on the market recently, and since last Winter have been turning out 1,000 a minute day and night, and pride themselves on having been able to deliver every order the day on which it was received. City orders by 6 o'clock evening post are delivered first thing the succeeding morning.

Flour, butter and eggs were the supplies in which these gentlemen were particularly interested, and Friday afternoon was spent in visiting the trade in these lines. As a result a carload trial order in each of two grades of flour was placed with The Tillson Milling Co.; that, is two cars in all.

Messrs. Davis and Carr were particularly well pleased with the Ontario flour, which much surpasses in color and appearance the St. Louis make they have been using. As Winter wheat flour is required for confectionery, our Ontario product will find a good outlet should it prove as satisfactory on the final test.

In butter and eggs the inspection was not so satisfactory. The Canadian creamery butter, of course, was unexceptionable, but barred by the price. On the other hand our dairy product is of too ununiform a quality for their purposes. Doubtless good to begin with, it is badly marketed, and no two lots are alike. Mr. Davis suggested that this might be remedied by some such organization as is in vogue in Ireland, where the butter from the dairy is brought to the factory, where it is graded first, second and third, and promptly placed in cold storage, to be forwarded in first-class shape to the market.

Asked as to Russian butter, Mr. Davis said that it was found unreliable. Indeed, Siberian butter, while not adulterated, was the same chemically as margarine. On the other hand, however, the Russian Government were accomplishing marvels in the way of instructing their people in making better butter and in perfecting their cold storage and transportation facilities. The quality of Russian butter had indeed improved wonderfully in the last few years.

The Canadian eggs examined, both fresh and pickled, were found to be of good quality, but the whites were weak. The eggs used by Peek, Frean & Co. are mostly English, Italian and Danish, the latter of which are much larger and stronger than ours.

Mr. Davis and Mr. Carr, both young men, have a thorough technical knowledge of their business, the former being responsible for the buying of raw materials and the latter for the internal arrangements of the plant. The Board of Directors is a working board, every man on which puts in his 10 hours a day at the factory. Mr. Carr, whose father, Mr. Arthur Carr, is managing director of Peek, Frean & Co., and himself a director, prides himself on being able to go down to any part of the factory, roll up his sleeves and put through the work, or remedy anything that might have gone wrong. The common idea that the Briton of means stands aloof from his business is another of those myths which should be laid away.

The grand uncle of Mr. Carr, by the way, was the inventor of the first biscuit making machine, a machine which is still in use in the factory of Carr & Co., Carlyle. Mr. Carr thus comes of a family which has long been connected with the industry.

Messrs. Davis and Carr left Saturday night for Montreal, and will visit Boston, Chicago, St. Louis and Kansas City before returning to England.

Tobaccos, Cigars, and Smokers' Accessories

A DEPARTMENT FOR RETAIL MERCHANTS.

Cigar Leaf Grown in the United States.

THE cigar type grown in the United States is almost entirely consumed there, and in addition large quantities of Cuban and Sumatra tobacco are imported, says The American Cultivator. Domestic cigars are made up of wrappers, binders and fillers, which come from different districts. The Connecticut Valley produces two types of wrapper leaf, the broad leaf and the Havana seed leaf.

The broad leaf variety has a broad, silky leaf, very elastic, two-thirds of its length from the tip possessing rich grain and color. Small veins are also characteristic of the leaf. There is only one small area in the Connecticut Valley adapted to the production of this type.

The leaf of the Havana seed is smaller than the broad leaf, much narrower, and is exceedingly thin and silky, but possesses less elasticity and covering quality. It does not have the rich grain of the broad leaf, and the middle and lower parts are glossy and have large veins, rendering this portion of the leaf undesirable for wrapper purposes. The heavier leaves and those slightly damaged or of uneven color are used as binders. Badly torn leaves and trash are not suitable even for fillers, but are sold at a low price for export.

Both varieties are air-cured, packed in cases containing about 300 pounds, and left to ferment during the Winter, Spring and Summer months. This tobacco is sampled and sold at private sale, the packing being usually done by those who buy the tobacco from the farmer. Both the broad leaf and the Havana are graded into light, medium and dark wrappers, and light and dark seconds, all grades being arranged into four lengths. The Connecticut wrappers compete with the imported Sumatra, being nearer to it than any of the domestic tobaccos, except that grown in Florida from Sumatra seed.

The tobacco produced in Pennsylvania is characterized by a long, broad leaf. It is air-cured and packed in the same way as the Connecticut Valley tobacco. The Pennsylvania type has a dark, heavy-bodied leaf, unsuited for wrappers, but used mainly for fillers or binders. Some good wrapper leaf is grown on the light alluvial soils near the rivers. As a filler leaf this tobacco competes with the Zimmer Spanish, Little Dutch and Florida-grown Cuban, and is used mostly in the production of stogies, cheroots and other low-grade cigars. This tobacco is assorted by the packers into the following grades: Eighteen-inch, twenty-inch, twenty-two-inch and twenty-four-inch light and dark wrappers and binders; the shorter sizes are graded as fillers and are called Pennsylvania B's.

The New York tobacco comes between the Pennsylvania and Connecticut leaf, containing a very small proportion of wrappers. It is graded and packed in a manner similar to that employed in Connecticut.

Wisconsin produces principally a binder leaf, which is frequently used with the Connecticut wrapper and the Ohio or Pennsylvania filler. It is graded and packed like the Connecticut tobacco.

Cuba's Export of Leaf and Cigars.

THE Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Commerce and Labor at Washington is in receipt of the Cuban statistics on the exports of tobacco during the months of January, February and March, 1903. The total exports of unmanufactured tobacco for the quarter are given as 11,156,665 pounds, valued at $3,586,555. Of this the United States took by far the largest quantity, the exports to that country amounting to 6,416,726 pounds, valued at $2,749,861, being considerable over half the total exports of Cuban leaf. The next largest customer for Cuban leaf during the quarter was Spain, which took 3,064,181 pounds, valued at $462,040. Germany was third with 1,312,123 pounds, valued at $233,271. Of the three months the heaviest exports of leaf took place in February, when they reached within four hundred of four million pounds. Of the cigars exported, by far the largest quantity went to England, which took, during the quarter, 25,263,811 cigars, valued at $1,430,655. The January exports to England were 9,700,345 cigars; February, 8,131,430 cigars, and March, 7,432,036; so that the English trade decreased from month to month.

The United States was the next largest importer of Cuban cigars, during this period, taking 12,970,464 cigars, valued at $885,263. The exports to the United States by months are: January, 3,747,245; February, 4,973,558; March, 4,249,661. The total exports of cigars for the quarter are as follows: January, 18,498,916; February, 17,816,858; March, 17,791,867; total, 54,107,641 cigars, valued at $3,337,626.

For the same period a total of 3,781,373 boxes of cigarettes, valued at $109,288, were exported. Of this Colombia took the largest quantity, 702,685 in January, 624,908 in February, 387,107 in March; a total of 1,614,700 boxes, valued at $46,398.

Other dnmanufactured tobacco was exported during the quarter to a total of 32,862 pounds, valued at $13,062.

Life Saved by a Cigar.

IT may not be a sufficient excuse for cultivating a fondness for tobacco in general and expensive cigars in particular—if excuse be needed—but it's strangely true that cigars, generally good cigars, have at times saved valuable human lives.

M. Guizot, the great French historian, for instance, it is related by an exchange, owed his life to a cigar. One day he was walking in one of the gardens of Paris when he noticed that he was being followed by a shabbily-dressed man, who evidently had some purpose in view which included the historian.

M. Guizot finally sat down on a bench and his unwelcome follower seated himself there also, all the time watching him with a threatening air which might have proved disconcerting to a man troubled with "nerves." The historian was not troubled. He pulled a cigar out of his pocket and lighted it.

At that action the strange man arose and muttered that he had been mistaken, as the scoundrel he meant to kill did not smoke. The historian was considerably puzzled by this occurrence until he learned several days afterward that a man answering the description of the fellow who had followed him had been arrested for a murderous assault on a public official, against whom he had a grudge. He had mistaken M. Guizot for the official and no doubt would have made the assault on him had he not pulled out the cigar.

Who Has This Pipe?

Thirty-six years ago, Haskon M. Olson, a Scandinavian, now a prominent citizen of Portland, Oregon, was a poor immigrant travelling westward. At Milwaukee he was obliged to part with his pipe to raise money wherewith to buy food. To-day, a rich man, he yearns to regain it, and has published the following letter in The Milwaukee Sentinel:

"On July 1, 1867, I landed at Milwaukee with a large family, on my way from Christiania, Norway, to Northfield, Minn. I had only enough money to pay the freight on my effects, and could speak no English. I needed food for my five children. I owned a meerschaum pipe which was presented to me by my home Government for twenty-two years' faithful service as a printer. Engraved upon the bowl of the pipe was an inscription in the Norwegian language setting forth the fact.

"I offered the pipe for sale to buy bread. While waiting in the immigration rooms of the depot, a man whom I understood to be head of the railroad came to me and bought the pipe for $24. I write to say I would gladly give $50 now for its return. I am eighty-two years of age, a man of means, a pioneer of pioneers in the printing business, and I esteem the pipe."

Who has that pipe? Let him come forward and hand over the time-honored article to its ancient owner? He will thereby win the gratitude of the old Norseman and the goodwill of every lover of My Lady Nicotine in the land.

New Theory in Regard to Tobacco.

CENTENARIAN'S consoler though it be, tobacco is still, by some people, deemed a "poison." But it is going to be robbed of that terror. The British Medical Journal states that, according to recent investigations brought to the notice of the Vienna Academy of Sciences, the aroma of tobacco and the effects of tobacco on the smoker are not, as is commonly supposed, due to nicotine, but to a quite different chemical body, an alkaloid. Dr. Frenkel, the author of the paper submitted to the academy, states that he observed that the physiological action of tobacco does not correspond to the amount of nicotine which it contains, and he mentions that certain kinds of Havana tobacco, which are poor in nicotine, exercise a greater effect on the human system than other kinds which are rich in nicotine. These facts induced Dr. Frenkel to examine tobacco to see if he could find the chemical body which really is the cause of disturbing or soothing effects. From different kinds of tobacco he separated a yellow-looking salt. The further examination of this salt convinced Dr. Frenkel that the aroma and the effects of tobacco arise to a very large extent from the alkaloid, which is characterized by highly volatile properties. If the conclusions which Dr. Frenkel arrived at are correct, smoking may be freed of some of its evil effects, for it may be possible, in contradistinction to the case of nicotine, to remove from tobacco the property which acts deleteriously on the devotee of the "weed."

BILL NYE AS AN ADSMITH.

According to a story that is going the rounds of the newspapers the late Bill Nye wrote this advertisement:

"Owing to my ill-health, I will sell at my residence in township nineteen, range eighteen, according to governmental survey, one plush raspberry cow, aged 8 years. She is a good milker, and is not afraid of cars or anything else. She is of undaunted courage and gives milk frequently. To a man who does not fear death in any form she would be a great boon. She is very much attached to her present home by means of a stay chain, but she will be sold to any one who will agree to treat her right. She is one-fourth shorthorn and three-fourths hyena. I will also throw in a double-barrel shot gun, which goes with her. In May she usually goes away for a week or two and returns with a tall red calf with wabbly legs. Her name is Rose. I would rather sell her to a non-resident."

Department of Advertising Suggestion and Criticism.

Edited by W. ARTHUR LYDIATT, Toronto.

The Progressive Business Man Leads—Not Follows—His Customers.

SOME manufacturers and selling agents view advertising as a tribute required by the papers. Even among the retailers there are many who consider it a necessary evil, and not a few who look upon it as a gamble, pure and simple; while the number of those who rightly esteem it as a genuine business-like force, is comparatively small.

The manufacturer or selling agent who regards his entire advertising expenditure as a tribute to the papers need not change his views all at once. But in the name of common sense let him do this: If he pays out certain sums of money for space, whether the money or the space be large or small, let him use that space for the greatest possible good. When it is used otherwise than in a progressive, business-like way, it not only fails to do him the good that he pays for, but it actually brings to his business a certain measure of discredit. He therefore buys a handicap.

If he sends out a salesman to interview half-a-dozen possible customers a day, he wants him clean, neat, becomingly dressed, easy of manner and convincing of speech. He will be willing to pay a vast difference in price as between one candidate for salesmanship and another. He will even buy engraved stationery as better than lithographed—and then, behold, he will put a grotesque cut, a weak, poorly-worded argument—an absurd, unbusiness-like statement, in the papers, that reach, not merely half a dozen, but several hundreds, or, perhaps, thousands, of possible customers.

That sort of man does vastly worse than simply to neglect his advertising. His loss is far greater than a man who pays a fixed charge per month for electric current and still gropes around in the dark for his customers, never using the power he pays for. This false advertiser actually pays for power to increase the business darkness all about him. His advertising fails to command the public interest that must precede public approval—if, indeed, this one weak spot does not compel unfair prejudice that his total business organization does not deserve. An advertisement that is poorly designed, badly written and cheaply illustrated, is one of the most expensive luxuries in which a business man can indulge.

The man who views advertising as a gamble need not be seriously considered. While advertising has not become an exact science, it is recognized as a business force. Applied rightly to a sound business proposition, it cannot fail. Regarded as a gamble, it is pretty certain to turn out only that. Even the best salesman seldom takes orders on the first call. Never expect an advertisement to do more than a trained human being.

The one great thought to get firmly in your mind is that largely by your advertising is judged your business character, your fairness, your manners, yourself. No matter how small a town you live in, your local paper reaches people who have no acquaintance with you, no prejudice for or against you. They read your advertisement with wide-open minds. If what they read commands their interest, their respect, their confidence, their custom, then it is well done. If it creates no interest, it is indifferently done. If it arouses doubt as to its honesty, if it fails to carry with it the certainty of your sincerity, then it is most surely an injury instead of a help. A single advertising attack seldom brings results. The buying public is only human, and often forgets. Experience has shown that it is much better to interest and convince a few people a great many times than a great many people a few times.

Next to being truthful, advertising should be interesting and suggestive.

After all, the word "advertising" originally meant and still means information. When Shakespeare wrote "We are advertised by our loving friends," it was a simple announcement meaning "We are informed by our loving friends." In the popular mind advertising has grown to mean "exploitation," "boom talk," etc. They who follow advertising most closely realize that information is and always must be its groundwork, and if by suggestion, by argument, by illustration, one can make this information attractive, persuasive, then one has succeeded precisely as does the lawyer who successfully handles his case.

The first problem of the advertiser is to establish the importance of his advertising and its relations to the other departments of his business. This is true of every advertiser, whether he be a merchant dealing directly with the public or through the retailer. Of course the advertiser to whom this is of the greatest importance is the retailer who sells directly to his trade through the medium of the newspaper. The newspaper becomes his rostrum. It is the place upon the housetops from which his business purposes are proclaimed, through which his store policies are made familiar, as well as his source of publicity for the various lines of merchandise he handles.

The relative importance of advertising in business policy cannot be overestimated. If an advertiser believes it to be of little or no account, it surely will be so. If, on the other hand, he lifts it above the other branches of his business, it is pretty certain to stimulate the development of these other branches, so that eventually they become worthy of the advertising.

When you read a news item in The Evening Star, you put your own interpretation upon it. When you read it in The Evening Globe or Evening Nation you do likewise, and this interpretation is very apt to be different in each case. It has come to be equally true of advertising. When you read the announcement of one house, you are very apt to make allowance for exaggeration. When you read the advertisement of another house, you are inclined to believe that the facts are exactly as printed, but, in any case, that they are not overstated. Thus it is manifest that an advertiser creates his own reputation in the minds of his readers. The measure of belief in his statements depends entirely upon himself.

Remember always that you must not only interest but convince a prospective purchaser that your goods are what you claim for them—and retain a little margin, which when declared, will demonstrate that you have understated rather than overstated the quality of your product.

The experience of most successful advertisers has been that there are certain months in the year during which it is especially advisable to reach out for possible buyers by advertising.

These months are July, December, February, June, November, March, August, January, September, May, October and April.

Give real information about the article, point out its advantages over others, mention its beauties, and suggest new uses for it.

Above all, constantly keep in mind that your one fixed purpose is to fill the reader with the desire to buy—and this cannot be done by filling the advertisement with your desire to sell.

Whittemore's Polishes

ONCE USED ALWAYS USED

The Oldest and Largest Manufacturers of Shoe Polishes in the World

"GILT EDGE"

The only black dressing for Ladies' and Children's shoes that positively contains oil. Softens and preserves. Imparts a beautiful lustre. Always put up in 6-oz. bottles (not in 4-oz. or less as is often the case). Its use saves time, labor and brushes,

Shines Without Brushing

Always ready to use.

Retail Price, 25c.

"OILYCREAM" Polish

For all kinds of black shoes. A polishing cloth and a cloth for applying the cream in every carton. Each tube contains enough for about 100 shines and the polish is so durable that one or two applications a week is sufficient. This cream is a perfect leather food and makes shoes wear longer.

Can carry it in your trunk, bag or pocket. Never leaks or spills. A complete shoe polishing outfit for 25c.

"DANDY" Russet Combination

For cleansing and polishing all kinds of russet, brown or yellow colored boots and shoes.

It will also clean and restore old russet reins, riding saddles, bicycle saddles, and all articles made from brown or russet leather to their original color and finish.

Retail Price, 25c.

"ELITE" Combination

The only first-class article for Ladies' and Gents' "Box Calf," "Vici Kid" and all Black Shoes. The ONLY polish endorsed by the manufacturers of "Box Calf" Leather. Contains oil and positively nourishes and preserves leather, and makes it wear longer. Blacks and polishes.

Retail Price, 25c.

"SUPERB" Patent Leather Paste

For giving all kinds of patent or shiny leather shoes a quick, brilliant and waterproof lustre without injury to the leather. When you want the saddle and blinds of your harness, also your buggy dashers, to look as bright as when new, use our Patent Leather Paste, and remember that the polish is waterproof. Retail Price, 10c.

"BOSTON" Waterproof Polish

A black liquid for men's and boys' shoes. Produces a patent leather shine without brushing.

The "Boston" being waterproof in rain or snow, it is largely used to KEEP THE FEET DRY, thus preventing colds and rheumatism. Men and boys who dislike to wear rubbers should use "Boston," as it sheds water like a rubber, and will not rub off and ruin their trousers. It is a favorite with all the first-class liverymen, as it will not rub off and soil the hands. Will make an old harness look like new. For carriage tops it is unequalled. Keep your rubber boots and shoes looking like new by the use of "Boston." Apply with sponge attached to cork.

Retail Price, 25c.

YEAST.

You can experiment with most anything in the grocery line, but not with Yeast Cakes, especially those which are the production of Experimenters. YOU cannot want any better Yeast than we manufacture, for your customers don't, and no better can be made than our 2 celebrated brands, ROYAL YEAST and CREAM YEAST.

You cannot expect the inferior goods (so-called Yeasts which are only cheap imitations of our well-known goods) to yield you a better profit, for, considering the extra trouble you will have and the dissatisfaction to your customers, it will surely be a losing transaction for you.
Why do any experimenting ?

Such Yeast as these would-be competitors have been offering the trade in Canada during the past 10 to 12 years cannot in any way compare with our goods. In fact, Yeast made 20 years ago by us was better than they are producing to-day. We have made big strides in advance in the Yeast business.

IMPRESSIONS OF THE GREAT WEST

Gathered During a Transcontinental Tour with the Canadian Manufacturers' Association.

CANADA is termed a country of magnificent distances. No one can realize what this means until he has made the journey over that part of the country lying west of the Great Lakes, and even then he cannot comprehend all that is included within these magnificent distances. That, at any rate, is the confession I have to make after a journey of 6,500 miles across prairies, mountains, lakes, bays and gulfs with the members of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association in their recent transcontinental tour.

Our Train on the Prairie.

Great indeed is the distance was that we travelled during the 23½ days of our itinerary, that part of the country which we saw was relatively smaller than the thin black line on the map which denotes the course of the transcontinental railway. But even the relatively small part of the Great West through which we passed is at least beyond my ability to comprehend and hence to adequately describe. What the eye sees for the first time in making the journey from the head of the Great Lakes to the shores of the Pacific simply staggers one. To merely record impressions is the best one can do. To gain man was exemplified in the Canadian Pacific Railway, and in this connection I have a confession to make. Like many others I have drifted into the ranks of those who were of the opinion that the Canadian Pacific Railway had been too generously treated by the Government of the country when it undertook the construction and operation of the transcontinental road. But the Canada of to-day is not the Canada of twenty years ago. Then our faith in the possibilities of the country was but as a grain of mustard seed with that which, based upon the material development of the last few years, exists to-day. It needed, therefore, a great deal more bravery, and consequently a great deal more material en-way was so great and demanding such faith in the possibilities of the country that the freight and passenger rates become less immoderate and the delays in the transportation more excusable. This may not be the popular view; but it is the right view. There are hundreds of miles through which the railway runs from which practically not a cent of revenue can be earned. This will not always be so; but at present we cannot get away from the fact that it is so. And then there are the mountains that the trains climb and the intricate valleys that have to be traversed. No pen can ever describe them or brush paint them. The best of efforts are but poor attempts. Looking from the car window down into swift-flowing rivers and gaping canyons, awed in their beauty, or craning the neck to feast the eye on the glory of the snow-capped mountains, as we curve in and out through intricate valleys which appear to be without possible exit, one is awe struck and bewildered at the magnificence and majesty of all he sees, and wonders what manner of men those were who had the faith and courage to build a railway where physical difficulties so abounded.

would be more conducive to national self-reliance and national sentiment than such a trip across the continent as that enjoyed by the members of The Canadian Manufacturers' Association. The avowed object of the excursion was educational. In other words the paramount object was to learn more about the Great West. As fully 80 per cent. of the excursionists had never made the journey before, it is quite evident that they had a great deal to learn. And they have learned a great deal. But like the man who has acquired knowledge, they have discovered that, as far as the Canadian Great West is concerned they have a great deal more to learn. Although they travelled nearly 7,000 miles, and under the most favorable circumstances, being accommodated with a special train and accorded exceptional privileges for visiting different points of interest, they now realize that the great extent of the territory which they saw is but a very small part of the whole. It is this that tends to develop our national sentiment.

Secretary Bell and his Baby, supported by Mr. D. Waterous.

Burke says that "education is the chief defence of nations." A journey across the Dominion from ocean to ocean is certainly an education that will strengthen the national sentiment of whoever makes it. For years my faith in the future of the Dominion of Canada has been strong. But the faith I had before my recent trans-continental journey and that which I now possess are of two different types. The one was born of what I had heard, the other of what I have seen as well as heard. One sometimes hears citizens of the United States refer to their own country as "God's Country." After travelling across our own Great West one concludes that "God's Country" is to be found within the borders of the Dominion. In the eastern part of the Dominion nature has set apart a land rich in agriculture and vast in manufacturing possibilities. From Winnipeg to the Rockies, a distance of about a thousand miles, and from the boundary line to the south for a thousand or more miles to the north, is an area whose possibilities for the production of cereals and the raising of cattle are equalled by no country in the world. Stretching through the Rockies for 500 miles is a land whose richness is by no means confined to the unsurpassed beauty of the mountains or the minerals buried within them. Between the mountain ranges are fertile valleys, in many of which apples, pears, plums and other small fruits of excellent quality are produced, and roots, oats and corn of giant proportions grown, to say nothing of the excellent cattle that browse in the valleys and on the hillsides. The rivers that rush pell-mell between the mountains and flow swiftly along valleys and at the bottom of deep canyons contain in themselves resources for the development of industrial power not equalled by any other province in the Dominion. This may be scarcely credited by some, but it is a fact that impressed itself upon me as we sped alongside or crossed and recrossed such magnificent and swift-flowing rivers as the Columbia, the Beaver, the Fraser,

CANADA'S NECESSITIES IN TRADE AFFAIRS

BY MR. J. D. ALLAN.

THE primary duty of all governments is to further the interests of the trade and commerce they control. This is only possible to any extent where countries have a department of commerce that is more than a bureau for the registration of statistics, one that must be in touch with the necessities of purchasing countries, and able to direct to possible markets producers who are desirous of opening up new avenues for the disposal of their wares. Its head should be one trained in commerce, with a thorough knowledge of the trend of the trade of the world and the adaptability of the productions of the country to the foreign markets.

KEENNESS OF COMPETITION.

Never in the history of commerce has competition been so keen, never before have manufacturers given such keen attention to the cost of production, seeking out every new device that science has discovered, or genius invented, that will assist in lowering the cost of the finished product and making it adaptable to the needs of some (to them) unknown part of the consuming world.

COMMERCE AND WARFARE.

It has been said the wars of the future are to be commercial. If the true meaning of this be, because of the keenness of competition between countries for trade, how important it is that philosophers, however gifted, or politicians, however sympathetic, be not allowed to control the business destinies of our country, but that the one department, so vital to the increase of our trade and the development of our resources, shall have as its head a man of business experience and business ideas, able to direct the business interests of the country; in short, a man of wide experience and genuine enthusiasm in commercial affairs.

THE DEPARTMENT OF TRADE AND COMMERCE.

What Britain needs to-day more than anything else is a Minister of Commerce, and what Canada needs is the realization that her Department of Trade and Commerce, to be of any material aid to the country, requires complete reorganization. Business methods change, but not so with the necessities of changing to meet them is apparently the view of this department in the Canadian Government. Has any commercial interest ever discovered of what value it has been or what aid it has rendered in the extension of the country's commerce? Has any serious effort been made to follow any suggestions in the reports of any of the commissioners sent to various countries at different times? Under both political parties the result has been the same, and business interests have suffered in consequence.

WAKE UP, CANADIANS.

It cannot be denied Canada has increased her volume of trade since 1896, and no one can but rejoice at this, but we must not forget that certain exceptional circumstances have contributed to this result, and the commerce of the world increased 2½ times in 30 years. And is it not a weakness of some of our people to be continually exhibiting the comparative positions of our trade in former years with that of to-day as evidence of our increasing cleverness? Instead of looking for the commodities which should be profitably disposed of in other markets, that are now being wasted at home, we are boasting of the success we have met with in a few special lines in agricultural produce, in some of which, owing to increased competition and (I regret to say) the questionable quality exported, we have probably reached our limit. Notably this is the case with our butter, of which we supply Britain with 5 per cent. of her consumption, while Siberia, which has only been engaged in dairying for 10 years, already supplies her with 25 per cent. of her wants.

THE DEAD MEAT TRADE.

In the dead meat trade of Britain, so large and profitable to Australia, New Zealand, the Argentine Republic and Russia, Canada has no share because of the want of proper facilities for slaughtering the animals and utilizing the by-products, which means the absolute waste of 35 per cent. of the value of the animal. Surely this is a matter for the Minister of Agriculture of Ontario to investigate and propose a remedy in the interests of this province, and a potent means for the Premier to adopt in his oft-expressed intention to "Build up Ontario."

OUR FOREIGN FRUIT TRADE.

In the abundance of fruit we have and the little we realize from it compared to what might be profitably made from it, Germany could teach us valuable lessons in her volume of trade in fruit pulp, 3,000,000 pounds of which is annually made from fruit entirely wasted here.

THE UTILIZATION OF WASTE PRODUCTS.

We are making large expenditures for immigrants we desire to attract, and with this no one will find fault if judiciously expended, but the expenditure of money in the investigation of anything likely to be valuable to those already here does not receive the same attention. As an instance, in this country, where dairying is so important an interest, enormous quantities of skimmed milk are utilized only for feeding calves or pigs. In Sweden the skim milk is made into a powder by the "Ekenberg" process, so called after the inventor, the value of which last year represented a total of $10,720,000, or more than the value of their annual export of butter, which is slightly under $10,000,000. The nutritive value of 2 lbs. of milk powder is equal to that of 2 lbs. of boneless meat, or about three times as great as the white of an egg. With the value of the skim milk placed at 3c. per gallon it is said the powder can be sold at 8½c. per lb.; 2 1-5 lbs. of milk powder dissolved in water will produce 22 lbs. of milk. Milk powder, it is said, is suitable for any culinary purpose. These statistics I received in Stockholm, and have every reason to believe them reliable.

EGG EXPORTING METHODS.

In the export of eggs we still follow methods far less profitable than some other countries, notably Russia, and as a consequence net returns are much less satisfactory. One could continue instances in which our claim to business shrewdness is not sustained, and loss accrues to our producers because some special knowledge is lacking in departments of Government that should be in touch with them. There is a commercial value, the total of which would surprise our people, in what is now absolutely wasted in every line of our agricultural and kindred interests for want of some needed direction.

PROGRESS OF THE WEST.

The Minister of Customs, in his speech at the Convention Banquet of the Manufacturers' Association in September, stated that agricultural implements made in Canada are to be found in twenty-five different countries of the world. This is a most encouraging announcement, but it is feared there has been no such distribution of any other manufactured product. In the settlement of our great West our chief anxiety seems to be to get in immigrants, and forgetting that production and distribution must go hand in hand, we are not paying sufficient attention to the securing of markets for the increased output resulting.

ORIENTAL TRADE.

In the discussion of our railway projects we only refer to the possibility of an eastbound traffic. Do we forget our position as a midway station in the route of the world's commerce? Have we ever considered the possibility of oriental trade where undoubtedly exist the greatest undeveloped opportunities for trade? We already have steam communication with Japan and China, but the development of trade has not been vigorously pushed. Think of the position, directly facing us across the Pacific from Singapore and Bangkok to Vladivostok. There is a coast line of 4,000 miles and a population of over five hundred millions to be supplied. The character of their requirements, it may be urged, is below that of any other people, but is it not a fact that they are slowly adopting western ideas? In the articles of food, where ten years ago not a pound of flour was imported into China, last year from the Pacific coast ports of the United States, about ten million dollars was the value of this commodity sent there. And as an evidence of the growth of the United States trade with China, in 1880 the value of their exports to China was $1,101,383, and in 1902 they had grown to $24,722,906.

VALUE OF CHINA'S TRADE.

The foreign trade of China now amounts to less than $1.00 per head. With the opening up of the interior, and improvement of conditions, this will soon increase to $5.00, which, with a population of four hundred millions, will represent $2,000,000,000.

POSSIBILITIES OF TRADE WITH JAPAN.

In 1870 Japan was an unknown factor in trade. To-day she has a foreign trade of $6.00 per head, or $360,000,000. Korea has a foreign trade of $20,000,000; Siam of $40,000,000. The foreign trade of the United States Pacific coast in 1892 was $92,566,000, and in 1902, $142,958,000.

AN INTERESTING FIELD FOR TRADE.

We have a feeling of pride in contemplating the increased foreign trade of Canada, but is it not a fact that an infinitesimally small amount of this can be credited to China? And yet China presents to-day the most important and most interesting field for trade, not yet extensively exploited. And being directly opposite our Pacific Coast, China affords a wonderful commercial opportunity, worthy of our best efforts.

In conversing with a Chinese merchant at Nijni Novgorod, I learned that when the Yangtse river was first opened, two steamers were sufficient for the trade. That is only twenty-five years ago. To-day a finer and larger class of steamers than now navigate the Mississippi is necessary to carry the freight, which in value amounts to seventy-five million dollars annually. China has at present about five hundred miles of railway. What will be the effect on commerce when railways penetrate every portion of the interior?

WHAT RUSSIA IS DOING.

An instance of the expected value of Chinese trade on the part of Russia is shown in her remitting the duty on all tea imported over the Trans-Siberian Railway; in the establishment at Vladivostok of a college at an annual cost of $55,000, with fifteen teachers, and attended by about eighty students; of another at Moscow, at an expense of $30,000, with nine teachers and seventy students, in which the languages and customs of the Chinese and Eastern Asiatic peoples are tanght. The German Government also has a similar institution at Berlin for the same purpose, showing what a keen eye to the future these nations possess, and yet I venture to say, if any one were to apply to any government department in Canada for definite information on subjects relating to possible Asiatic commerce, it could not be supplied.

CHINA IS AWAKENING.

That China is awaking to the necessity of letting the world know of her resources is proven by her having for the first time in her history appropriated from the Imperial Treasury $300,000 for the expense of exhibiting at the St. Louis Exposition, and with other Asiatic countries has applied for one-third of the space in the "Varied Industries" department. This has probably been decided upon because of the satisfactory increase of United States trade with her, as shown by the increase of imports from 2 9-10 per cent. in 1890 to 9 3-10 per cent. in 1902. The United States occupied, in 1902, fourth place among the countries from which China drew her imports, while in 1870 she was at the bottom of the list, and while the United States Bureau of Statistics reports a reduction of $106,000,000 in total exports for 1902, it is very significant that their exports to China increased $14,000,000 over 1901.

CANADA'S PROXIMITY TO THE ORIENT.

Does not our proximity favor our entering as a competitor for the trade of a country in which these figures prove our neighbors found so little resistance? The result of our successful prosecution of this trade would be a reviving influence in the condition of British Columbia, which would react beneficially upon the whole country, and indeed it might be within the range of possibility to employ some of her magnificent mountains in furnishing water power for the generation of electricity for the motors of factories yet to be erected for supplying demands from trans-Pacific consumers. Is there any other possibility that will so powerfully stimulate Pacific Coast development and create a permanent and increasing demand for the too slowly developing natural resources of that portion of our land?

CANADA'S NEED.

The need of Canada to-day is to quietly and judiciously consider what are the forces of competition arrayed against her, and in what way can she successfully meet this competition. Business to-day is a science. No great success can be achieved unless the merchant be possessed of large ideas, with ability to direct and organize, and the object in view in presenting these rambling thoughts has been solely to arouse the commercial community to assert itself.

LACK OF BUSINESS MEN IN GOVERNMENTAL AFFAIRS.

Time and again have we seen our country despoiled of portions of her territory, because, as I believe, of the absence of practical business men's advice and assistance in determining the issues. Had business men been consulted, Alaska would not have been allowed to become United States territory for the paltry sum of $7,000,000, and we would have been spared our present humiliation in our latest sacrifice. If Britain is losing her pre-eminence in trade, it can be attributed to the absence of the commercial element in the counsels of the country to a greater degree than will perhaps be conceded.

We boast of our great country, and it is indeed a noble heritage, but let us not forget that mere bulk is no advantage. Greatness consists, not in breadth, but in the skill and resource with which the varied interests of our country are directed. The development of our resources, aided by scientific invention, will outrun the dreams of the wildest enthusiast. In advance of this, let us, as far-seeing merchants, conscious of the responsibility resting upon us, prepare for the distribution of these varied products to distant peoples, inspired by the thought that while bringing profitable returns to our own people, we are satisfying the wants of some fellow-being, and assisting in solving the problem of economic distribution, so that every human being on the surface of the earth may have his legitimate needs satisfied.

ELECTRICAL NOVELTIES.

There is a growing demand for the various electrical novelties which are now being placed on this market. This is not a fad or fancy which will soon be satisfied or will go out of fashion, but is based on a practical utility of most of the articles offered, and the sale of these goods is only just commencing.

The American-Electrical Novelty & Mfg. Co. are constantly introducing new specialties at a price that makes them easy sellers for the trade. These goods are attractive for the holiday trade and as the company guarantee all their products to the trade there should be little risk in making these a feature of the Christmas stock.

Simplified Bookkeeping—Accounts on Call.

By J. S. McGUIRL, Local Manager Briggs Ledger System Co., Toronto.

DURING the past twenty years the demand has steadily increased for an office system that would do away with the tedious work of rendering accounts every month.

Opening Ledger

This demand was at first satisfied by what was known as the "Boston Petty Ledger," consisting of a set of indexes with perforated bill heads, a paste-board cover and tied with a shoe string.

This was sold by Mr. F. W. Briggs, the inventor, and each year improvements were made so that now it is sold with a neat case, a steel arch and duplicate sheets by means of which you can keep a copy of every account and render your bills in a few minutes each month.

The bill heads have a stub at the top on which you keep a record of the day book pages, salesman's number, amount of sales, dates of sales, accounts opened and closed.

It is a ledger, journal, index, bill head and merchandise account combined under one perpetual binding that can be opened and closed in ten seconds.

It is now manufactured by The Briggs Ledger System Co., Limited, 75 York St., Toronto, in four sizes, made to suit any class of trade and should interest any merchant who values his time in his business. The accompanying cuts show the ledger, how it is opened and closed, the bindings, etc., which are so simple that any one can operate with ease.

THE GOSPEL OF WORK.

If the concern where you are employed is all wrong, and the Old Man a curmudgeon, remarks The Spice Mill, it may be well for you to go to the Old Man and confidentially, quietly and kindly tell him that he is a curmudgeon. Explain to him that his policy is absurd and preposterous. Then show him how to reform his ways, and you might offer to take charge of the concern and cleanse it of all its secret faults.

Do this, or if for any reason you should prefer not, then take your choice of these: Get out, or get in line. You have got to do one or the other—now make your choice.

If you work for a man, in Heaven's name, work for him.

If he pays you wages that supply you your bread and butter, work for him—speak well of him, think well of him, stand by him and stand by the institution he represents.

I think if I worked for a man I would work for him.

I would not work for him a part of the time, and then the rest of the time work against him. I would give an undivided service or none. If put to the pinch, an ounce of loyalty is worth a pound of cleverness. If you must vilify, condemn and eternally disparage, why, resign your position, and when you are outside, damn to your heart's content But, I pray you, so long as you are a part of an institution, do not condemn it. Not that you will injure the institution — not that — but when you disparage the concern of which you are a part, you disparage yourself.

Subjects Being Discussed at Ottawa

Written for The Canadian Grocer by a Member of Parliament

THE general public wonders why the session at Ottawa is so abnormally long, and various explanations are given by the members. "Obstruction on the part of the Opposition," say the Government supporters. "Necessary discussion of Government measures ill-advised and badly drafted," retorts His Majesty's loyal Opposition. "Too much talk," says the observant fellow, who freely speaks his mind.

The fact is that the country is growing rapidly, that that means a large increase of public business, that this business necessarily takes time to transact, but the critic who alleges that there is a deal of unnecessary debate is well within the mark.

The average member (in fact we might even say every member) is naturally anxious to retain the good opinion of the majority of his constituents. He argues that if they do not quite often see his name figuring in the papers they will imagine that he is either lazy or a pronounced "back-bencher." Hence it is that the talk is as often directed to the people at home as to the members of the House, and the same arguments are advanced and attacked again and again with wearisome iteration.

A long session, such as this, will have a bad effect on the personnel of Parliament, and if such a lengthy sitting becomes the rule instead of the exception, there will be a poor look-out indeed for the standard of parliamentary representation. We want at Ottawa the best men in the country. We want leading men from every walk of life, for every interest, sooner or later, is affected by the laws made here, and the leaders in professional and industrial life will refuse to seek election if their time is to be taken from their various pursuits for more than half of each year. Already the danger is in sight. Already some of the best men here are declaring that they cannot seek re-election; and, while we are sure from the experience of other years that many a threat of retirement is made which will be overcome by the pressure and enthusiasm in the Party Convention; nevertheless a percentage of men we can ill afford to spare will be lost as a result of this needlessly protracted session.

Strangers visiting the gallery sometimes wonder why the House is so thin. If they put in a month here listening continuously to the speech-making they would consider the members models of endurance to be in the House even as much as they are. To say that there is but a grain of wheat in a barrel of chaff would be putting the case a little too strongly; but to say that the barrel is half wheat and half chaff would be altogether overestimating the wheat crop.

These being the facts—and they are indisputable—it is not to be wondered at if the members thoroughly enjoy a funny speech when someone is merciful enough to deliver it.

Now, there is no man in the House more capable of such a performance than Mr. Rufus Pope, member for Stanstead. Mr. Pope is a man of extremely good ability, and whenever he speaks, which is not too often, he is listened to by the whole House, for he has the saving grace of humor. He chose the occasion of the presentation of the agricultural estimates for the delivery of one of his characteristic utterances, and the whole thing was so good that we must reproduce it for the benefit of our readers. The various Departments frequently publish pamphlets prepared by their experts along scientific lines, and from these no doubt much valuable information is obtainable. Occasionally, however, they arouse the mirth of practical men. Now, Mr. Pope is nothing if not practical, and he is a farmer with a wide experience; hence it is not to be wondered at that he found food for much fun in the publication of a learned treatise on how to wring a chicken's neck. We would but detract from the performance if we did other than quote verbatim. After a little preliminary banter with the Minister of Agriculture, with whom Mr. Pope is always ready to break a spear, he said:—"But I observe here a long description of wringing the chickens' necks. Great heavens, Sir, I have wrung the necks of chickens and some other things ever since I was ten years old. This is what the article says: 'Kill chickens by dislocating the neck; that is, simply wring the neck with the left hand.' Don't take the right hand, if you do the job will not be properly done. 'With the left hand hold the chicken's legs and wings in a firm grasp.' If you are left-handed you cannot do the job. No left-handed man need apply. 'Place the first finger of the right hand'—Mind, not the second finger. If you have lost the first finger you are not in it. 'Place the first finger of the right hand on the right side of the neck, and the remaining fingers on the left side. Grasp the head in the hollow of the hand, with the fork of the fingers behind the head where it joins the neck, the back of the chicken being upward; hold the legs against the left hip.' If you should put them against the right hip the whole thing is bust; the killing of this chicken would be a failure; the meat would not be worth sending to market. It would be completely spoiled. 'Hold the legs against the left hip and the head near the thigh or knee.' It does not give you a choice. Mr. Chairman, this is interesting to you as a physician, to know the proper way to kill a chicken. 'Bend the head backward as far as possible, and at the same time stretch the neck, and when it is dislocated, immediately pull the head.' If you don't the chicken will wake up. You must not give it a second. It says 'immediately;' the instructions are specific. The word should be underlined. 'Immediately pull the head to you 1½ inches from the neck.' If you pull it more than 1½ inches the whole job is incomplete. 'Hold the wings firmly'—This is an important matter: that you must hold the wings of chickens at all times with a firm grasp. 'Hold the wings firmly after killing.' Even after the chicken is dead you must not let go; it is dangerous to let go of the wings—'and allow the chicken's head to hang down so that the blood can run down in the neck. The head is attached to the body simply by the skin of the neck.' That is, you stretch it 1½ inches, hang on to the wings after the chicken is dead, and let its head drop down. What a cruel act, Mr. Chairman, towards this beautiful bird, who but a few moments before was crowing around the barn-yard, so proud of himself that you might almost think he was the Minister of Agriculture. There he is with his head hanging down after you have twisted it off. I think, Mr. Chairman, that there are farmers in this country who might possibly be able to wring a chicken's neck without those elaborate instructions contained in this pamphlet, which is issued by the Minister of Agriculture." The Minister of Agriculture here assured Mr. Pope in a bantering way that he would have a new edition published with his annotations, to

It is getting to be a frequent occurrence for members to read to the House newspaper reports and comments, for the purpose of asking questions with regard to them, or of denying some allegation therein contained.

An old member, a man who has served 20 years in the House, assured the writer that the practice was being very much abused as compared with former days. In those good old times, he asserted, a man would have been hooted down for attempting to take up the time of the House with such trivialities. This is all very well, but in many cases a member has no other way of making a really effectual denial of some story circulating in the press. Where honorable gentlemen seem to err is in speaking at too great length. They do not confine themselves to an emphatic and concise denial, but argue the question. Thus, one member, properly aggrieved at a newspaper report that he wished to exclude the people from the corridors, took well on to half an hour to clear himself of the charge. Recently another honorable member read from the press a report that Lord Alvinston had privately announced to a friend that he would give judgment against the Canadian Government in connection with the Alaskan Boundary case. We give this as an example of the proper use of the practice, for Mr. Bell, the member referred to, confined himself to a straight question, asking the Government if they had any advices on the subject. The matter was one of large importance, and yet no time was lost in connection with it.

Sir William Mulock has made still another very satisfactory announcement with regard to the financial affairs of his Department. Having taken it over with an annual deficit of more than $750,000, he has given the country penny postage, has greatly increased postal facilities, and this year actually shows a splendid surplus of nearly $400,000. This is indeed a satisfactory showing, and the Postmaster-General is entitled to much credit, though of course the large increase in the general trade and commerce of the country has helped him very materially.

It is strange, too, how cheaply the work of this Department is done throughout the country. What is the glamor that surrounds a Government contract? And yet there must be such a thing, for men undertake Government work in connection with post offices and mail carrying for prices that they would turn down with a sneer if proposed by a private individual for the same onerous work. In many cases mail routes are taken for a yearly sum that does not much more than pay the cost of the hay, oats and blacksmithing required by the horse employed to make the trips. In hundreds of cases a post-office is kept open for the princely sum of $12 a year. Just fancy keeping a room for the use of the general public and someone to run to their beck and call for $1 a month. Of course in many little country places a small stock of store goods is put in, and the post-office used rather as an advertisement to draw customers than for what it brings in itself. There are, however, still many cases in which the dollar a month is taken for the work itself, and with no other object in view than the earning of this sum. A case came up this session which is curious evidence of the value set upon money by people in some localities. A post-office had been vacated by the post-master, and an applicant wrote as follows to his member: "Dear Sir, I will take the office at $15 a year; Mr. B. only got $12 for the job, but I'll be hanged if I'll do it for any such money." The member had to turn down this ingenuous appeal. No exception could be made by the Department, he was told, which paid on a fixed scale, according to the amount of work done in each office, and, of course, this large increase of 25 per cent. was out of the question.

Now Sir William proposes to apply some of his surplus to the increase of the salaries of those who are paid such low amounts as we have been quoting. This will be undoubtedly popular throughout the country, and even those who are not among the "fee-fed" officials who have been fattening at the public crib on the rich diet we have mentioned, will not begrudge a little more pap to the men and women who hand out the daily mail to them for 365 days in the year.

KEEP A-MOVING.

There are hundreds of articles that lie on the grocer's shelf and are never touched unless asked for, remarks The American Grocer. This means that one or more articles can be pushed to the front and made a specialty throughout every week in the year, thereby making the store attractive and causing people to talk about it and come to it. Keep a-moving, is a good plan for the retail grocer. Just try the experiment with plum pudding, materials for Thanksgiving delicacies. Pile out the walnuts, filberts, pecans, see how much faster they will sell than when placed out of sight. It may prove in your case to be something new.

A BIG LOAF.

Among the novelties to be exhibited at the Louisiana Purchase Exhibition in 1904 is a mammoth loaf of bread about 600 times the size of an ordinary 5c. loaf. A Mississippian from Moss Point will be the creator. A special oven will be built to bake the giant loaf, and Mr. Moss claims that the loaf will be as perfectly baked and as edible as the smaller variety. But the gentleman from Moss Point hasn't tried it yet.

OTTAWA AS A GROCERY CENTRE.

THE city of Ottawa, situated as it is on the highway between Montreal and the West, is assuming a position as a distributing centre, particularly in groceries, among the cities of Canada that is to be reckoned with. The volume of trade emanating from the Capital City is considerable, and it is noticeable of late that the energy and push and modern ideas developed by the leading grocery houses of that city are attracting the attention of the merchants not only in the so called Ottawa Valley, but throughout Manitoba and the Northwest Territories. Travellers representing Ottawa wholesale grocers are now to be met with, not only in Eastern Ontario, Western and South-Western Quebec, and the Gatineau District, but also as far north as the head of Lake Temiskaming and west to the Pacific, and during the past six months even Western Ontario has been invaded by representatives of Ottawa houses.

It is not the intention of THE GROCER to note specially the energy of any particular establishment, as all of them have awakened to the fact that business heretofore considered as belonging to Montreal and Toronto or Winnipeg is open to them and great efforts are being put forth to secure a share of the trade. This is as it should be, and there is no reason why the merchants of Ottawa, some of whom are as energetic as any to be met with in Canada or elsewhere, should not secure a good share of the business of Canada.

A representative of THE GROCER visiting the trade of Ottawa monthly is impressed very much by the spirit of enterprise manifested by the wholesale grocers in that city, and their establishments are in every way modern and well stocked, with as fine sample rooms as are to be seen; indeed the volume of business runs into very large figures.

It certainly is a fact that Ottawa ranks high as a distributing point for groceries and food products, and that, in the future, as the country to the Northwest is being opened up its trade will considerably increase.

FRENCH VINTAGE PROSPECTS.

MDAURAT, the president of the National League of Wine Growers and Consumers, which represents the Amalgamated Syndicates of French Vineyards, gave out some very interesting information in a recent interview.

"Well, you see, we are nervous people, we wine-growers," he observed in reply to a question. "It rains in the morning and we throw up our hands in despair, and exclaim that the crop is done for. The sun comes out in the afternoon, and we are all smiles and hopefulness again. The fact is that trustworthy prediction is absolutely impossible as yet. To give you an idea of the uncertainty of prophecies about vintage prospects I will quote to you the following fact of what is called agricultural chemistry. As a general rule every grape contains three pips. In some exceptional years the number is reduced to one. Well, when that happens each grape produces at least twice as much wine, for obvious reasons, as it was expected to do. How is one under these circumstances to phophesy what the crop will be before it has been gathered. Certainly, there have been bad frosts this year. But from my own obrervations I can affirm that it is impossible to say that the prospects have, so far, been appreciably affected by the early frosts. To give you another instance of the untrustworthiness of prophecy. Ten bunches of grapes gathered one day may produce, say, two litres of wine. Ten other bunches, which were identical at the same period, may, because they are plucked two days later under different weather conditions, yield four litres. Putting things at the worst appearances are at present perhaps rather more against than for a fine vintage. But there is a host of circumstances to be taken into consideration.

"To begin with, the number of new vines planted everywhere in the wine countries every year, since 1900 particularly, is enormous. Then the adverse weather which we have had this year has not been general at all in the wine countries; it has consisted of local disturbances, storms, cyclones, etc. Thus, while one side of a vine-clad hill will have been affected, the other will have been untouched. Three weeks ago letters from the Pyrenees, to give an instance of one district only, said that this year's crop was ruined. Well, an official inquiry was immediately made by the Minister of Agriculture, and the result just to hand is the positive statement that the crop will be quite as good as ever. In short, nobody knows what a vineyard is going to produce before the vintage, not even the owner. For example, you may gather your grapes to-day in dry weather. I wait three or four days, for some reason or other. It rains in the interval. The result is my crop produres 40 per cent. more wine than yours. The present weather, as a matter of fact, is not bad at all for the vineyards. It would be bad if it were to last until the vintage season—that is to say, another fifteen or twenty days in the south, the Herault, or the Pyrenees, or another ten or fifteen days in the Gironde. But at present it is excellent. There is no greater mistake than to imagine that as a general rule dryness and heat are required for a good yield of the vineyards. Medium temperature and a sufficiency of dampness are what is required. Of course, as I said, it must not rain during the vintage, but the instance I gave you showed that rain just before the vintage is a very good thing. As a matter of fact, the weather in the Gironde has just taken a decided turn for the better, since last Friday, to be precise. In a word, all things in wine-growing are relative. The essential thing is to pluck at exactly the right moment. Even a wet vintage will not affect the quantity of wine, but the quality will be reduced. For some fine white wines—Sauterne and Barsac, for instance—a dry vintage is, on the other hand, an absolute necessity. For these wines only 'rotten' grapes are picked. Each grape when in proper condition is gathered, and often a week will elapse before a given bunch is entirely stripped. For Medoc wines, on the contrary, the crop is all gathered at once."

"In fact, it is absurd to affirm that 1903 will be a bad year?" I suggested.

"Only a man who knows nothing about it could affirm such a thing. No one can tell yet how 1903 will compare with 1902, 1900, and 1899, which were all three good years, last year especially, 1901 being not so good."

"Is it a fact that the wine crop was too good in 1900?"

"I will answer at once that, as regards the Gironde, the greatest wine-growing country, the crop can never be in excess of the demand. If Bordeaux ever sends out too much wine, it is merely because Bordeaux buys too much wine from other countries, the Herault and the south, for instance, which it calls Bordeaux, but which is not Bordeaux. I should like to give you just a couple of figures. In 1900 the Gironde produced 3,090,485 hectolitres of red and white wine, the latter representing about one-fifth of the total quantity. Well, do you know how much so-called Bordeaux wine was sent from Bordeaux? The Excise statistics give 9,000,000 hectolitres as the figure. Two-thirds of that so-called Bordeaux was southern wine, which Bordeaux dealers bought for their own reasons. They will tell you that many Bordeaux wines require mixing with southern wines. That is absurd. The worst Gironde wine in the market is twice as good as any other similar French wine, excepting the Bourgogne brands. Any Gironde wine so bad that an admixture of southern wine would improve it is thrown away by the grower. This is just to point out to you that the Gironde never could produce too much wine. England could easily consume the maximum total production of the Gironde. England buys over 3,000,000 hectolitres a year of so-called Bordeaux; only most of it is not Bordeaux—more's the pity. Why, nine-tenths of Parisians have given up buying Bordeaux, just because Bordeaux merchants will not sell real Bordeaux. To return to England, our best customer, it is indeed a pity that the Bordeaux dealers will not ship to England the real produce of the Gironde growers. To think that you can have a fair real Medoc for 100f. per barrique of 220 or 225 litres on the grower's estate! But that's nothing. Why, genuine Chateau Leoville is to be had for 175f. per barrique, and so-called Bordeaux are sold to you in London at 1,500f. the barrique. Again, real St. Estephe is offered by the growers at 340f., for four barriques."

IT IS WATCHED.

"Orders for Chinese Starch are coming in very freely from all parts of Canada" said Mr. O. Lefebvre, proprietor of Ocean Mills, to the writer, on Saturday. "'The Grocer' seems to go everywhere, and its columns are closely watched by the trade. Look here! you remember my asking you to publish at foot of my ad. names of my agents and jobbing houses where Chinese Starch is sold. Well, through oversight I omitted the name of a very good house in the west. I don't think 'The Grocer' was out three days before I got this letter." Here Mr. Lefebvre handed the writer a letter from his customer up west in which he complains of not having his firm's name among the list of jobbers selling Chinese Starch and asking to have this attended to next issue—as he found Chinese Starch a good line, etc. Mr. Lefebvre is of the opinion that "The Grocer" goes everywhere and is read by the trade with interest and profit.

The jobbing trade of Canada will find splendid values in Setna's Chutney and Guava Jelly by communicating with W. P. Downey, importer, Montreal. These goods are imported direct from India and supplied to His Majesty the King and the Rajahs of India.

FLOUR AND CEREAL FOODS

What Foods Should a Grocer Carry?

"HOW do you decide whether to stock new brands of breakfast foods?" asked "The Grocer" of a wide-awake grocer the other day.

"It depends on circumstances," he answered. "This, like almost everything about the grocery business, cannot be decided according to any hard-and-fast rule. There is but one rule in the matter, which, I think, every grocer should observe, and that is, simply do not stock the goods unless you feel confident they will sell."

"How are you to decide that?"

"Now you have reached the stiff proposition. The steps taken to make breakfast foods popular, to advertise them, are so varied and in many cases so original, that there seems to be no telling when a demand for some new food product may spring up. I wait till I am asked for it before I stock it."

"Always?"

"Well, no; sometimes by reading the advertisements of foods myself I become convinced of their real worth. Then I do not hesitate to risk the small amount of money necessary to place a trial order. On the other hand, it is not always safe to stock goods just because they are asked for. Some time ago I was asked every day or so if I had "——— Food" in stock. The enquiries were made at different times of the day and so well done that two weeks had elapsed before my clerk and myself by comparing notes, found out that all the requests were made by three persons, an elderly and a younger man, and a young lady. Then I went around to see some of the other grocers in my district and found that all of them had been approached by the same trio, who were, in all probability, engaged by the promoters of the new food. Two of the grocers had, in fact, put the goods in stock."

"I suppose you turned the laugh on them?"

"Well, I was inclined to but I am now glad I did not, for the food has since found a fair sale and we now stock it ourselves. Yet it is not wise to be led into such purchases by strangers."

"Do you carry every line you find a demand for?"

"Sure, I am not here to conduct a domestic science school. I am here to sell the people what they want. There are, of course, many who ask my opinion and I have taken good care to have about each food an opinion that I think worth giving. Some of the foods now on the market are not worth the space given them by many people—are not, in short, worth eating. If a customer asks me I tell them what I think. If they do not ask me I have no gratuitous advice for them."

"Do you display the goods you consider inferior?"

"Yes, I would not stock them if I were ashamed to have them seen. I suppose I give greater prominence to the more popular and the better kinds of foods, but I let the public see and know that I carry them all."

"Orange Meat Food."

The Frontenac Cereal Co. is a new concern which has begun the manufacture of breakfast foods, etc., in Kingston. They have now all their machinery in position and expect to be in full operation in about a week or ten days. Although their machinery is not yet completed it is so far in position as to enable them to manufacture a little of their "Orange Meat Food," and from the samples thus obtained, their travellers have already placed quite a number of orders.

"Orange Meat Food" is a wheat preparation and, as turned out from the factory, is ready for serving at the table. At the start the factory will have the capacity of 500 cases a day, and by May 1 it is expected that the daily output will be 2,000 cases. Besides the "Orange Meat Food," The Frontenac Cereal Co. make flour and cornmeal, their capacity being 350 barrels of the former and 300 barrels of the latter daily.

The president of the company is F. A. Wegner, of The Standard Pure Food Co., of Detroit. Mr. Wegner, has, however, taken up his residence in Kingston. Mr. M. Mooers is the secretary-treasurer and Mr. H. E. Pryor, 43 Scott street, Toronto, is manager of the selling department. Associated with the company as mechanical manager of the factory is Mr. J. D. Bordeau, who is credited with being the originator of package foods at Battle Creek, Michigan.

In Business Thirty Years.

A representative of "The Grocer" called on Walter Thomson & Son, at Mitchell, recently. It is 35 years since Mr. Thomson first started in the milling and grain business and there has never been a legal business day since that he has not been open for trade. The firm have mills in Mitchell, London and Seaforth, with elevators at Mitchell and Dublin, and with manufacturing oatmeal, split peas and pot barley, they are busy people. They report the export trade good, but prices too low. Scarcity of cars and delay at the seaboard moreover greatly impedes business. They have had local grain sold for over two weeks and no cars to move it. The quality of the grain in the Mitchell section is good.

United States Oats Light.

Oats in the United States do not seem to have filled well this year. The Agricultural Department at Washington ranks them for quality at 79.9 as against 86.7 in 1902 and 83.7 in 1901. Moreover, The Great Western Cereal Company, one of the largest cereal firms in the United States, finds great difficulty in getting oats that weigh more than 26 to 28 lbs. to the bushel.

Canadian oats on the other hand are a first-class sample.

Canada Could Retaliate.

A prominent official of the Grand Trunk, in London, Eng., has expressed his astonishment at Mr. Ritchie's ignorance regarding Canada, in his imagining that Canada relied for the export of her grain upon access to the United States ports, and at his talking about the Americans threatening to penalize Canadian wheat. Canada could retaliate in a way that America would feel, as nearly 10,000,000 more bushels of American grain pass through Canada than Canadian wheat through United States territory.

An attempt at penalizing is a game at which two could play, but one involving such inconveniences that neither party is likely to take the first step.

A Pair of Cereal Windows.

The cereal section of a grocery store has grown to such dimensions that few windows are seen without some reference to this paying branch. At this season a special effort is being made to push the various lines and makes of breakfast foods and the result is that various windows are seen of more or less merit.

The illustration shows a pair of windows used by Mr. R. H. Stewart, 362 Gerrard street east, Toronto, which attracted many eyes and made an advertisement for the firm and goods. The left hand window was filled with a Swiss Food display, and the other contained flour in various sized bags, together with several small sheaves of wheat and some small piles of biscuits. On a card hung in the centre of this window were these words :

World's Wheat Crop 67,000,000 Bushels Short.

A RECOGNIZED authority on the world's wheat crop—Le Bulletin des Halles, Bourses et Marches—has just published its detailed estimate which indicates a shortage of 24,500,000 hectolitres or over 67,000,000 bushels.

For forty years this journal has made annual estimates of this kind, independently of official reporting on the one hand and of industrial or commercial associations on the other. As its estimate comes out somewhat late and makes use of all other sources of information, while the journal has its own completely organized service among its correspondents and subscribers, the results obtained may be considered conservative and fairly trustworthy, most of all in France, and also where the Continent of Europe is concerned.

France.—The actual yield of the present year is put at 126,256,400 hectolitres. This is the heaviest yield ever known in France, except for the years 1874, 1898 and 1899. From the experience of last year the Bulletin deems it probable that France will have to import before the next harvest some 3,000,000 hectrolitres of wheat, of which more than 2,000,000 will be supplied by Algiers and Tunis. This leaves less than 3,000,000 bushels to be supplied from non-French sources.

Europe.—Taking Europe in general the year's yield of wheat is estimated at 40,900,000 hectolitres less than last year, which would require an importation of something like 156,400,000, of which 73,300,000 might be supplied by inter-European importation, leaving 83,100,000 hectolitres to be received from the other quarters of the globe. The net exportation probable from America, North and South, is taken at 81,100,000, not all of which of course will come to Europe (5,000,000 being also deducted beforehand for the needs of Brazil).

The European deficit of the year in comparison with 1902 comes mainly from Russia, Roumania, Hungary and Germany. The Russian crop is notably less by 16,000,000 hectolitres ; but the quality is excellent and there is still room for an exportation of 35,000,000 hectolitres (more than 96,000,000 imperial bushels). The Hungarian crop is deficient by 7,500,000 hectolitres, and the quality is only fair to good ; the probable exportation is 15,000,000 hectolitres (more than 41,000,000 imperial bushels). The exportation of Roumania is likely to be as much, its deficiency being 2,500,000 hectolitres.

Africa.—The total African production is about 1,000,000 hectolitres greater than that of Austria in Europe, and is estimated at 17,000,000 for this year, a deficit of 1,000,000. Of this 11,400,000 belong to French possessions (Algiers and Tunis) and go to French uses. Of the remainder Egypt alone will have a small quantity to

This is Canada's Cereal Year.

THERE were some years when we couldn't get enough oats, up to our standard, to look after our home trade and meet our orders for export. There were other years when we could get the grain, but the capacity of our mills was not equal to the demand. But this year we have the oats right up to our standard and an enlarged and improved mill that is ready to meet all demands.

export—300,000—while Cape Colony will need to import 2,000,000 hectolitres.

Asia.—Here there is an excess probable of 5,500,000 hectolitres, almost entirely due to the good crop of India, which it is estimated may be able to export 8,000,000 hectolitres. The yield of China and Japan is not estimated, but their probable importation is calculated at 5,000,000 hectolitres—a little less than 14,000,000 imperial bushels.

Australia.—Here there is an excess of over 7,000,000 hectolitres, with a probable exportation of 3,000,000.

America.—The total deficit, North and South, from last year is estimated at more than 15,000,000 hectolitres (41,000,000 imperial bushels). The probable exportation is put at 56,000,000 hectolitres (156,000,000 imperial bushels) for the United States ; 7,000,000 hectolitres for Canada, and 22,000,000 hectolitres for the Argentine Republic, the Argentine deficit being 4,000,000 and 1,300,000 from Chili —making a total of 81,100,000 hectolitres net exportation from all America to the rest of the globe.

In the foregoing estimates account has been taken of flour as wheat. For example, the exportation of flour from Austria-Hungary has hitherto been important, although now greatly diminished by competition from the United States. Russia has made efforts to imitate the American mills in this, but so far without much success. The Argentine Republic has made a successful beginning by exporting flour into Brazil. In England, in 1902, more than one-fifth of the total consumption of wheat was supplied by imports of flour.

Account has also been taken of the varying times of year when the harvest is due according to the different countries: January, for Australia and Chili ; February, Egypt and India ; April, Persia and Asia Minor ; May, China and Japan, Algiers ; June, Pacific States, Spain, Italy, Hungary, Roumania, Southern Russia ; July, France, United States, Central Europe ; August, Canada ; September, Scotland, Sweden, Northern Russia ; November, South Africa, Peru ; December, Argentina and some parts of Australia. All these harvests, so far as possible, have been brought for the estimates to Aug. 1.

The general conclusion is that, in spite of the inferiority of this year's crop to that of last, it will be easy to supply all demands for imports by exports ready to hand.

Ogilvie Milling Co.

At the annual meeting of The Ogilvie Milling Co. held in Montreal, Mr. Charles Hosmer in the chair, the announcement was made that the past year had been the most prosperous in the history of the company. The following officers and directors were elected for the ensuing year : President, C. R. Hosmer ; vice-president and managing director, F. W. Thompson ; directors, Hon. Geo. A. Drummond, H. Montagu Allan, E. S. Clouston ; secretary, Shirley Ogilvie ; treasurer, S. A. McMurtry ; auditor, George Creak.

Steel Trust in Grain Carrying Trade.

MR. JAMES H. WESTON, a prominent trunk line official, who is thoroughly familiar with the lake and grain carrying trade, is reported to have said in conversation with a press representative : "Owing to conditions in the iron market this season many more ore vessels on the lakes will engage in the grain carrying business this year than last. This will be a strong factor in keeping lake rates to Buffalo down to their present low basis, and will afford holders of grain an opportunity to move their grain nearer the seaboard so as to be in a better position to take advantage of the European demand."

Mr. Weston's remarks were prompted by advices from Montreal, which stated among other things that the reaction in the iron market in the United States was affecting Canadian lake shipping to a marked degree; that, so far, a very large portion of the wheat from the Canadian Northwest had been carried by vessels which the United States Steel Corporation has in its lake fleet.

"These ore carriers are much larger than the ordinary grain carriers of the lakes," added Mr. Weston, "and since they can accommodate such large cargoes of grain they can afford to offer very low rates. I do not believe that ore carriers have already gone into the grain business as extensively as the Montreal advices indicate ; many of these boats are under contract to carry ore until November 10. However, it is likely, as I have said, that many more of these vessels will enter into the grain trade than last season, for much of the ore which ordinarily would have been shipped will now be held over until next May. The lake grain rate from Chicago to Buffalo is about 2 or 2¼c. and from Duluth 2½c. a bushel. When grain moves in larger volume these rates would probably go up, were it not for the competition of the large carriers. Not a few of the latter will undoubtedly bring cargoes of grain down to Buffalo, and if in good condition, will hold the grain in storage until the Spring or until the owner takes advantage of the favorable market."

Western Wheat Grades High.

IN speaking of the quality of grain grown in Manitoba this year, Mr. Dowd, of The Dowd Milling Co., Limited, Quyon, Que., said to The Winnipeg Telegram that though the grade generally is lower than last year, the grain itself is fully equal for milling purposes.

"Last year," said Mr. Dowd, "the wheat ripened and was harvested under ideal circumstances. A large proportion of it was threshed immediately from the stook, and went on the market as No. 1 hard. It did not have time to temper properly and in consequence had to be tempered before grinding. This year the grain has been tempered before threshing and while it grades chiefly No. 1 and No. 2 northern, the milling qualities have been n no wise injured."

Good Threshing Yields.

All advices from Manitoba and the Northwest regarding the threshing yields are encouraging, indeed, much above expectations. Mr. James Hartney, Manitoba immigration agent at Toronto, has been advised that in the southwestern portion of the province, where the severe snowstorm was experienced on September 12, the yield has been exceptionally good. The average yield which the farmers expected was 18 bushels to the acre, and actual results showed a yield of from 25 to 30 bushels.

English Wheat Crop.

Though different opinions are held, yet the general judgment of those best versed in English wheat, The Northwestern Miller is advised, is to the effect that this year's crop will be little, if any, improvement on its predecessor. It is thought that not more than 5,000,000 qrs. of English wheat will this year be available for milling, and of this a certain proportion will surely prove damaged by the rough weather to which it has been exposed. The best that can be said is that owing to the low temperature which has generally prevailed, the proportion of sprouted wheat will be comparatively small. But samples that come to market are mostly weather stained, and here 31s. has to be paid for a fine sample of red wheat. In the country 29s. 6d. to 30s. is about the price, but the tendency of values is to advance, which would show that good samples are at least as scarce as they were this time last year.

Where "Force" is Made.

IT is less than three years since the public were invited to eat "Force" and first began to notice the clever cartoons and rhymes which recounted and depicted the woes of poor Jim Dumps, and told of the sovereign specific, "Force," which dissipated the woes and won for their erstwhile victim the later patronymic of Sunny Jim. Now we are told that more than 2,000,000 people this morning "ate breakfast with Sunny Jim in 11 different languages."

The vogue attained by "Force" is a striking example of what may be accomplished by indomitable energy and a liberal and intelligent use of printer's ink.

After amusing, interesting and making friends of the public for three years in rhyme and caricature, Sunny Jim has lately forsworn the cap and bells and blossomed forth as the philosopher of "Force" with all his old sunniness.

"Force," as is well known, is made from wheat, and Sunny Jim has given us permission to visit his mills and see the various processes in the manufacture of this flaky breakfast food.

The mills are five in number—two in Buffalo, one in Chicago, and one in Hamilton, Ont.—where "Force" for the Canadian market is manufactured under the watchful eye of Manager Albert J. Jahraus. Their combined capacity is nearly 10,000 cases a day, or, 360,000 packages. One doesn't get far in the large Hamilton mills, a cut of which appears herewith, before concluding that Sunny Jim must be of Dutch descent, for everything is as clean and burnished as in the kitchens of Holland. He is so particular, indeed, that he won't let any one touch his product at any stage of its progress from wheat to "Force." As one sees the hundreds of bright-faced and neatly dressed girls working deftly in various parts of the mills, this ultra cleanliness seems just a bit fastidious, but Sunny Jim is convinced that it isn't. He says that he can't guarantee the absolute cleanliness of "Force" if it is touched by a single human hand, and adds that if the time ever comes when he can't guarantee "Force," he'll stop making it. One of his favorite Force thoughts is that doubtless every one will get their peck of dirt, but that they won't get any of it from him. The first note, therefore, that is struck in the mills of Sunny Jim, is cleanliness, and it is the last one as well.

Just as soon as the wheat is unloaded every kernel gets its little yellow face scoured. The first process is of winnowing and cleaning. Every particle of dirt and chaff is removed, and the plump kernels look as clean as burnished bronze. The wheat is then put in big soaking vats of wort—a very thin extract of barley malt—for four hours, there absorbing that flavor which has won so many friends for "Force." This soaking not only adds flavor, but a rare quality, which Sunny Jim calls "sunniness"—a quality which, it is said, gives wholesome ease in the processes of digestion, and leads to good health and good temper. After the soaking the wheat is cooked for four or five hours in immense round steam cookers, that look something like the great tun in Heidelberg Castle. A thermometer of a size that Gulliver might have seen among the Brobdignags, is on each cooker, so the heat can be regulated with the utmost exactness. From the cooker the wheat goes to driers, where hot and cold air remove the moisture, and then it is given a salt bath, for the sake of a good savor. The important process of flaking comes next. Rollers grind the wheat into shreds, and these in turn into thin disks. After a drying process over hot rollers the disks pass through a fiery furnace. They follow the winding way of a screw and are enveloped, like Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego of old, with flame all the way through. This toasting process gives the color and crispness on which Sunny Jim insists before he is willing to bestow the name of "Force." The heat is regulated with such absolute precision that the product from the toasting furnaces is of wonderful uniformity in quality. As the flakes come merrily from the fiery test which caps the processes of manufacture, they drop into big funnel-shape chutes, which carry them to the packing floor below. Here the deft fingers of a large staff of girls put the "Force" into packages, a pound in each, paste on the labels and, with the quietness of soldiers in a manual of arms, click them, four at a time, into the cases. Although the cases hold 36 packages, they multiply in the buzzing activity of the mills with amazing speed.

Such is the life history of "Force" from the wheat in the car to the finished breakfast food in the cardboard cartoon ready for shipment to any point of the compass.

For the manufacture of "Force" a wheat is chosen that is rich in gluten. Wheat, says Sunny Jim, who now does all the talking for "Force," is the perfect food—the staff of life—and has been such since Tubal Cain made the first plow-share and Jacob's son Reuben gathered mandrakes in "a field of wheat." In all the centuries no year has passed when the earth has not yielded wheat to keep man's life. No other grain has been so universally raised and used. Further, he contends that the plump little kernel of wheat has just the elements needed to replace the tissues destroyed in the toil and stress of existence, these elements being not only the same as the elements in man's body, but almost in the same proportion. Wheat, therefore, is the food for men as a breakfast cereal for the same reasons that it is the best food for a flour, and "Force," made from all that's nourishing in the wheat, has these elements in the exact proportions required to build up the body in the best way.

Albert N. Reay is in charge of the selling end of The "Force" Food Co.'s business in Canada, and all who know him will witness that he is a faithful observer of the injunction to "Be Sunny."

Lake Superior Commerce.

Lake Superior commerce for September was materially under the preceding month, and fell behind September, 1902. It amounted to 4,265,000 tons of freight, against 4,674,000 tons last year. This year to October 1 there have been 26,893,000 tons of freight passed into and out of this lake, against 26,313,000 last year, even though last year's period was two weeks longer than this, and though iron ore, the chief item of freight, is 800,000 tons less than in 1902. For September and the season to date the grain and flour movement has been as follows, with comparisons :

	Wheat, bush.	Flour, bbls.	Coarse grain, bush.	Bush, all.
Sept., 1903.....	3,172,963	686,312	2,063,798	8,325,165
Sept., 1902.....	7,976,177	1,172,621	2,402,431	15,555,402
Season 1903....	30,421,265	5,313,983	13,792,255	68,124,443
Season 1902....	40,444,267	5,888 456	6,616,911	73,559,230

The lateness of the season accounts, in part, for the small wheat movement for September, 1903. It is not now probable that the total movement of freight to and from Lake Superior for 1903 will exceed that of the preceding year.

Railroads vs Underwriters.

As a result of the change in the system of insuring grain in the Western elevators, noted in a recent number of THE GROCER, a fight is on between the C. P. R. and C. N. R. on one hand and the Canadian Underwriters' Association on the other.

Formerly the railroad companies had nothing to do with insuring grain. They charged the regular storage rate of 1-2c. per bushel for the first fifteen days and 1-2c. for each subsequent thirty days or fraction thereof, and the grain men carried their own insurance. Now the companies have taken over the insurance, storage, etc., and charge ¾c. for the first fifteen days and ¾c. for each subsequent thirty days.

The underwriters resent this move as an invasion of their legitmate field and have struck back with the following resolution which is immediately operative :

"Be it resolved that where policies are issued to railway companies or transportation companies on grain in terminal elevators, double the ordinary rates shall be obtained or the railway companies given the alternative of paying the insurance companies the additional charge imposed this year to cover insurance, viz., one quarter of a cent per bushel for the first fifteen days or fraction thereof and one quarter of a cent per bushel for each succeeding thirty days or fraction thereof."

The grain men are expectantly watching for the next move by the railroads. It has been suggested that the companies will take their own risks on the grain in the new steel tank terminal elevators which are regarded as fireproof.

United States Crop Statistics.

The monthly report of the chief of the Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Agriculture, Washington, shows the condition of corn in the United States on October 1 to have been 80.8, as compared with 80.1 one month ago, 79.6 on October 1, 1902, 52.1 at the corresponding date in 1901, and a 10 years' average of 77.7.

The preliminary estimate of the average yield per acre of spring wheat is 14.4 bushels. The average quality of spring wheat is 85.5, compared with 87.7 one year ago. The preliminary returns indicate an oat crop of about 787,000,000 bushels, or an average of 28.4 bushels per acre, compared with 34.5 bushels one year ago, 25.1 in 1901, and a 10 year average of 27.8. The average for quality is 79.9, against 86.7 in 1902, and 83.7 in 1901.

The preliminary estimate of the yield per acre of barley is 26.4 bushels, against 29.0 a year ago, 24.7 in 1901, and a 10 year average of 23.8. The average for quality is 85.4. against 87.3 last year and 89.2 in 1901.

The preliminary estimate of yield per acre of rye is 15.4 bushels, against 17.0 last year, 15.1 in 1901, and a ten year average of 14.8. The average for quality is 88.4, against 91.8 last year and 89.4 in 1901.

The average condition of buckwheat on October 1 was 83.0, as compared with 91.9 one month ago, 80.5 on October 1, 1902, 90.5 at the corresponding date in 1901, and a ten year average of 79.7.

The average condition of flax on October 1 was 74.0, as compared with 80.5 one month ago.

The average condition of potatoes on October 1 was 74.6 against 84.3 one month ago.

The average condition of rice on October 1 was 90.6, as compared with 93.6, one month ago.

BULK CEREALS.

The grocer who is "wise" pushes bulk cereals. There is a good deal more money in the selling of them, and the customer gets big value—far more for her money than when she buys package goods. Don't you see that a cardboard box can't make a particle of difference in the contents? Somebody has to pay for the package and the advertising. The grocer pays, for one — smaller profits. Think it over. It's worth while.

Cereal Notes.

It is said that the erection of a new biscuit factory is contemplated at Waterloo, Ontario.

Stocks of wheat at Odessa are reported at 11,520,000 bush, against 2,809,000 on September 1 and 5,200,000 on October 1, 1902.

A. N. Reay, the Canadian representative of The "Force" Food Co., reports that general business in the Maritime Provinces is of the most satisfactory nature.

Mr. J. J. Golden, chief of provincial immigration, Winnipeg, estimates the average yield of Manitoba wheat for the south and east to be from 18 to 19 bushels per acre.

This Swiss Food Co. have been doing considerable very attractive advertising of late, and a handsome poster, recently issued by them, is commanding a good deal of attention.

There is some talk of The Ralston Health Food Co., New York, erecting a factory in Canada, and one of the leading food concerns in Minneapolis is understood to be contemplating a move in the same direction.

The National Biscuit Co., said to be one of the largest manufacturing corporations in America, has decided to open a branch distributing house in Canada. Winnipeg will be the site of the new branch, and a local man will be placed in charge.

The menu cards presented to their guests by The Natural Food Co. at their recent luncheon in Toronto give a very good illustration of their handsome factory at Niagara Falls, N.Y., and are very creditable specimens of lithographic art.

The output of The McCann Milling Co., Toronto, shows a great increase this season. Their shipments of bulk cereals of the "Peerless" brand were a surprise to a representative of THE CANADIAN GROCER who paid a recent visit to their King street mill.

The master bakers of Toronto are perfecting an organization having in view, it is said, an increase in the price or a decrease in the size of the loaf of bread. The retail grocers are keeping a careful eye on the bakers, and will take decisive action, if necessary, to protect their interests.

A few days ago Alfred Cooper completed the 25th year of his service with Christie, Brown & Co., Limited, during which period he was never late. In recognition of such faithful service and to mark the occasion, the firm presented Mr. Cooper with a very handsome gold watch and chain.

Christmas is not far away and wide awake grocers have been preparing for holiday trade for some time, making arrangements for new goods. Then with frost comes a demand for pancake material. Francis H. Leggett & Co. make special announcement on another page of goods specially adapted for the Fall and holiday trade. That house has an enviable reputation for high-class service.

VISIT TO A MACARONI FACTORY.

MACARONI is to most people a thing of mystery. There is something about the long, yellowish-white pipe-stems with the Italian name which whets one's curiosity. From what is it made? What is the process of manufacture? How are the holes got in the little cylinders? These are but a few of the questionings which suggest themselves when the subject of macaroni is broached. So when the representative of "The Grocer" was despatched to go through a macaroni factory, he was by no means loath.

After all, the mechanical process is simple—when you know how. Three very substantial, but by no means intricate, machines convert the flour and water—for such are the constituents of macaroni—into the cylindrical tubes or fanciful shapes in which we get the finished article.

But, simple as it seems, great technical skill is required, or the product will "go bad," as they say, and the labor will have been in vain, to say nothing of the wasted material. In the first place the right kind of flour—one rich in gluten—must be secured, and it should be milled in a particular way. Arriving at the factory, which is kept scrupulously clean, it is turned over to the charge of the Italian workmen, who look very smart in their suits of white duck.

The first process, that of mixing, is now begun. The flour is emptied into a large box-shaped steel mixer with a concave bottom holding about a couple of barrels. A sufficient quantity of hot water is added, and the whole thoroughly mixed into a dry stiff batter by a slowly revolving shaft with curved flanges.

When sufficiently mixed the batter is dumped into a large tray and transferred to the kneader.

The kneader is a great revolving steel pan about nine inches deep and 52 inches wide, in which are fixed heavy grooved rollers, which turn as the dough is carried round by the pan. The result is that the dough is worked up into a very tough but fine grained consistency, and is after a half-hour's kneading ready to be moulded into the little cylindrical tubes.

The machine for this process is a particularly massive one, the principal feature of which is the heavy steel cylinder, about 10 inches in diameter by 2½ feet deep, in the bottom of which is the mould. Into this cylinder is placed the dough after coming from the kneading pan, to be slowly forced by a great machine-driven plunger through the mould at the bottom. The mould is a thick, heavy piece of copper, perforated by conical-shaped holes, in the centre of each of which is a heavy copper wire. By being forced through the hole and around the wire the macaroni is given its peculiar shape.

Varieties of moulds will give almost any shape of macaroni desired. One most interesting mould even turns out the macaroni in the shape of the letters of the alphabet.

On emerging from the bottom of the cylinder in a bunch of long ribbon-like tubes, the macaroni is caught over rods by deft workmen, cut off in regular lengths, and shaken out to be taken to the drying rooms.

There are a series of these drying and curing rooms, kept at certain temperatures and thoroughly ventilated, through which the macaroni must pass in the course of about a week before it is ready for the packing-room. Here it is cut up into the required lengths, weighed, packed and made ready for the market.

The whole process was particularly interesting, and the manifest cleanliness was most gratifying. Mechanical means were everywhere adopted with a view to eliminating any use of the human hands in handling the macaroni from the flour to the finished article.

The Canadian Honey Industry

By Morley Pettit, Belmont, Ont.

TAKING for granted that those outside the bee-keeping profession with whom I have talked are honest in their declarations, bee-keeping and the production of honey is a business about which there is a very wide-spread lack of knowledge. Almost everyone has an ancestor on some branch of the tree who used to have bees, and what a time they had "swarming them" and getting stung ! and what jars of delicious "strained" honey were kept on the pantry shelf !! That unfortunate word ! Even the leading market reports of this twentieth century still quote extracted honey as "strained," an adjective which savors of the mangled comb and crushed bees, brood and pollen of the dark ages of bee-keeping.

Bees are mentioned in history almost as early as men and women and their honey has long been used as food ; but on within the last half century, or since the invention of the movable-comb hive, the honey-extractor and other modern appliances, has bee-keeping begun to take its stand among the other industries of the land. Out of such small beginnings as the garden apiaries of our forefathers it has grown until the annual output of honey is counted by tons and carloads. By the specialist, bees are kept in apiaries of 80 to 100 colonies each, placed at intervals of three miles and upwards to avoid overstocking the range. One expert can, with unskilled help, manage two to six such apiaries and secure in one season from nothing to four or five tons of honey per apiary, according to the multitude of conditions, weather and otherwise, which control the honey crop.

The secretion of honey begins in Spring with the earliest bloom and continues at intervals in the more favored sections until September frosts. The two main honey flows which affect the markets, however, begin in June and August. These are respectively the white and dark honey flows, commonly known as white clover honey and buckwheat honey. The former is gathered from the blossoms of the clovers, principally white and alsike, and to a limited extent from basswood and thistle. The latter is from buckwheat, boneset, goldenrod and other Fall blooming plants.

Nectar of flowers is to ripe honey almost what sap is to maple syrup. It reaches the hive in a very thin condition and requires thickening and some digestive treatment by the bees. A great number of the hive workers arrange themselves in such a way that they can make a current of air through the hive with their wings. This fanning cools the hive, cures the honey, and incidentally produces the pleasant roar heard in the apiary at night, after a busy day. When properly ripened the honey is capped in the cells of the comb and may be extracted at any time.

Now the apiarist removes the combs, each containing six to eight pounds of honey, from the hive to the extracting room, "uncaps" them with a suitable knife and extracts the honey from them. The "extractor" is a machine which revolves the combs rapidly, throwing out the honey by centrifugal force and leaving them empty but unbroken. It is the possibility of using large combs and using the same ones again and again which allows extracted honey to be produced much more cheaply than comb honey.

Morley Pettit.

The peculiar characteristics of honey are its great affinity for moisture and its granulation or "candying." On account of the former some care must be taken in selecting a storeroom. First and last, it must be dry. Heat in the room is not necessary, but is advantageous in that, other things being equal, warm air is dryer than cold. Honey exposed to a moist air becomes thinner every day and will eventually sour. Heat, of course, retards granulation, and a sufficiently high temperature restores it to the liquid form. On the other hand in reliquifying a temperature above 150 degrees F. is unnecessary and injures both color and flavor of the honey. Granulation is a process of crystalization hastened by cold, by jarring or stirring and by exposure to the air. If heated to a temperature of 150 degrees F. until all granules are removed and sealed in bottles at that temperature, honey is said to remain liquid indefinitely.

Honey is produced more particularly in the older parts of Canada, but wherever mixed farming is carried on and the plants above mentioned are grown bees may be kept with profit, provided they are given sufficient care. Of course, in the colder parts they need more protection and, being consumers only for a longer period of the year, a smaller profit is realized.

The sweet product of the busy little bee is becoming more and more a staple food and is being placed on the market through the ordinary channels followed by other staples. The output is generally a pretty even one, for a failure in one part is often accompanied by a good yield a few miles away, so that the annual crop is fairly well averaged up.

OYSTERS AND THEIR AGE.

A wholesale dealer was sizing up an invoice the other day. "There are some old fellows in that lot," he said, as he shoved to one side some abnormally large ones. He picked up one and measured it. The shell was eight inches long. "The age of an oyster has absolutely no effect on its quality," he said. "It doesn't get tough with age like the higher order of animals. How long does an oyster live ? Well, I could not say exactly. I have known oystermen to claim that an oyster undisturbed in a neglected cove would live for 25 years before it finally died of old age. And an oyster of some types keep on growing all the time. I have seen some that measured nearly a foot in length."

AN EVIDENCE OF CIRCULATION.

An example of the far-reaching circulation of "The Canadian Grocer," was afforded the other day by the fact that The Auer Light Co., of Montreal, received an inquiry from a firm in Patras, Greece, by the name of Arsenis & Co. Only a few days previously they also received an inquiry from K. Varathargulu Naidu, Ulsoor, Bangalore, India. Both these firms have excellent references.

Elements of Good Salesmanship

By L. D. Vogel, St. Louis.

GOOD salesmanship is so essential to all lines of business, and so worthy of intelligent study and execution, that the calling, to my mind, is lifted to the dignity of a profession. First, let me say that the definitions of salesmanship which I shall offer are not my own, but quotations from what I have read; and, coming as they do from salesmen of experience who have been successful, they are entitled to respectful consideration.

Thinking it will add to their interest, I will explain that some months ago a prominent magazine devoted to the subject of advertising offered a prize of $25 for the best definition of "Salesmanship." Many replies were received, and copies of them, with the names of contestants, were placed in the hands of J. B. McMahon, vice-president and sales manager of The N. K. Fairbank Co., who consented to act as judge. He awarded the prize to the following, as embracing the most essential qualifications of a good salesman:

DEFINITIONS OF SALESMANSHIP.

"Salesmanship is the quality in a man—partly inherent, partly acquired—whereby he is able to successfully introduce, interest in and sell a prospective customer any article or commodity."

I will quote a few others, which impressed me as being particularly good, and which I singled out of many and copied:

"The ability to sell goods, or other property, in a straightforward manner, with satisfaction to all concerned and with the least expenditure of time and money, but having always chiefly in view the benefit to be derived by the person for whom the property is sold."

Another: "Salesmanship is that quality in a salesman which enables him, in the shortest space of time, to place in the possession of his customer the greatest amount of satisfactory merchandise, and in the coffers of his employers the greatest amount of profits; while at the same time preserving the lasting good will and respect of his customer."

Bear in mind, please, that a salesman is not in the salesmanship class, according to this authority, unless he can both make a profit for his employer and preserve the lasting respect and good will of the customers.

Another definition that, it seems to me, contains many good points, is as follows:

"Salesmanship is the science of putting into each day's work honesty in speech, loyalty to employer, the hustle of modern civilization, of watching your weak points, of strengthening them, of not only keeping your customers but gaining new ones, of being at all times a gentleman."

It has been my pleasure to meet many salesmen—in our office, during my travels, and at the jobbers' and manufacturers' conventions—and a more courteous and pleasant lot of gentlemen it has never been my pleasure to become acquainted with. It is a universally recognized fact that the standard of salesmen has been greatly elevated with the march of time—as to character, ability and intelligence—in proof of which it is not necessary to refer to any other fact than that men not possessing these qualifications cannot find room in the ranks of any reputable firm's travelling force. Furthermore, many of our largest and most successful business firms are composed of and managed by former travelling men.

I will tax your patience with one more quotation, and this one, to my mind, is as true and good as it is terse:

"Salesmanship is ability to make sales; its attributes are health, honesty, courtesy, tact, resource, reserve power, facility of expression, a firm and unshakable confidence in one's self, a thorough knowledge of and confidence in the goods one is selling."

Certainly, none of us will deny that a good salesman must know his goods so well and have such confidence in them that he can convince the merchant that he needs the goods; then he must enthuse him in such a way that, after he does purchase them, he will push them.

Permit me to add that, in addition to the qualifications named in the definitions quoted, if a man is fortunate enough to possess in a marked degree the following he has, in my opinion, the qualities which go to make up what some men term a "crackerjack": Prudence, magnetism, ability to gain confidence, the art of reading human nature, judgment to comprehend a customer; in other words, the faculty of a quick perception of character.

VALUABLE QUALIFICATIONS.

It has been said that the eye photographs impressions on the mind instantly. Pleasing impressions are always strongest and most lasting; therefore, it is wise for the salesman to attain the strong combination of good dress and good manners, coupled with sincerity, which latter is indispensable to lasting success. A well-groomed, courteous personality attracts; sincerity convinces. Cheerfulness is a valuable element in salesmanship; people like it—it appeals to them.

CREDITS.

A good judgment as regards credits, while mentioned last, is by no means the least of the desirable qualifications for salesmanship.

Competition is keen; there is a great anxiety to do business. Firms employ salesmen for that purpose, so they are anxious to make sales and make them as large as possible. It never did require much capital to start a store. A merchant should not have all his capital on his books, as he can never figure on prompt collections, but is always asked to meet his maturing bills.

It is certainly wise for the salesman to study the credit feature, to get all the information possible on the point and to impart it to his firm in detail, whether good, bad or indifferent. There is no information that a credit man values higher or that is of more assistance to him in determining upon credits, collections or extensions than that obtained from a travelling salesman. I speak from experience on this point.

THE PERSONAL EQUATION.

Coming in personal contact with the merchant, the salesman can form an estimate of his qualifications for success, his character, ability and condition and extent of his stock, the way he handles his customers, the trade and crop conditions prevailing in the section where he does business. A knowledge of these particulars should be studiously sought after by the salesman and transmitted to the firm he represents. He should express his opinion fully and state on what he bases it. It is a fact that it is the prevailing opinion that few travelling men have the ingenuity or take the trouble necessary to equip themselves as good judges of credits. I have always asked our men to give this their best thought; a hazardous account is worse than none—to be ever watchful of a man's condition—whether it be a new customer or one of long standing, for some of our greatest losses have been with customers of long standing, whose condition has changed with time.

The value of the service of any man, be he traveller or office man, is measured by the net results of such service, and certainly the losses on a man's sales are an important factor.

Quoting from the sayings of a wise man, "The principal thing to strive for is wisdom." Next to that the thing we are all working for is the almighty dollar. The salesman is human, he wants his share, and the employer who does not cheerfully give it to him makes a mistake.

FIRST-CLASS SALESMEN NOT NUMEROUS.

Little difficulty is experienced in producing satisfactory clerks in the evolution that takes place from the time a lad begins his business experience in the position of office boy advancing in rotation—if he is of the right stuff—as vacancies in higher and more responsible positions occur. But few of them develop the characteristics and tact necessary to give them entrance into the ranks of salesmen and fewer still can ever be classed as particularly successfully salesmen. We can advertise for a clerk for most any department of our business and obtain enough responses to enable us to select a suitable person.

But our experience, and that of many business men that I have spoken with on the subject is, that first-class salesmen are not so numerous and are difficult to obtain; therefore, the employer who has a satisfactory force of salesmen is to be congratulated, and it behooves him to make them satisfied as well as satisfactory.

Mr. O. Lefebvre, founder of The Ocean Mills.

There is no royal road to success in any vocation. Industry, capacity, power of adaptation, the ability to put forth what is in us, the faculty of utilizing our gifts will bring success. In the vast majority of failures there is a lack of motive power, a disposition to take it easy.

THE EASIEST WAY TO COURT FAILURE.

is not to strive for success. The qualities which bring success to men in their chosen vocations are the qualities which make it possible for such men to make their way into those vocations. The man with ability and grit will succeed. The man who does not get discouraged easily is the boss of the man who does. Enthusiasm is something that cannot be bought, because it is priceless.

Opportunities come often in disguise and disclose their possibilities only when a man has made them expand by the force of his zeal and thoroughness. It has been written that "A pound of energy with an ounce of talent will achieve greater results than a pound of talent with an ounce of energy."

TRAVELLING MEN THE HEAVIEST EXPENSE.

Speaking for our firm, I will say the salaries and travelling expenses of our travelling men are the largest items of our annual expense account. Practically, the question of whether our business shall show a profit or a loss hinges upon that. We must rely, therefore, upon the ambition of our salesmen to lead them to make strong efforts to reach a larger volume of sales and keep their travelling expenses as low as consistent with the representation of our firm, and, as a consequence, pave the way to a better salary for themselves.

In conclusion, I will quote for the salesmen, one verse from a poem by Sabin:

Success shall come to him who waits;
But not to him of folded hands—
To him who hopes but hesitates,
And simply by the roadside stands.
Success is won by effort strong;
By unremitting, earnest stress.
The way it travels seems o'er long?
To haste its course, go meet Success.

To the employer it is not well to quote poetry—it's not what he wants. His desire is for profitable business. He can do much to help the salesman meet Success.

HOUSE MUST AID SALESMEN.

A salesman's efforts can be supplemented by the firm employing him. Proper attention and treatment of the customer by the house will certainly strengthen their position. There are so many ways. Setting aside the question of equipping a man with salable goods and proper prices, the attention an account receives by the firm in any and all of the departments of a business has a vast influence on the efforts of a salesman. Modern and thorough business methods suggest so many excellent ways of doing what is right and proper that it must be a careless man indeed who does not give this subject thought and attention.

And the house should not only give attention to those that the traveller sells, but those as well on whom he calls and does not sell. It is certainly important to give attention to prospective customers, and the firm can often put on the final touch needed to supplement the efforts of the salesman and open up a desirable account.

TO THE BUYER.

To the buyer I will only say: The travelling salesman, if he is a gentleman and has not proven himself unworthy of your confidence, deserves courteous treatment and all the encouragement you can afford to give him. He calls on you because it is his business and, in most cases, his pleasure also. There can be cited plenty of cases in which the buyer suffered more by discourtesy than the salesman against whom it was directed, whether thoughtlessly or intentionally.

THE OCEAN MILLS.

The starch manufacturing industry of Canada, which has developed greatly in the past decade, has had no greater supporter than the Ocean Mills of Montreal. The mills were established some five years ago by Mr. O. Lefebvre, who, making a specialty of the manufacture of Chinese starch, has made an enviable place in the Canadian market and in addition created a demand in many other parts of the world for his special brand.

The output of the Ocean Mills has increased in such a rapid fashion that Mr. Lefebvre now exports largely to England, France, South Africa and the United States. The specialties exported are: Chinese Starch, Ocean Baking Powder, Ocean Corn Starch, Ocean Borax, Ocean Cough Syrup, Ocean Liquid Blue, and Ocean Cigars.

All these commodities, of Canadian manufacture, are not only distributed all over the Dominion, but are finding great favor in the United States, and entering into successful competition with similar products in that country.

The establishment is situated on Mount Royal avenue, Montreal, and agencies are established all over the Dominion.

System Hints for Small Stores.

NO matter whether a store be large or small, system is necessary to its complete success. "Time is money," whether it be the time of employer and a single clerk or of help whose numbers run up into the thousands. No matter how small a business a merchant may be doing, he should seek every possible method of saving time and effort.

It may be that the store could be better arranged, that by changes here and there one clerk would be enabled to wait on a greater number of customers. Stocks that are closely allied may be too far apart. There may be unnecessary difficulty and delay in bringing out the reserve stock. There may be too much of a go-as-you-please air throughout the establishment. The boss may not be sufficiently exacting. He may be too lenient with himself, as with his help.

Under such circumstances a business cannot reap all the success to which it is entitled.

HAVE A SYSTEM.

Put in operation a thorough going system, by which the efforts of all hands shall be measured and braced up and the results will be surprising even to those who are most interested.

How many merchants in a smaller way are running their stores on the watchful lines adopted by the big establishments? A limited number, we believe. Yet is there no reason why the smaller merchant should not know as much about his business every day as does the head of an immense establishment whose supervision is exerted by means of the reports that are put into his hands by the heads of various departments.

WHAT SYSTEM WILL BRING.

- You will not overbuy.
- You will keep your stock down.
- You will be able to gauge future needs by reference to previous figures.
- You will know what each one of your salespeople is doing.
- You can tell whether your expenses are too large for your business.

Constant figuring is essential if the best results are to be reached. Without frequent observation of gauges and signals the engineer is liable to find himself grievously behind time when his train rolls into the shed.

DEAD STOCK ISN'T MONEY.

The old idea of merchandizing was to buy goods as low as possible and sell them for the best price obtainable. How long they were kept in stock before selling did not make much difference. To-day the conditions are entirely changed. The less merchandise a storekeeper has beyond what is necessary to fill the immediate wants of his customers the better. Reserve stock is reduced to a minimum.

Having got his stock necessities down to bed rock, and having a record of his purchases for each week of the preceding year, he is possessed of a guide by which to gauge his buying for each period as it comes along. He is consequently far less likely to overstep the purchasing mark than he was before he got his system into effect.

HAVE A BUYING LIMIT.

We have got to talking about buying, so we will continue with this subject before taking up other details. You know the buyers in every large department store are given a limit per week for the amount of their purchases—a limit which must not be exceeded without express permission of the firm or the merchandise manager, if there is one.

The retail merchant who is his own buyer ought to limit himself in the same way. He ought to bring about as close a relation as possible between his purchases and his sales.

Of course, there will be times, especially at the beginning of each season, when the purchases will exceed the sales. Take care, however, that at other periods the sales exceed the purchases.

WATCH YOUR ORDERS.

When you place an order with travelling salesmen, or when you are buying in the market, always take a duplicate or copy of your order. Figure up the order as closely as possible and see how much it amounts to.

Many a time a merchant is greatly surprised, not to say worried, by the amount of the invoice when it comes to hand. He "had no idea that he was buying as much as that." He got carried away by the attraction of the goods, or the low prices, or the persuasive arguments of the salesman.

KEEP A RECORD.

Keep a record of all goods on order, and as the goods are received, mark them off on this record, so that you can tell at any time just what amount is coming to you.

Another way in which the buying can be more carefully gauged and kept within bounds is to have the stocks divided, so that you can see how much has been bought of certain classes of goods that are closely allied.

We don't mean to say that in a small store the stock should be divided and subdivided to the extent that necessarily prevails in a large establishment, but no matter how small a store is, we strongly advise that it be departmentized up to a limited extent. In other words, the records of purchases and sales of certain stocks should be kept separate.

It is not necessary, as the big department stores do, to divide the expenses or cost of doing business among these stocks, making each pay its share.

SYSTEM IN NUTSHELL.

- Keep copy of all orders.
- Figure out amount of each bill before confirming order.
- Keep record of goods on order.
- Divide stock into four (or possibly five) departments.
- Enter cost of all merchandise received under department to which it belongs.
- Have separate accounts for chief items of expense.
- Use separate salesbook for each salesperson—a salesbook for each and every salesperson in each and every department.
- Keep daily records of sales of each and every salesperson.
- Keep daily records of sales in each and every department.
- Have sales entered in book at week's end, opposite amounts of invoices of goods received.

Whether this should be done or not depends on how much taste for statistics and bookkeeping may be possessed by the merchant or by the employe who takes care of the figures.

Remember, however, that it is a great mistake to have one's bookkeeping too complicated.

We advise putting the stock into four or five divisions, placing the allied lines together.

CHARGED TO RIGHT DIVISION.

When the bills come in and the goods have been examined, the amount of the purchases must be charged to the department to which the goods belong.

CAN COMPARE.

As the weeks go by the amount of your purchases for each department being entered in your book, you know exactly how much has been bought for each. Next year you will be able to compare each week or each month and ascertain whether your purchases are running ahead of last year or not.

This is a guide worth having. Yet it costs very little trouble to obtain.

OTHER OUTLAYS.

Of course you will keep a record of all other outgoings. You will, if you are wise, keep separate accounts for

Rents, insurance and lighting,
Salaries of help,
Freight and expressage,
Delivery of merchandise, and Miscellaneous expenses.

DRAW A SALARY.

The proprietor should draw a salary every week, covering the expenses of himself and family. This salary should not be too low. It is a mistake to try to economize too much.

The merchant should avoid an appearance of penuriousness. It is to his interest that his public, while not extravagant, should spend their money freely, and he should set them an example. He should be well dressed and have an appearance of comfortable living and prosperity.

An austere man, who looks as if he denied himself all the good things of this world, whose clothing is worn and out of date and his whole appearance pinched and frugal, is not likely to cause the pocketbooks of his customers to open wide.

It pays the merchant in other ways to look prosperous, to have his wife well and fashionably dressed, his children becomingly attired and his house in good order within and without.

Moreover, if you are well dressed and comfortably housed and fed your manner will be more genial, your spirits better, you will be capable of more work and will have a good influence on your customers when they come into your store.

TREAT YOUR HELP WELL.

In a modified manner apply the same principles to your help. Do not expect people to work for nothing. Overpay rather than underpay. Let it be known throughout your town that you are a kind, considerate employer, that you treat your help generously, and that your store is a "nice place to work in." You won't lose by it, depend upon it.

AS TO THE RECEIPTS.

Now we have talked about the outgoings, let us consider that more pleasing subject, the incomings.

You will, of course, have to separate your sales so that the total of each day's dealings may be credited to the department in which they are made.

You will also need to keep the sales of each salesperson separate, so that you can keep track, day by day and week by week, of what each is doing—whether running ahead or falling behind.

For this purpose you must have a salesbook for each clerk. Furthermore, if the clerks sell all over the store, or if at lunch-time they replace each other behind the counter, you will need a salesbook for each clerk in each department.

This is a very simple matter and is easily arranged.

ENTERING AMOUNTS OF SALES.

During the day the amount of each salesticket should be entered in a book to the credit of the salesperson by whom the sale was made. In another book, to the credit of the department, place also the amount of each sale.

If a business is active, the entering up of the last tickets and the totalling of the amount can be done on the following day.

The total amount of sales of each department must be entered in the book in which the department figures are kept, to the credit of each department, the amount being placed opposite the purchases. These entries may be made daily, or the sales of the week may be footed up and entered then.

At the end of the week the sales of each clerk should be totalled up and a copy of the record given to each clerk. This will establish a feeling of rivalry, one salesperson trying to beat the sales of another.

When the system has been in operation a year the clerk will be informed by these figures that he has beaten his sales for the same week last year—in which case he will be proud and enthusiastic—or that he has fallen behind—in which event he will be spurred to greater endeavor.

If he is not, you have the remedy in your own hands. You know just what each clerk is doing and whether they are "making good" or not.

You will also have an accurate idea as are moving fast enough and in which department there is any lagging.

You will also have an accurate idea as to whether you are buying too heavily, or whether you can afford to launch out on some special line of goods that may be offered to you.

GROCERY STORE SIGNS.

ALTHOUGH, judged by their own practice, many tradesmen seem to think light of the sign as a means of bringing trade to their shops, most of them would probably agree, in theory at least, that the shop-sign may be made an important adjunct to the success of a business. We are disposed to think that greater attention to the shop-sign is more than likely to be followed by good results.

The essential features of a sign are that it shall record the name of the proprietor of the establishment, and the nature of his business. But this fact is by no means generally recognized. Many signs do not advertise the name of the proprietor of the shop; others advertise his name only.

In the case of a grocer, the name should be so placed that it cannot be obscured by displayed wares. It is quite a common thing to see a sign, especially over a country grocer's store, entirely hidden by a row of pails or such like articles. Such a sign is worse than useless. The name of the proprietor should not merely be visible, it should always be prominent. The name may also be shown on the windows, but this should be in addition to, and not in place of, the sign proper over the front door. The distance of a signboard from the pavement is necessarily determined by such circumstances as the height of the shop, the width of the street, etc. In this age of fast traffic it is essential that the sign bearing the name should not be hung low. In narrow thoroughfares a protruding sign is the best. In the sign the principal part of the business should be the most prominent, the departments should as far as possible be named.

Good and expensive signs are often met with showing evidences of neglect, and the public are apt to regard this as indicative of the general condition of the shop, and to conclude that the business cannot claim their confidence.

The ease with which names in enamelled letters on windows get dilapidated rather discourages their use. One or two letters missing from a name may produce amusing and striking results, but hardly such as to encourage persistence in this form of advertisement.

Care should be taken that the sign is clearly seen at night. This detail is frequently neglected. Whatever illuminant is employed, the name of the proprietor or the nature of the business, as the case may be, should be thrown into prominence. The common practice of placing the name of the shop on the lamps is also to be commended.

A brass name-plate on the window-sill is a good form of advertisement, but it is unsuitable for many grocers who have outside displays of stock. A good name-plate on the door is useful, and when there is a step leading up to the door a plate may be placed there with good effect.

It has been learned by referring to back records that diamond back terrapin sold for 12½c. each in the year 1850. They are slightly higher and less plentiful now.

The second largest fresh water "pearl" ever found was taken recently in the Clinch River, near the town of Clinton, Tenn. It weighed 117½ grains—profitable fishing The largest fresh water pearl ever found was taken from the Black River, Arkansas, two years ago.

Competition and How to Meet It

By Thomas Crellin.*

THAT we live in an age when competition is more rife than at any other period of our national history must be patent to all observers. That we are likely, as individual traders, to meet with still more competition is also apparent. Some writers tell us that the death-knell of the single-shop grocer has been sounded; that with large combines, such as grocery and provision syndicates, co-operative societies, etc., ruin will eventually be the lot of the smaller tradesman. It seems strange to me that the press has little or nothing to say in the way of educating or encouraging the private traders as to ways and means whereby they may hold their own against all comers. I take it that one great reason why the press does not espouse the cause of the smaller tradesman is that the very forces arrayed in such strong force against him are the best customers to the advertising columns of the newspaper or trade journal, and it is but natural to suppose that newspaper proprietors are like grocers themselves—that they do not want to fall out with what we term our "bread and butter." All this means that if the private traders are to survive, they will have to cheer, encourage, combine, and inspire each other; or, as the old proverb puts it, "God helps those who help themselves." That we may so help ourselves is the object of the writer of this paper. It may not be out of place to take an object lesson or two from another kind of fight that we as a nation were engaged in some short time ago. I refer, of course, to the Boer War. We have no occasion to recount the disasters that befel our troops time after time; yet it took us a long time to learn that, if we meant to be victors, we must have guns of as long or longer range than our foemen. We had to learn many things from our enemy's tactics, such as new methods of entrenching and taking cover. So in like manner with us as private traders, it must be a case of finding out the secrets of our rivals' strength, the weapons they fight with, and how they are entrenched. And then, in turn, we must go in, if possible, for guns of as long or longer range. A very catchy advertisement which some of these company traders put is that they sell cheap because they buy in big quantities, get special terms, and, therefore, they can supply customers as cheaply as the ordinary grocer can purchase his wares. In our present position we cannot totally deny this form of bounce, although it may be, as it often is, a mixture of truth and error. We are often puzzled to think how it can be that these companies can take a big shop at a big rent, have the shop fitted up in elaborate style, hire expensive servants, and yet can undersell the ordinary grocer, pay dividends, and seemingly flourish. It must strike us often that, all other things being equal, the man who owns his own shop should go ahead of those shops that are managed by hired servants. The great inequality, therefore, must come in in the methods of buying. The great gun, or "Long Tom," of our rivals seems to be, "Better buying because of special terms for large quantities." Can we get a "Long Tom" to match or outrange them? And, if so, how? That seems to be the next thought. Can we fight them, and hold our own? To this question I emphatically answer, "Yes, most decidedly so." If we use the right weapons, nothing but inertness can hinder us. Meet combine by combine! Let us be able to buy as well, and I have no hesitation in assuming that we can sell as well, for, as I have already stated, he that is master in his own ship can manage better and be much more economical than hired servants. One instance out of scores that may be quoted I give as typical of what we now suffer from. I had supposed that by buying a gross lot of health salts from a certain firm direct, with a quantity of other goods, I could get it cheaper than by buying per dozen from local wholesale men. In place of that, I found I paid rather more by the gross than I had in some cases by the dozen. I wrote for explanation, and found that if five-gross lots were ordered there and then only could I get their best terms, which meant that there would be a saving of 7½ per cent. between one and five gross lots. We could multiply such instances, and we are safe, I think, in assuming that in at least one-third of our turnover we could, by organized, combined buying, save 7½ per cent. This alone would mean to very many the difference between poverty and affluence. As to practical methods how to get such a scheme in working order, I would suggest that our association consent to the forming of what might be termed "Workington Grocers' Association Amalgamated Buyers' Department." Appoint someone as secretary of this department, and allow him ½ per cent. or 1 per cent. of the discounts on all goods he may order. Those wishing to buy direct to correspond with secretary, and, if reply wanted, in all cases to prepay postage. All who could do business on these lines to pledge themselves to pay promptly, so as to secure manufacturers' best terms. That no business could be done unless these conditions were observed; that none but members of the association be members of the combine; that memorandum forms be printed with something like the following matter:—"Workington Grocers' Association Amalgamated Buyers' Department. Formed for the purpose of getting the best wholesale terms either by prompt cash or short credit." With such a system we could negotiate for best terms for flour, sugar, tea, lard, candles, soap, starch, blacklead, blue, metal polish, tobacco, tinned goods, and very many other goods that we handle. That combined buying is done on a small scale by a few I am correct in assuming, but there is no organized system, I am assured. Surely the trend of the times points to the stern facts of the case, that without organized combination in that which to us means bread and butter we are, I take it, likely to become submerged. That combination can in no way so effectually help us as by being able to buy in the best markets on the best terms. Hoping that these crude suggestions may lead to some practical results in the forming of a buyers' department, I now close with fraternal feelings to all connected with our Grocers' Association.

*From a paper read at the Workington (Scotland) Grocers' Association.

THE LOBSTER INDUSTRY.

No less than 224,900 live lobsters from Cape Breton and Nova Scotia were, this year, shipped to Portland, Maine, says The Sydney Post. This is 15,000 in excess of last year. This branch of the lobster fishery, which is comparatively new, is becoming a very important one commercially.

The annual expenditure for this delicate, yet hardy, inhabitant of the Atlantic coast is stated to be about $10,000,000. While the lobster is distributed to some extent from the Straits of Belle Isle on the north to the Cape of Delaware on the south, the greatest number are caught in the waters of Nova Scotia and Maine, and the chief markets are the cities of Boston and New York. The high prices at which they are sold, being in reality 90 cents a pound for the food, and the diminishing size of those offered, are conclusive proofs of a decrease in the supply. A recent report shows the average catch to have been 84 per pot in 1901, and 33 in 1902 in Massachusetts.

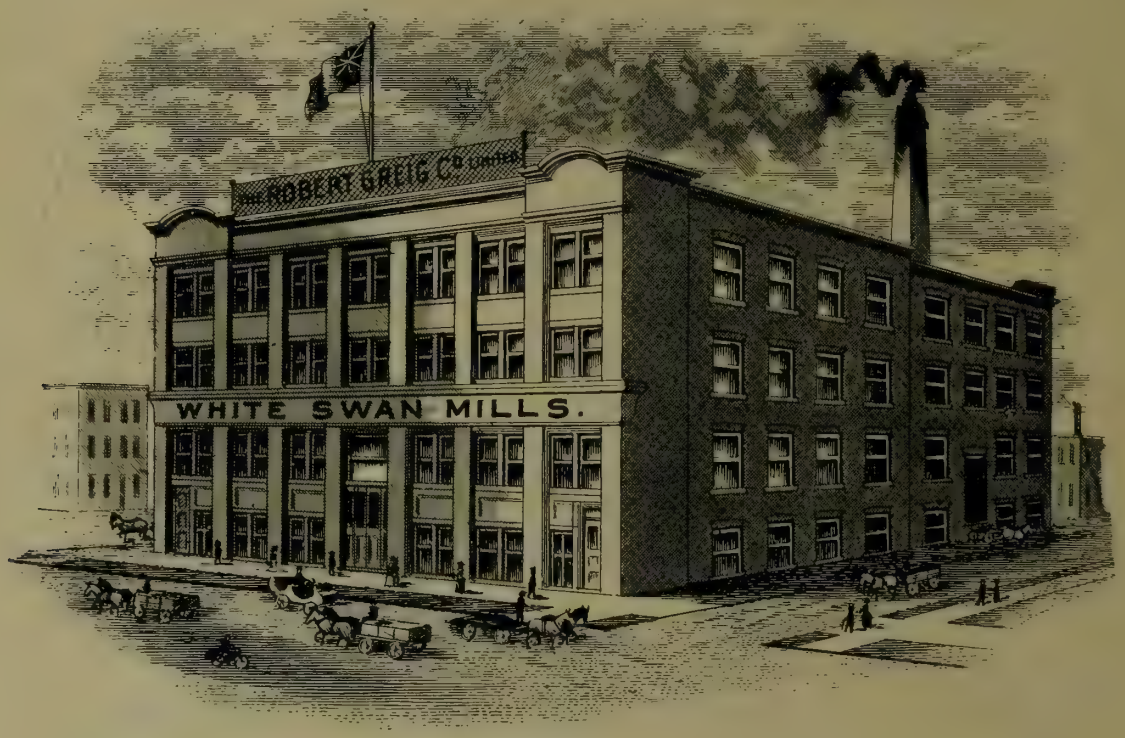
A Model Factory.

THE building recently erected by The Robert Greig Co., Ltd., on the extension of the west end of Pearl street and corner of Duncan, is a decided addition to the business architecture of Toronto. Centrally located, on the old Upper Canada College grounds, it presents a very handsome and striking appearance.

The exterior is of red brick and of a bold and modern design. The offices and sample-rooms are situated in the front of the building and present a very business-like and commodious appearance. The several flats have a floor area of nearly 50,000 feet, and the facilities for the receiving, shipping and handling of goods cannot be surpassed. The machinery and the whole equipment of the factory is of the latest and most modern design and as the building was erected by The Robert Greig Co. for their own use they have spared no efforts to make it complete in every respect.



The first department visited by "The Grocer" representative was devoted to the cereal specialties of the White Swan mills, which this company bought some months ago. Considerable space is here reserved for the preparation of flaked wheat—for which product they have a very large demand—flaked barley, flaked rice, flaked peas, whole wheat flour, health flour, graham flour, gluten flour and self-rising buckwheat flour, some of which lines are made in Canada only by The Robert Greig Co.

The firm appeared to be very busy in this department. Large shipments were being made, including several carload lots for some of the largest buyers in the country, as well as shipments for other points in Canada, extending from Halifax to Victoria, B.C. Several of their lines of cereals, such as flaked rice, barley, peas and wheat, breakfast foods and buckwheat flour, are sold not only in bulk but are put up in handsome cartons to meet the growing demand for package goods. Particular attention here is also given to the manufacture of gluten flour which is so extensively and effectively used by persons suffering from diabetes and kindred troubles. This is a line that grocers have usually had to import from the United States, and it will be of interest to the trade to know that this special kind of health flour can now be obtained within our own borders.

Another department to which a great deal of attention is given is that embracing the White Swan brand of coffee, baking powders, flavoring extracts, jelly powders, package and bulk spices and grocers' specialties. In the manufacture of these this firm has enjoyed a high reputation for many years as makers of high-grade goods, and their registered trade mark, "White Swan," has the prestige which is warranted by the quality of their manufactures. In this department special attention is given as well to the packing of baking powder, flavoring extracts, coffee and other lines under individual brands for customers, and the firm's list to-day shows the names of several hundreds of such private brands, under which they pack goods for leading wholesale and retail merchants in all parts of the country.

The Robert Greig Co. also do an extensive business in Pratt's Foods, consisting of Pratt's Horse and Cattle Food, Pratt's Animal Regulator, Pratt's Poultry Food and Pratt's Veterinary Remedies. These goods, which are put up under an old English formula, have been in use for more than thirty years until now they are freely handled by more than 50,000 merchants in Canada and the United States, as well as in many foreign countries to which a large export trade is done. They were placed on the Canadian market nearly ten years ago by Mr. Robert Greig and enjoy such a reputation for merit that the trade has grown to the extent that now there is hardly a village or hamlet in Canada where Pratt's Food is not recognized as a staple food by owners of cattle, live stock and poultry.

The new catalogue recently issued by the firm is very comprehensive and will be found of value and interest to the trade generally.

The advertisement of W. T. James & Co., of Hamilton, Bermuda, on another page of this issue, will be found of interest to Canadian dealers who are looking for business in the West Indian and adjacent islands. This firm buy direct and are desirous of increasing the number of their connections in Canada: they do not receive any goods on consignment.

Tea: Processes in Its Manufacture.

THE rapid progress of the British grown tea industry during the past 25 years cannot fail to be remarked by all who are in any way interested in the product. This is undoubtedly due in a large measure to the value and purity of the production itself, but the introduction of European supervision and the consequent invention and adoption of machinery which inevitably follow, have contributed not a little to the great success. In the old method almost every detail was done by hand manipulation, and the inevitable dirt and perspiration of the workers could not fail to be carried to the leaf, but under European supervision this is happily at an end and the whole process from first to last is carried out on strictly sanitary principles, the tea itself scarcely coming in touch with the hands from the time it is picked till the final packing into chests. Thus the extra cleanliness and vastly superior results obtained by scientific machinery, added to the natural advantages of the climate and soil of the British tea districts, give the reason why British grown teas have made such marvellous strides.

The tea plant, of which there are many varieties, is a kind of evergreen shrub. In its wild state it will often reach a height of about 20 feet, but under cultivation it is seldom allowed to reach a greater growth than four feet, owing to the regular and constant plucking of the valuable young shoots. It therefore becomes a bushy stem with numerous and leafy branches. Its leaves are alternate, eliptical and veined, and its flowers white with a slight fragrance.

For the production of good tea the leaves must be fine and of soft texture. The plants therefore chosen by growers are those which will "flush" frequently and copiously—that is, produce new tender shoots—as upon this depends the quality of the yield. The system of "plucking leaf" is very interesting, as it is from this that the usual commercial terms take their origin. Plucking is usually spoken of as either "fine," "medium" or "coarse," and under these terms refers to the order of leaf. The leaf-bud (a) is very soft and tender, as is also the first leaf (b) and second leaf (c), but the lower leaves are coarser and naturally harder, being of longer growth. In "fine" plucking the leaf-bud (a) and the two leaves (b) and (c) only are plucked. In "medium" plucking" the next or third leaf (d) is taken, while in "coarse" plucking the fourth (e) and sometimes the fifth (f) is taken.

The more leaves there are included of the flush-plucked, the larger, of course, will be the yield per acre, but the quality of the finished tea will be proportionately poorer. The names distinguishing the commercial varieties of tea have their origin mainly from Chinese terms and in a general way indicate a gradation of qualities from the delicate leaf-bud (a) down to the large, hard-grown leaf. Keeping in view the diagram given herewith, the leaves have been named as follows from the character of tea they are supposed to make:

(a) Flowery Pekoe. (d) Souchong 1.
(b) Orange Pekoe (e) Souchong 2.
(c) Pekoe (f) Congou.

The very excellent climate of the tea-growing districts causes new shoots to be produced very rapidly. It is therefore necessary sometimes to prune very severely in order to give the necessary rest to the plant, but so forcing is the climate that in the course of a few months the growth again appears and yields its crop with renewed youth. The object of the maker is to wither, roll, ferment and dry the leaf and to accomplish this the varied processes are arranged. Immediately on arrival at the factory from the "plucking" the leaf is spread out thinly on large wire or canvas shelves to wither, so that the air can pass freely around it. To accomplish this successfully there must be good light, warmth and dry atmosphere, and, under ordinary circumstances, this will have been accomplished in about 20 hours. The object in "withering" is that the leaf may become soft and limp, and that it may be susceptible of receiving a good twist when put into the rolling machine. In withering the leaf loses about one-third its weight and in the following processes a further 40 per cent. The next process, that of "rolling," is accomplished by passing the leaf between two surfaces, the lower one being much larger than the upper one. It usually takes about one hour for this process. The leaf is considered sufficiently rolled when it is well twisted, but, being in a mushy state it will often hold together in lumps. It is necessary, therefore, to pass it through another machine called a roll-breaker and attached to which is a sifter which separates the fine from the coarse leaf. The next process is that of "fermentation," and to accomplish this the rolled leaf is spread out in drawers in a way in which the air can have free access and is left to ferment. This process is the great distinguishing feature of black tea manufacturing and it is from this time onwards that the natural leaf takes the character of black. Very great care and observation is necessary to know just when the roll is sufficiently fermented, as upon the correct fermentation depends to a great extent the ultimate quant and value of the finished tea. The roll will ferment rapidly or otherwise according to atmospheric conditions, and the experienced man will take all this into consideration. When sufficiently fermented the leaf assumes a bright coppery aspect and gives off a peculiar but pleasant odor. In this process a great loss of tannin is effected by the conversion of part of the tannic acid into sugar and the expert workman can largely modify the flavor of the tea by careful watching and at just the right moment hastening the tea through for "firing." This is accomplished by passing the tea into highly-heated air, the temperature of which is regulated by the rapidity or otherwise with which the fermentation has progressed. The roll is spread upon wire trays which are passed into the heated chamber at a temperature of about 180 degrees F. The proper condition is reached when the tea has assumed a good black color and is so brittle as to break at the least attempt to bend it. At the termination of these processes the weighing of the finished tea has revealed a loss of 75 per cent. of the original green leaf. The finished tea is now prepared for packing by being passed through a grading-sifting machine by which the tea is sorted into its various grades by means of an arrangement of different sized meshes which separate the tea into the following commercial varieties: Broken Pekoe, Pekoe, Souchong, Congou, and Dust.

Great care is given to this stage of manufacture, as upon judicious sifting depends the proper and regular grading from the commercial standpoint, and any given grade should always maintain its uniformity.

The final bulking of each separate grade with similar grades made at different dates is also of the utmost importance and it is usual to give the bulked tea an additional slight "firing" process to remove any remaining moisture and give uniform character, when it is at once packed, sealed and chested as we know it on the market.

TO BREW SUCCESSFULLY.

Enormous as is the consumption of tea, with a popularity extending to all parts of the civilized world, it is not a little remarkable that not infrequently its true virtue and fragrance is spoiled by imperfect brewing, although the process is really simplicity itself. To obtain the true purity and essence of the leaf two pots should be used, and it is also of first importance that the water should be fresh boiled. The following instructions will then be sufficient to secure a perfect cup.

"First, well warm the tea pot.

"Then add the required amount of tea, calculating one teaspoonful for each cup required.

"Then pour on the full quantity of water required, making sure it has reached boiling point.

"Then stand in a warm place for five to eight minutes to infuse.

"Then pour the whole contents into a second well-warmed pot" and a delightful, refreshing and fragrant liquor will be the result. Any tea not being so when brewed according to this rule, may justly be considered of poor value.

GLIMPSES OF A GREAT COFFEE MART.

RIO JANEIRO is, next to Santos, the greatest coffee port of the world, writes a Brazilian correspondent of The Tea and Coffee Trade Journal. Millions of bags are here shipped every year, and the chief business of Brazil's vast coffee crop is done here. Rio Janeiro lives upon coffee. The big coffee factories are interesting places. Some of them are as full of machinery as a Minneapolis flour mill. You walk under a network of moving belts through air mixed with coffee dust, and go through room after room filled with machines for dressing the berries to suit the different tastes of the world. Each market seems to have its particular desires. The Germans, for instance, demand that the husks be on the beans when they arrive in Hamburg. The Germans prefer to do the shelling themselves; the coffee is sold as washed coffee, and brings a much higher price.

Other countries want their coffee polished. It is shined up as you shine silver, being brushed by the most delicate machines, which do not injure the grain. The coffee which goes to Canada is sold just as it comes from the plantation. It is passed through the separators and graded, but so far as I know there is no demand in Canada for polished coffee or for any other than that natural in color. A great deal of coffee for Canada is bought by the great roasting companies, and the average man does not see it until it is handed out to him by his grocer at so much a pound.

There is no busier place in the world than the exporting section of Rio Janeiro. There are great warehouses near the wharves, which are filled with coffee and into which coffee is brought by the thousands of bags. The streets of this section are narrow and dirty. They are filled with wagons and cars laden with coffee.

CLEANING STREETS OF COFFEE.

You can scarcely get through the streets. There are scores of half-naked men going from the cars to the warehouses with great bags on their heads and scores of negro women down on their knees sweeping the coffee up from the cobblestones where it has dropped. They may wash it and sell it. Each of these street cleaners have a sieve, in which she puts the coffee beans as she picks them up, shaking out the dirt as she works. I am told that many of the women make a good living by gathering these stray coffee beans.

Stop a moment and watch the men as they unload the coffee. Every bag is tested before it is taken into the warehouse. The tester has a little tin pipe as big around as a broomstick, with a sharp point at the end. He jabs this into a bag, and in it brings out a handful of coffee. A glance at the beans tells whether they are according to samples, and, if not, the rest of the load is carefully watched.

Notice how the men carry the great bags on their heads. Each bag weighs 132 pounds, but they stand straight up under them and walk off as briskly as though they were carrying feathers.

BAGGING OF COFFEE.

But let us follow them into the warehouse. The carload which is now being handled is in all sorts of bags and it has to be repacked for shipping. We walk through long aisles with bags of coffee piled on each side from the floor to the ceiling and come into a hall where the floor is covered with great piles of green coffee beans.

At each pile are a dozen half-naked negroes in bare feet. They are scooping up the coffee in bowls much like a bread bowl and pouring it into the bags. We hear the scratch, scratch, scratch of the bowls as they touch the floor, varied by the sound of the laughter of the men at work. Now they burst out in a song, keeping time with their scoops as they sing. As soon as a bag is filled it is dragged off to a pair of scales to be weighed. It is next handed over to the sewers, who sew up its mouth, leaving enough vacant space at the top that it may pack well in the steamer.

In other factories the bagging is gone by machinery, and in all the work goes on in a business-like way.

Each of the big American establishments of Rio handles vast amounts of coffee in a year. Its manager must have good business ability and be a sharp trader. He must be a good judge of coffee and must know how to take advantage of the rise and fall of the market. Each establishment has its coffee expert, who can tell by the eye and nose just what the coffee is worth. His judgment is usually passed without grinding or burning the berries. Samples of about a pint each are spread out on blue paper, and the coffee expert will put his price on each grade by looking at, handling and smelling the sample.

NOVEL METHOD OF FISHING.

In the foremost rank of novel methods of catching fish belongs the Gifu fishing of Japan. The fishermen go to the fishing grounds with a bright torch at the bow of the boat. One of the fishermen held strings which were tied to a number of birds, a species of duck. The glare of the torch attracts the fish to the surface of the water. When one of the birds sights a fish it dives after it and usually succeeds in capturing and swallowing it. When a duck has swallowed several fish and its neck appears fat with them the fishermen pull it into the boat. Then one of the men dexterously squeezes the duck's neck so that it vomits the fish, still alive, into a large basket. The fish captured are a species of trout and are considered a great delicacy.

ABUSING THE RETAILER.

Amongst a certain class of advertisers there is a curious habit springing up of abusing the retailer in their advertisements, says London (Eng.), Grocery. For instance, this occurred in the advertisement of Globe Polish: "if your local dealer is so behind his business as not to keep it, write us a postcard, and we will see that you are supplied." Now, that is a species of the American style of advertising that will not take in Great Britain. Until Americans learn to respect the British people they never do business with them, as they find to their cost. "Jumping the claim" and abuse only make the retailer stubborn, and the direct result of an advertisement such as that quoted above is that the retailer who takes in the polish sells out and takes no more, and the retailer who does not take it could not be induced to for a pension. The retailer has yet to be reckoned with.

DEPARTMENT OF ADVERTISING SUGGESTION AND CRITICISM

Edited by
W. Arthur Lydiatt,
TORONTO.

NOTE—Herein are discussed the principles and practice of advertising. Subscribers are invited to send Mr. Lydiatt specimens of their newspaper and other advertising, for the purpose of review in this department. Address care of Department of Advertising, THE CANADIAN GROCER.

A Batch of Good Business-Bringing Schemes for Grocers.

FROM different sources I have gathered together a number of good schemes with which grocers can keep the dull times away, and the grocer who is on the lookout for new ideas which will help him increase his business will find many suggestive hints in the following paragraphs.

Most of these schemes have been successfully tried by merchants in different parts of the country. The majority of them come from a booklet called "Resultful Plans," issued by Butler Bros., of Chicago. Should any of them be tried by "Grocer" readers I would like to hear with what success they meet.

An eastern department store placed upon the soap counter in their bargain department several hundred cakes of good soap, which they sold for 5c. a cake. Inside the wrapper of 25 of these they placed 25 one-dollar bills. This fact was well advertised, and the crowds attracted to the store by this clever piece of advertising purchased more than enough to make up for the loss on the soap. Such a scheme could only be practised with profit by a large grocer in a fair-sized town.

An hour sale can be made exceedingly successful after the following plan: If you have the sale Saturday, on Monday tag several articles in your store like this:

> The price of this Lamp is now
> 95 cents.
> Next Saturday at 10 o'clock we will sell it
> For 64 cents.

> These China Sauce Dishes are now selling at
> 15 cents each.
> On Saturday at 10 o'clock we will sell them for
> 9 cents each.
> No more than six will be sold to any one person.

This hour sale plan has been successfully worked by a number of different grocers. A grocer who does a fairly large business would make a success of an hourly reduction sale which is worked something after this manner: The sale is started at, say, nine o'clock in the morning, and on certain articles a card is placed advertising the "tagged" articles at a certain price and stating that they will be reduced 10c. in price at the turn of every hour. Select articles that people will want—only one of a kind—start the price at the regular retail price—and it is unlikely that you will have to accept much below cost price on any of the articles, provided the sale is well advertised.

Another way of working the hour sale scheme is to advertise that certain articles will be on sale for one hour at a bargain price—have a few specials for each hour of the day. This sale can be made a farce by not strictly adhering to the hours set for the sale of each list of specials.

When caramels were newer than they are now, an Indiana merchant put one in an envelope and had the envelopes handed in at the door, not thrown on the porch, of every house in town. His name and the price of the candy were printed on the envelope. That Fall he sold more caramels than all the other stores in town put together. Not a bad scheme now when you want to push some new candy. Maybe it would work with other goods as well.

A New York groceryman recently gave away an enameled iron and brass bed by the following premium plan. He had a large card placed in his window on which was attached a sealed envelope containing an unknown number and below were 200 blank-numbered spaces. Above the envelope this explanation was given: "This Bed Free. Every person who purchases one pound of our XXX grade coffee can write his name opposite a number on this card. The person who writes his name opposite the number, the duplicate of which is inclosed in this envelope, receives the bed."

A prominent Iowa merchant advertised that on a certain date he would set free 12 pigeons, and that there would be attached to the leg of each pigeon a tag which would bear the following announcement:

> This tag is an order for merchandise to the value of $1.00, which will be delivered to bearer if presented within ten days from date.
> Date.....Signed.....

Strange as it may seem, none of the birds were returned, and the merchant got a great deal of advertising which cost him nominally nothing.

A tea and coffee merchant in an eastern town of 5,000, writes: "I have two ways of getting folks into my store. Every Saturday I serve coffee free with the best cream I can buy, from 11 a.m. until 2 p.m. The coffee is made from the best grade of coffee I handle, one that pays me 15c. per pound profit on single pounds. My trade in the higher grades of coffee has steadily increased since I have been using this plan. On Fridays I attract the children by selling chocolate creams at cost. I have half-pounds and pounds in cartons wrapped ready to hand to customers, and it would surprise you to know the amount of these goods I sell."

The following is from a circular recently issued by a successful Ohio grocer, who conducts a large bargain basement:

"On Thursday, June 26, between the hours of 1 and 2 p.m., we will throw from the top of our store two cases of choice oranges. They will be thrown into the assembled crowd, one at a time, and we will keep up the excitement by offering in our bargain basement more of these oranges at 36c. a dozen. We have also a large assortment of genuine bargains in glassware and tinware. Don't fail to attend our bargain basement sale."

A tea and coffee store in the suburbs of Chicago give a half-pint of good, rich cream with every pound of 40c. coffee they sell.

To fight the mail order houses one merchant used this advertising idea in his weekly paper. Each week he selected three articles from his regular stock and advertised them at their regular prices.

Open Stock Dinner-Ware

Our new line of Open Stock Dinner-Ware, "No. 298 Carmen," is the best thing in the trade this Fall. The 97-piece set retails at $12.00. The pattern has only been in stock a few weeks, but repeat orders are coming in daily. Send for sample and list of assortment necessary for you to buy to secure control of this line for your town. We want THE BEST CROCKERY MAN in every town in Canada to take this up, and IT WILL BE A MONEY MAKER for every dealer who secures it. The pattern is one of the BEST EVER DESIGNED—the ware Meakins Semi-Porcelain. We carry a full line of this in open stock, so that you can supply any pieces your customers require, from one cup to the largest set. These are the points which assure the success of the line. A postcard is all that is necessary for you to see this pattern and judge for yourself. Write at once. You cannot get this from any other house, and there is nothing else quite so good.

In the same advertisement, and set so that no one could make a mistake, were the same articles quoted at prices asked by certain mail order houses named in the advertisement. The plain demonstration that goods could be bought cheaper at home started many new accounts.

19c. If you carry it home yourself.

Otherwise 69c.

Advertise that on a certain afternoon between 3 and 6 you will sell a wash boiler for 19c. providing your customer will carry it home himself. Fill a window full of boilers with suitable cards. Tell the people about it so that every one will be on the lookout that afternoon for people with wash boilers. Handle it right and you will get some good advertising cheap.

One merchant asked permission from the town authorities to put down new sidewalk planks in place of worn out ones wherever he saw fit. This was granted and one morning there appeared in the sidewalks scattered all over the town about 100 new boards, painted a bright vermillion and lettered in black with an ad. for this merchant. Every board advertised a price on something and the merchant's name. Next afternoon in the paper the merchant offered a substantial prize in merchandise to the first one bringing in the correct total of new boards put down, also for the correct number of things advertised.

GOOD FOR 5c. ON CASH PURCHASES OF $1.00 OR MORE.

THE BIG STORE.

Advertise that you have a plan whereby children can make pocket money. Send a lad to distribute hand-bills at the school-yard gates. Do not give particulars. Tell them to come to the store and find out. When they come sell them for 1c. each tickets printed like that here shown, redeemable at 5c. each on each purchase of $1 or over.

See the point? The youngsters will sell the tickets for a nickel each to their mothers, aunts and neighbors. Every woman in town will be begged to buy at your store, not by yourself, but by those whose appeals are hardest to resist. Refund the penny on all that may remain unsold.

The above would be an excellent plan to use in starting a store—to make it well known in quick time.

A Kansas merchant ran a sale through one entire month announcing that all goods sold on one day in the month would be free. Each sale date in the month was placed in envelopes which were sealed and placed in a box. All were then drawn out with the exception of one, and burned. The one left was sealed in a safe in the bank. When the sale was over a committee of reliable men examined the date and it was announced that those who held cash receipts dated on that day would get their money back or could select goods to the amount of their purchase.

A grocer, who also sells lamps, china, tinware, etc., recently placed a large lighted lamp in his store window with a sign which read: "This lamp holds one gallon of oil. It was lighted at 8 o'clock this morning. The person who guesses nearest to the minute when it will go out will receive the lamp free of charge. Leave your guess inside."

Here is a similar one. Advertise that on a certain Saturday you will wind up a cheap watch, the kind usually sold for $1, and with each purchase allow one to guess at what time the watch will stop, the winner to get the watch. Place watch in window with card announcing this and time of winding.

An enterprising and successful groceryman in a lively New Jersey town, hires a band to give a concert in front of his store every Saturday night.

In a little Illinois town a merchant has provided a rest room for the use of his country women customers. It is not an elaborate affair, just a simple, comfortable, quiet little room, partitioned off from the regular store-room and furnished with a few easy chairs and a couch, curtains at the windows, a simple covering on the floor and the necessary toilet articles.

A merchant furnished free to the publishers of the local daily paper all the paper needed for one certain issue if they would allow him to furnish a distinctive color. Without previous announcement, the paper came out one day printed on pink paper instead of white. The explanation was given on the reading pages. He also carried a big ad. in the advertising columns. He made big sales and was talked about for weeks as the man who "got out the pink paper."

A merchant who never misses the opportunity of talking to his customers in type, always has something new in the shape of a general talk on his store, which he has enclosed in every package that goes out. One of his special package "stuffers" reads something like this:

OUR SPECIAL REQUEST

Are you pleased with this purchase?
Does it "open up" to your entire satisfaction?
Is it just as represented?
Did you get your money's worth?
If your answer to any one of these questions is "No," you will do us a favor to tell us about it the next time you are in. We are doing our best to run this store right, and we want a chance to correct any fault that may creep in.
Thanking you for this, and past favors, and soliciting a share of your future patronage, we are,

During the fair week an Ohio merchant inaugurated a kite-flying contest. Any boy or girl was eligible provided the made the kite they used. To the string of each kite was attached a floating banner carrying the firm's advertisement. Three prizes were given to those who succeeded in flying their kites the highest.

A Wisconsin merchant took a number of low flat baskets and filled them with durable heavy goods, such as can-openers, egg-beaters, iron spoons, etc., and set them in conspicuous places on the floor with cards over them worded like these: "Don't fall over these. They are as cheap as the dirt under your feet at 5c.;" "Look down on these and buy. Never before have we offered such low prices;" "You can't stumble on bargains like these every day;" "Prices on these are right down to the floor." The same plan could be worked with a bargain lot of package goods, such as canned goods, etc.

One general storekeeper covered the front and side glass of his window on the inside with black cloth. In the centre of the window about four feet from the ground he cut a peep-hole in the cloth. Above this peep-hole he put on this lettering "For men only." Behind this cloth he arranged his display, which, of course, could only be seen through the peep-hole. The display in this case was men's furnishings.

A somewhat similar scheme was used by a Boston store, the windows being trimmed in black with a barrel in the centre, which was covered inside and out with black cambric. One end of the barrel was placed close to the window, and an opening about eight inches across was made. In the rear end were several electric lights carefully screened by black cloth, except as they reflected on a shirt which was fastened to the back of the barrel. A sign on the shirt bosom read: "This well-made shirt we are now selling for $1. We will tell you more of our shirt tale if you will come inside." As only one person could look in the opening at a time, there were large crowds continually in front of the window awaiting for their turn to see what was inside the mysterious barrel.

THINGS KNOWN AND UNKNOWN ABOUT SOME GROCERY STAPLES

Mustard, Ginger, Baking Powder, Yeast, Blueing, Capers.

MUSTARD.

MUSTARD is another of the grocery staples of which Canada imports many varieties in the raw state and prepares for the home market She also imports considerable prepared mustard in liquid form from France. Most of the mustard seed used in Canada comes from Trieste, other Mediterranean ports and the West Indies, although it thrives in certain parts of England. The principal varieties of seed are black or brown, white and serapta. The individual seeds are extremely minute in size, weighing no more than one-fiftieth part of a grain. These go through the usual process of grinding, after which the powder is ready to be sealed in cans. Table mustard, in its present form, dates from 1720, when Mrs. Clements, of Durham, England, hit upon the idea of grinding seed in a mill, and sifting the flour from the husks. As a table condiment and medical substance mustard was known from very remote times. Under the name of Panu, Hippocrates used it in physic.

The peculiar pungency to which mustard owes much of its value is due to the essential oil developed by the action of water on a peculiar chemical substance contained by the mustard. This reaction does not take place in the presence of boiling water, hence it is not proper to use very hot water in preparing mustard. As now prepared, mustard consists of a mixture of the substance of white and black mustard seed in certain proportions. The finest brands are undoubtedly Colman's and Keen's, both manufactured in England, and imported to Canada in large quantities.

According to the latest statistical returns for the last fiscal year, we imported 599,060 pounds of ground mustard, valued at $89,506, three-fifths of which came from Great Britain and two-fifths from the United States. We also imported nearly $9,000 worth of French mustard from the United States.

GINGER.

This spice is found in its raw state as the roots of a perennial reed-like plant, native to the warmer parts of Asia, Western Africa, Australia, South America and the West Indies. Our supply of ginger in Canada is derived principally from Jamaica, Cochin, Bengal and Africa. Jamaica ginger is considered the best, next to it comes that from Cochin.

Ginger is known in commerce in two distinct forms—coated or uncoated. For the first, the pieces of root are washed and simply dried in the sun. Uncoated ginger, as seen in trade, varies from single joints an inch or less in length to irregularly branched pieces of several joints three or four inches long. For ordinary purposes uncoated ginger is considered the best, the largest and finest species being a pale buff color inside and out, and cutting softly and evenly. For coated ginger the roots are washed, scraped and sun dried, and often subjected to a system of bleaching, either in fumes of sulphur or by immersion for a short time in a solution of chlorinated lime. The white-washed appearance of the ginger to be seen in shops is due to the fact of its being washed in whiting and water, or because it is coated with sulphate of lime. This artificial coating is supposed to give the ginger a better appearance. It often, however, covers an inferior quality.

The process of grinding the ginger root is very simple. The raw article is simply put through a spice-mill, which crushes to powder all of the root except the fibre. This by-product is afterwards used in the manufacture of ginger beer.

BAKING POWDER.

In the manufacture of baking powder Canada is rapidly coming to the front. One manufacturer, who has been in the business for ten years, says the increase in trade has been at least one hundred per cent. in that time. Cream of tartar and alum, the principal constituents of baking powder, are imported from Great Britain, the United States and other countries free of duty. The process of manufacture is extremely simple: The ingredients are put in a bolt, which is rapidly revolved by electric power, and the chemicals thoroughly mixed. One recalls incidentally the recent controversy between "the powers that be" at Ottawa and Canadian baking powder manufacturers, about the merits and demerits of alum phosphates. The Government authorities were at the time just beginning to wax enthusiastic over pure food products, and condemned alum phosphates as injurious. The result of analysis was favorable to the baking powder manufacturers, alum phosphates being declared most healthful.

Canadian manufacturers supply the bulk of the home market. The import duty of 6c. per pound on foreign baking powder keeps out all except such brands as the "Royal" and "Cleveland," which are of American manufacture. That the latter grades, however, still supply a large share of the city trade, is evidenced by the fact that 362,367 pounds of baking powder, valued at $107,480, were imported from the United States during the year ending June 30 last.

YEAST.

Everybody knows that yeast consists of a ferment of some sort. In former times what was called leaven was used exclusively. Yeast produced by beer that is brewing is available for baking purposes. The objection to this sort of yeast, however, is its bitter taste. The method ordinarily used is that of producing a wort from barley, malt and rye, and by the addition of a littfe ready-made yeast, to let it ferment under conditions favorable to the growth of yeast-cells, restricting meanwhile the proportion of alcohol produced to a minimum. During the most tumultuous period of the process yeast is skimmed off from the surface. It is then washed with water, and either filter-pressed or centrifuged to obtain it as a relatively dried paste. Finally it is mixed with a proportion of dry starch to give it a higher degree of dryness, and pressed into divers shaped yeast cakes.

There is a duty of 6c. per pound on yeast in cakes or packages weighing less than 50 pounds, or 3c. per pound when in bulk or mass of not less than 50 pounds. As a consequence the amount of yeast imported in the cake is trivial, while in the bulk we get 225,443 pounds, valued at $53,069, all from the United States.

BLUEING.

Blueing is a staple so common that many have never troubled to inquire as to its ingredients. This coloring material used for general laundry purposes, is made of a sort of pigment, called ultramarine, simply pressed into the required shape. Ultramarine is imported principally from Germany, where it is prepared artificially by heating sulphuret of sodium with a mixture of silicic acid and a certain kind of earth called alumina.

In Ontario the readiest market is for blueing in the shape of small square cakes. In the Maritime Provinces they are accustomed to use liquid blueing, a solution of ultramarine, and will not buy it at any price if it is done up in another form. Very often blueing comes in the shape of a rag saturated with ultramarine.

At present Canadian manufacturers supply about half of the home market, and, notwithstanding the fact that there is a duty of 25 per cent. on the foreign manufactured article, about $23,000 worth was imported last year, mostly from England and the United States.

CAPERS.

The principal ingredient of the indispensable relish that goes with boiled mutton—caper sauce—is the flower bud of a low shrub growing on walls, ruins and rubbish heaps in the south of Europe and the Levant. The caper shrub is very common in Italy and Southern France. It blooms from early Summer until the commencement of Winter, and is as prodigal in its profusion of flowers as the ordinary Canadian annual. The flower buds are picked every morning before the petals are expanded, and placed in vinegar. According to size and quality they are distributed into different vessels and prepared for the market.

Canadian grocers import capers indirectly through packers in England, among whom the firm of Crosse & Blackwell, London, are the best known. Of the many varieties of capers Capots and Nonpareil are considered the best brands.

THE MANY SOURCES OF SUGAR.

SUGAR in greater or less quantities is distributed throughout almost the entire vegetable kingdom. The leaves of the plant are the site of production, which is said to be brought about by the chemical action of sunlight, writes Dr. C. A. Kern in The American Grocer. Some claim the sugar results directly from the action of the chlorophyl in the plant upon the carbonic acid taken from the air, or upon other carbohydrates, such as glucose, starch, etc., which have been previously produced and are transported and stored in other parts of the plants as reserve material.

On the evening of a sunny day, the leaves of a sugar beet contain about two grammes of sugar, of which one gramme goes to the root. One kilogramme of grape vine leaves contains 16 grammes of cane sugar, besides 17.5 grammes glucose, etc. Cane sugar and glucose always appear together in plants and the relative proportion varies according to the presence of different organic acid. Therefore the cane sugar in very sour or acid fruits is inverted by these organic acids. The quantities of sugars found in various fruits are as follows:

	Cane Sugar. Per cent.	Glucose. Per cent.
Pineapple	11.33	1.98
Strawberry	6.33	4.98
Apricot	6.04	2.74
Banana, ripe	5.00	10.00
Apple	1—5.40	7—13.00

Sugar is also found in nuts and almonds, figs, melons, chestnuts, clover leaves, onions, oranges, peanuts, timothy grass, etc., but not in sufficient quantities for manufacture. The scope of this article is only to consider such plants which were and are used in the production of sugar, and the above list was only mentioned to illustrate the large amounts of sugar found in ordinary food products. It is a well-known fact that honey was the sweetening medium before sugar was known, and in this instance the sugar came indirectly from the flowers of all plants.

The oldest sweetening material is undoubtedly the so-called palm sugar from India. This is called "Jaggery or sharkari," and is made from the juice of palms, such as the Phoenix sylvestris, cocoanut palms, arenga saccharifera, etc. The sugar palms are planted in rows in dry, fertile land and produce from the 5th to the 30th year. The gathering of the juice commences in November and ends in February. A triangular slit, one inch deep and six inches long, is made under the lowest branches, and a hollow bamboo cane is fastened to the lowest corner of this slit. On the other end of the bamboo is an earthenware pot. The next morning before sunrise this pot contains a thin, very sweet solution of cane sugar. After drawing the juice for three days, the tree must have a rest. One tree can produce from 35 to 48 pounds of sugar in one year. This juice is now boiled down in earthenware pans, sometimes lined with a little lime, and then it is poured into flat dishes made of palm leaves, in which it is dried in the sun. The total annual production amounts to 50,000 tons.

In the temperate climates of North America the maple is the sugar-producing tree. The time of gathering is in the early Spring, after the snow has gone and when the leaves are sprouting. This period lasts not over five or six weeks. Holes two or three inches deep are bored into the trunk and one end of a pipe is fitted into these holes, the other end running to a vessel. The juice runs freely for several hours, and then after some hours of rest again runs freely. After cold nights and sunny days the trees give off the greatest quantities, as high as twelve quarts. The juice is evaporated and, after skimming down, is poured into square moulds. The manufacture of maple sugar was first carried on by the Indians, especially the Delawares.

Before the arrival of the Spaniards in Mexico and Peru, the natives made sugar-juice and also sugar from corn plant, Zea mays. The sweet corn plant was pressed and the juice concentrated and cooled. In Toluca, Mexico, the manufacture is still going on, only the juice is fermented and distilled to "Pulque de Mahis," a well-known beverage. The best sweet corn contains as much as 10 or 12 per cent. of sugar.

Sorghum (sorghum saccharatum) comes from Central Africa and was well known to the old Romans as a sugar-producing plant. In China sorghum has been cultivated since olden times. There the juice is used direct or is fermented into a beverage.

In 1409 and 1500 licorice root was used for the manufacture of sugar.

According to Ibn-al-Awan, the Arabs condensed the juice of the grape in copper kettles, and after clarifying, poured it into flat earthenware dishes and collected the crystalized sugar. This industry was revived through an edict of Napoleon I., in which he offered a premium of 200,000 francs for the first grape sugar factory which produced a certain quantity of sugar. Five hundred pounds of grapes gave either 100 pounds syrup, 70 pounds raw or 55 pounds refined sugar.

St. John's Bread (ceratonia siliqua) has been used in Africa and Arabia as a substitute for sugar. The solid paste or syrup was used for canning fruit.

The juice of the birch tree (betula alba) has been used for the production of sugar in Scandinavia, Scotland, and Ireland, and also the so-called Syrian dog-cabbage (ascelepias gigantea). Sugar melons have also been tried in Russia, California, and Hungary. Malt has been proposed as a sugar-producing material. Mostly all these processes are now historical and there are only two materials which are the sources of our enormous sugar production—namely, cane and beet.

Of these two, cane is the oldest and possibly originated in India on the river Indus. It was first mentioned in a report of Nearchos, Admiral of Alexander the Great, in which he stated that the natives produce honey and a white sweet substance from a reed or cane. From India it was brought to the Euphrates, then to Egypt, Cyprus, North Africa, Spain, Canary Islands, and from there to America.

The sugar beet (Beta cicla) grows wild on the shores of the Mediterranean and Caspian seas, in Mesopotamia and East India. From these places the sugar beet spread all over Europe. In 1747 the German chemist Marggraf discovered and produced the first sugar from beets, as is stated in a report made to the Berlin Academy of Science. In 1786 Achard, a scholar of Marggraf, raised sugar beets especially for the manufacture of sugar and built the first beet sugar factory, the first output of which amounted to 1,600 pounds of raw sugar.

WIDE-AWAKE RETAILING

Remarked by the Senior Partner.

"THERE are no two ways about it, Smithers," remarked Dobson, as the two fell in step for a turn round the block and a breath of fresh air, after the key was turned, "there are more brains needed to run a grocery nowadays than ever before."

Dobson occupied himself with charging a well-colored meerschaum, reserved for after-business hours, and had her pulling well before he continued. "Yes, running a grocery business is a different thing from letting it run itself. Why, way back there when I started to work for Si Horton, at the Corners (Dobson was inclined to grow reminiscent when the meerschaum was pulling well), things just ran themselves. If Si was spinnin' a yarn to the old lubbers around the stove, it didn't matter if there were a dozen customers in the store, Si would finish his yarn ; and they always waited. Time wasn't any object, and anyway, it was a treat to hear Si laugh when he had finished. But fancy trying to run a store that way now. Whew ! If you are not right sharp and smart, out goes Mrs. Customer with her nose up in the air and Robinson up at the next corner has a new customer.

"We didn't have delivery wagons in those days ; if anyone had asked Si to 'Be sure and have it sent up before half past eleven' I truly believe he would a dropped dead. And what a mess that old shop was in, too ; biscuit boxes on the counter, barrels of sugar around any place, and the blackstrap away at the back between the vinegar and the coal oil. We were strong on staples. None of your nick-nacks ; folks took what they got and were satisfied. Si was the best hand at checkers any place around the corners, and he made a lot of money, but I'm afraid he wouldn't stand much show running up against a departmental store and a butcher shop around the corner with a full line of canned goods and package teas.

"Funny, isn't it, how things change ? Fifty years ago we were all departmental stores. There was the tavern, the blacksmith-shop and the departmental store. Of course, we didn't call it that ; the name wasn't invented ; but for all intents and purposes that's what they were. From snuff to fish-hooks, rye whiskey to canton flannel, you could get what you wanted, if you weren't too particular, and we weren't 'just out.'

"But after that the railroad went through and the corners began to boom. Then came the grocery store, the boots and shoe store, the china hall, the dry goods emporium and stores without end. We all were specialists then. Each man had his line, and he kept to it. Worked well too. I saved up a little capital and hung out my sign. You came in shortly after to help behind the counter. There was a whole lot we didn't know about the business that we know know, but we haven't done so badly, considering, while the corners have been growing into a city. The only opposition we had was from fellows like ourselves around the corner.

"A grocery was a grocery in those days, and when you went into a city store that had corsets in the window there was no danger of your running up against a firkin of butter or upsetting a basket of eggs. The general store was still the proper thing in the smaller towns, but in this burg we thought we had passed that stage.

"But Smithers, old man, we were wrong. The pendulum is swinging the other way and who knows when it is going to stop.

"When all our goods came in bulk we had to be pretty sharp and well posted to see that we were getting the right sort of goods. The package system of doing up groceries has relieved us of a good deal of responsibility and drudgery, in one way, but, as I was saying, has resulted in other complications which require a greater exercise of grey matter than ever before.

"Then it was merely the selection of goods, now it is competition. The package system enables the departmental store to compete with us as they never could under the old bulk system, but we've got the remedy in our own hands. I believe in fighting the devil with fire. We'll have to departmentalize ourselves.

"The big dry goods stores are selling cereals and soap, and the butcher shops are going in for tea and canned corn. I suppose they are right, too, in a way. We have been selling bacon and hams for years besides no end of tinned meats.

"And, by the way, what don't we sell done up in tins ! Concentrated soup, roast turkey, plum pudding, pork and beans, hash, not to speak of fruits and vegetables, and I'm blessed if that last traveller didn't have a mighty nice line of tinned sausages. Yes, and that corn syrup is put up in tins. Besides, remember, all the things that come, nice as you please, in cartons, boneless codfish, seeded raisins, salt, baking soda, with breakfast foods galore. And, as for bottled goods, I was thinking the other day, in sizing up our display, that it beat any liquor store I was ever in.

"There is where the telephone comes in good and handy. Mrs. Brown can ring us up and order what she wants without seeing it. When she orders a certain brand she knows just what she is getting and if it should happen not to be up to the mark we are not so apt to get the blame for it.

"Now my theory is that we should handle everything that can be eaten. The butcher shop sells tea. That's their privilege. What's the matter with us building our annex round the corner there and running an up-to-date butcher shop. We sell cured meats. Why shouldn't we sell fresh meat ? The secret of the departmental store success is that you can get anything there you want. What we ought to do is to sell everything a man or woman wants—to eat.

"We have the telephone service, we have the delivery service. The same people who come in, or ring up, for cabbage and baking powder want a sirloin steak or a leg of mutton. Why shouldn't we supply it ?

"I got this idea last Spring when I was over to see John in Detroit. Every grocery on the corner had its meat department, and for that matter its beer department, but that's another matter. Of course there are obstacles, but I've been doing some hard thinking over the matter and the more I think the more I like the idea."

They had rounded the block, the meerschaum had burned out, and the flow of Dobson's eloquence had begun to slacken. Carefully replacing the pipe in its well-worn case he was relapsing into a meditative silence when the electric glare from the firm windows caught his eye and loosened his tongue again.

"Stop," he cried, "did you ever see a finer window than that, grocery or any other store ? That plate glass cost a lot of money and the wife said we were crazy to put so many electric lights in it. But Smithers, we never made a better investment. Just look at that window, doesn't it make you hungry only to look at it? It's worth two first-class clerks day and night. Why, we hadn't had the old place renovated and that new front put in a week before the avenue people began to drop in, and now you know we have them solid—best trade in the city. Young Rodgers dresses the window now, don't he? He's a bright boy, Rodgers. How much are we paying him? Eh! Well, I've been thinking that he needs encouraging. He's worth more to us than that, I think we had better give him a raise.

"The business is going right ahead, isn't it? We'll have to see about that meat scheme. We've got to keep ahead of the procession. The way to win out is to think twice while the other fellow is waiting to see what turns up.

"We've a fine store here, Smithers, fine store, none better in the city, and by the Old Harry, there ain't going to be.

"Good night, Smithers, good night."

Fighting the City Catalogue House.

MUCH food for thought on the part of grocery retailers is given in the following article written by "A Merchant," in The Iron Age. The illustrations are taken from a hardwareman's experience, but the lesson adduced is fully as worthy of a grocer's attention as of any class of merchant:

"The competitor that gives the retail merchant the most concern and the one with whom it seems hardest to cope is the mail order catalogue house. The merchant does not fear his competitor at home, because money spent in town goes the rounds, and if he doesn't get it today he is reasonably certain of getting a piece of it sooner or later. On the other hand, the money that goes to Toronto, for example, never gets into circulation at home. It may pay taxes and church dues and charity funds and go to support public enterprises, but if it does it will be in connection with foreign enterprises, and the local situation will be none the better for it.

"By mail order houses we do not refer indiscriminately to the entire mail order business, but rather to those houses, noticeably in Toronto, who claim to be able to sell everything on earth at prices that cannot be met in open competition. The ordinary mail order business, devoted to exploiting some specialty, has no effect on retail trade, but the large catalogue concerns have come to be menacing in the extreme. This is true to a large extent in all branches, because they carry everything.

"A news item appeared in a Buffalo paper soon after the first of the year in which it was stated that during 1902 nearly $25,000 worth of goods had been received at the express and freight offices of a certain village of 1,200 people from supply houses in large cities on orders from people living in that village and vicinity. In 1901 the people embraced in tae same tesritory purchased $20,000 worth of goods from the same sources. This is a straw that shows which way the commercial breeze is straying. This village is only one of many whose people are spending their money in the same way.

WHERE LOCAL RETAILERS FAIL.

"It is astonishing the hold these catalogue houses have on the rural communities. These houses have built up their business through persistent and judicious advertising. The local retailer has done nothing to counteract this pernicious influence, and by his very silence has created the impression that he is afraid of his larger competitors. His arguments, when he has condescended to cease abuse and come down to a reasonable discussion of the situation, have been mostly along moral lines. He has shown that it was wrong to patronize a concern that had no local interest; he has pointed to the fact that the goods were never better than represented and often of an inferior quality; he has shown where his money went in the way of local charities, etc., but where he has failed is in preaching too much on the moral side and leaving out the material side of the question.

CONVINCING ARGUMENTS.

"If he had said he would meet the prices, dollar for dollar, goods for goods, it would have had more influence with the masses in a minute than a whole year's discussion of the moral ethics of where money should be spent. The average man is going to buy where he can buy cheapest, and the fellow who depends on getting a man's sympathy first and his money afterward might as well close his store. It is just as fair for the farmer and merchant to send to Toronto for his supplies as it is for the local merchant's wife to get her millinery in the nearest large city. The more the merchant whines over the catalogue houses the better they will be advertised. In fact the business has been built up largely by the crocodile tears of certain old fossils who marked their goods in war times and have never marked them down.

"The only way to down any competition is to meet it squarely and go them one better. Advertising will kill the catalogue business just as surely as the mail order business has killed the old fossils, providing always it is backed up with the facts.

A SUCCESSFUL ADVERTISING CAMPAIGN.

"A certain hardware store began an advertising campaign with a view of reaching those who patronized Toronto and the results were very gratifying. Briefly their plan was as follows: They advertised that they had the catalogues of all the leading supply houses, giving their names, and offered the free use of them to anyone interested. Each week they ran a series of descriptions of seasonable articles taken from the catalogues, giving the number of the article and the page, and quoted the catalogue price. Right below the catalogue price in bold type appeared the price charged by the local dealer. If it was less or more it did not matter; it was quoted just the same. Frequently, where a few cents over the Toronto article was charged, it was supplemented by a pertinent inquiry if six cents would pay the freight, etc. The introductory part of the advertisement usually contained some useful information that the consumer might well pause to consider. It was shown that the middleman's profit was not such a heavy tax as one might suppose, as, for instance, on a keg of nails a jobber in Sarnia was quoted as saying that if he made five cents on a keg of nails he was satisfied. Would five cents pay the freight on a keg of nails from Toronto? Hardly. Then followed figures giving freight rates. It was shown that the man who bought a carload did not make so much more than the man who bought in case lots. It was pointed out that the earnings of the middle man were not so much on each article, but that it was the aggregate on a year's business. The fact was brought home that the freight in a small way was more than the jobber's profits, and even allowing that goods could be bought in Toronto at wholesale prices the freight and postage amounted to more than the middle man's profit, and the goods could be bought for less money at home.

EFFECT OF THE ADVERTISING.

"This kind of advertising was an innovation. The local paper commented on it. Still more advertising. People talked about it. They were surprised that any dealer had the nerve to put his prices against the supply houses. They were incredulous, and said so, but they went to see, and the firm had life enough to show them, once they got them in the store, that there was no fear in their make-up, and that they did not want money unless they could give value received for it.

"This particular store found this the only successful method of dealing with the problem. True they were not always able to meet the price, but if not they were honest enough to say so and they offered to send to the catalogue house and get the article in question for their customers. As they were buying other goods in Toronto they were sometimes able to save a little freight by having the goods inclosed, and this was a small profit, better than none at all, and they had pleased a customer.

PREMIUMS FOR HOME PURCHASERS.

"The best way to fight a common enemy is to combine. If the dry goods man, the druggist, the grocer, the hardware dealer, the harness maker and the furniture dealer would get together and do a little thinking it would be mighty profitable. Let them lay aside their petty jealousies and buy a little space and advertise. They could say to the people that they were ready to meet outside prices. They could press in the moral responsibilities of the good citizen to spend his money at home, and then go on to say that they were willing to offer a little premium in order to have him do so. They were prepared to fill all orders for goods in any line if they could get the orders. Let the people pick out just what they wanted from the catalogues, make up the order all ready to send and turn it over to them, and they in turn would agree to fill it at the same price and give them three per cent. discount for cash.

REGAINING PRESTIGE.

"This of course would mean that the consumer was to allow the local dealer the same as he would have to pay in freight and postage added to the catalogue prices. Local dealers could afford to do this, and it is not likely they would get many orders. If they did they should treat them fairly and promptly. The tendency, however, would be to discredit the catalogue houses, and by showing that they were ready to meet outside competition the local dealer would have taken a long stride toward regaining a falling prestige. All the world loves a fighter as much as they despise a sniveller. Don't whine, don't snivel, but hustle and fight and advertise.

Importance of a Happy Disposition.

IF a salesman has not within his heart the "milk of human kindness," he would better quit trying to sell goods and go into the banking business—where friendship ceases—says Salesmanship. A happy disposition is to a salesman what fire insurance is to a property owner—it enables him to "bob up serenely."

As no two customers are exactly alike in their disposition, the salesman must rely on nature's law of "Laugh and the world laughs with you."

When you are dealing with a customer who shows an inclination to be cranky and crabbed, remember that one of the strongest psychological laws is that of "Association," and as "Suggestion" is even a greater power you will find that by keeping yourself in a happy mood before a customer, your smiling countenance will suggest to him that it is better to be pleased than otherwise, and by the association of the thoughts which naturally go with pleasant things, the customer's mind will be very quickly filled with thoughts of a pleasing nature, and his crabbedness crowded out to make room for them.

This fact will easily be recalled by many salesmen who have cultivated the art of story-telling, for it is often the case that a crowd of very dull people have been fairly electrified into a coterie of very happy souls by the advent among them of a "jolly good fellow," who "breaks the ice" by shedding the lustre of his sunny disposition in their midst.

While in this case the happy personality of the one individual is reflected by the crowd, and while every one is not blessed with the faculty of being "a jolly good fellow," the tendency of a happy disposition is always to overcome moroseness wherever it is met with, and as the salesman's business is to separate a man from his money it is very plain that a man will spend money more freely when he is feeling happy than when he is the least bit "dumpy," and many a salesman has found that it is very much to his interest to "call again" on a customer whom he finds to be "out of sorts."

"If you cannot be happy, be as happy as you can" is a rule that all salesmen will find to be a never-failing guide to success.

When you rise in the morning and your head feels thick and the world looks black, if you will deliberately set to work to recall a few of the funny stories you have heard and earnestly try to put yourself in a laughing mood, you will be surprised to find how easy it is to cast off what would otherwise be a bad case of the blues.

Always remember that there are other days coming, and while to you "it may be cloudy to-day, the sun will be shining to-morrow." You can jolly yourself as well as others, and if you know how to make other people feel good and fail to work it on yourself, you are not giving yourself a square deal.

PROFIT FROM QUICK TURNS.

IT seems strange, says St. Paul Trade, that so many good merchants should be blind to what is at once the plainest and most important lesson in modern merchandising, which is:

The best profit a merchant can possibly make is the compound profit which comes from frequent turns.

You have a certain fixed expense—say 15 per cent. on sales. You make a more or less fixed average profit—say 25 per cent. on sales. In other words, an article that costs you 75c. you sell for $1. Out of that dollar 15c. goes for expense, leaving you 10c. net profit each time the stock is turned.

If you turn that item twice in a year you make 20c. on the investment. If you turn it five times you make 50c., without a penny more investment.

Profit compounds in exact ratio with the number of times you turn your stock.

When you buy double the usual quantity of an item you double your investment, but do not increase sales. You turn your stock but half as often. With twice as much money invested you make no more net profit.

That is all the "mystery" there is about the ease with which small stores that buy their goods right hold their own against big neighbors. It tells why, of two stores side by side, handling about the same lines, one may make twice as much "net" as the other.

Go to nine towns out of ten and you will find one or more old-line concerns that have made money in the past and are still well rated. They were bred in the old school, where merchants were taught to buy six months' supply at a time, and they seemingly can't forget their lesson.

To one of these towns comes a small concern with not more than a quarter as much capital as the present leader there. Because its capital is limited it must buy in smaller quantities, buy oftener, watch stocks closer, keep every dollar on the turn all the time. It probably turns its stock eight or at least six times a year.

At the end of the first twelve-month the little store has probably made sales half as great and profits more than half as great as the big store.

At the end of five years the little store has become the big store, and its one-time rival (pending the time when expense shall have eaten up its capital wholly) has little to do save to complain that the trade is not what it used to be, unless—

Unless the old-timer has the wit to see where the trouble lies and the grit to climb out of the rut.

In the latter case there will probably be two prosperous stores instead of one, for both the new firm and the old will fight aggressively for business and pull it from less enterprising towns around.

Every time you invest two dollars where one dollar would have served, you withdraw a dollar from the active part of your capital—you stop the growth of compound profit.

Having Confidence in One's Self.

SELF-CONFIDENCE is a valuable asset to those who possess it, says The Grocers' Monthly. Our Scotch friends call it self-conceit—"haein' a guid opeenion o'yinsel"—we call it the faculty of being able to form a fair estimate of one's power to dare and do, and of catching opportunities as they offer themselves. How many of our readers have experienced the chagrin of refusing a good position, and of not going in for it as it opened simply because of lack of confidence in their ability to cope with its requirements, and of afterwards seeing it go to another less able, but more "cockie," than themselves? A good many, we should say. The career of Mr. Thomas Martindale, one of the biggest grocers in Philadelphia, is a notable example of what one can accomplish if one has confidence in one's self. Such success as he has had is directly traceable to self-assertiveness—to putting his best foot forward in every possible way. Here is what he says about himself:

I have not been in the grocery business all my life; my early experience was in the dry goods business. Nearly in the beginning I went to a big dry goods merchant in Toronto, Ontario, and asked for work.

"What can you do?" he asked.

"I can do anything," I replied.

"Can you run a white goods counter?" asked the merchant.

I answered that I could so confidently that I was given charge of the white goods counter at a salary of £90 a year. After I had been there a few weeks, the manager of the silk department became mixed up with the flowing bowl one day, and went home "sick." His employer was deeply put out and sent for me.

"Do you know enough about the business to run the silk department?" I was asked. "Mr. So-and-So has gone home sick, and we have decided to make a change."

My knowledge of the silk business was extremely scanty, but I, nevertheless, confessed to the necessary knowledge.

"I can run the silk department," I said, "but Mr. So-and-So gets £140 a year, while I am only getting £90. If I am competent to do his work, I am competent to draw his salary. I won't undertake it under any other circumstances." There was a great time, but I got the advance, and ran the silk department for about four months. Then the manager of the store was sent to Europe to remain as a resident buyer. Again the firm sent for me. After detailing the circumstances, they offered me the position. I thanked them, but observed that the manager had been getting a large salary, while I was drawing only £140. "If I was competent to do his work," etc., etc., etc. This ended also with me getting the advance, and I remained in that position for quite a while.

Each of these positions was secured, to begin with, very largely through the confidence which I showed that I felt in my own powers. So far as two of them were concerned, I had little or no experience in their duties.

Yet I succeeded in them all, I think I may say without egotism, and so could any other young man of pluck and persistence. None of these chances would have been open to me at all had I not showed the utmost confidence in my own ability.

Some time after that I decided to try my hand at something beside the dry goods business, and I came to the United States. After travelling about a bit, I found myself one day on a train passing through Oil City, Pa. There was a crowd at the station. I disembarked and enquired where the circus was. A bystander replied that there was no circus, the crowd was caused by five-dollar oil, Oil City being at that time the all-important speculating centre.

I thought I saw some chance, and I left the train. That night I paid a dollar for the privilege of sleeping on a hotel billiard table in company with five other gentlemen.

The next day I hunted up the largest oil operator in the place, and asked for work.

"What can you do?" he asked me.

"Anything that any other man can do," I replied, but this time I got in a little too deep.

"Can you dress tools?"

"No," I replied, "I can't do that."

"Can you drill?"

"No," I said, "I'm afraid I can't drill."

"Can you run an engine?"

"No," I answered, "I can't do any of these things, but I can learn them all."

"That may be," the oil operator replied, "but we aren't paying three dollars a day for learners."

"I know that," I said, "but why not give me a chance? I'll guarantee not to do your property any harm, and I'll deposit £80 that I have saved as security that I won't blow up your boiler or do any other damage."

"Are you afraid of work?" he asked. When I replied that I was not, he stated that he wanted a road cut along the side of a hill, and asked if I could do it. I said that I could, but the hill, when I saw it, was not calculated to inspire joy. It was rocky and gravelly, and covered with a stubby growth of timber. I had to build a bridge in addition to cutting the road. I set to work. I was all hand labor. The rocks had to be removed and the roots grubbed out. It was in reality a terrible job.

A week rolled by and the operator came to inspect the work. "The road was very good as far as it went," he said, "but it wasn't wide enough. It must be wide enough for two teams to pass."

This meant that I had to widen the road about three feet.

After this was done, the operator told me one day that he had ordered me transferred to oil well No. 1, with instructions to the foreman that as soon as I could learn to run the engine and was willing to stake my £80 on not blowing up the boiler, I was to have the job.

In a week I had the job, and was placed on wages of £4 a week, working Sundays as well as weekdays. During that period I did my own cooking and carted my groceries and supplies over the mountain on my back, the trip covering about two miles. The grocer from whom I bought much of my stuff was an old raftsman, and a bad misfit. He hadn't taken stock for years, in which peculiarity, be it said, he did not differ from very many other grocers. Neither did he know anything about bookkeeping.

Prices were extremely high in those days. The old fellow ought to have been making money, but he had no business instincts and was in a bad way.

He asked me one day whether I knew anything about books. I replied that I knew a little, and he then made an arrangement by which I was to go over his books and tell him how he stood. I did so, and found that he had been bankrupt for a good while. Not only that, but at the time of my investigation he owed about £300. The books were in fearful shape. His assets consisted of a lot of bad accounts, a little old ramshackle building, and about £90 worth of goods.

My report sickened the old grocer so much that he offered his whole business to me, stock, fixtures, good-will and everything, if I would pay him £20 in cash and pay off his debts, which would enable him to get away.

I agreed, took the business, borrowed some money, paid off the debts, and that is how I got into the grocery business, which I have been in ever since.

I do not know of any experience which more conclusively proves the value of perfect confidence in one's powers, both felt and revealed.

FINANCE AND INSURANCE

WITH an authorized capital of over a hundred million dollars, The Consolidated Lake Superior Co. has collapsed because unable to meet a debt of five million, and now, papers that have printed columns of laudation on Mr. Clergue and his enterprises are going to the opposite extreme. Mr. Clergue, despite his shortcomings, is hardly deserving of much that is now said about him. He is undoubtedly a great promoter; but no organizer. His conception of developing the resources of New Ontario were worthy of all commendation, and the fact that the people associated in the United States Steel Corporation have thought it good to invest large sums in the neighborhopd of Mr. Clergue's enterprises, proves that he was working along the right lines.

The trouble with the Soo industries has been in mismanagement, not in misconception. Industry after industry have been begun, and without waiting to put the first on a paying basis. The scheme of a great system of co-ordinated industries was good, providing that each was made to pay, but instead of looking to this important question and despite the foreknowledge of the capital available, these various industries were left in a chaotic state of incompletion.

We are of the opinion that in the end most of the projects begun by Mr. Clergue will pay, and pay well, and he is deserving of no little gratitude for having directed attention to the resources of our northern lands, for otherwise, that section would probably be still unknown.

It is regrettable that he did not combine a saving modicum of caution with brilliant promoting genius.

To whom ever the Soo works fall in the reorganization which must now follow, Canada is chiefly interested in seeing that they are made to pay. The collapse, due to no fault of the natural resources of the country or advantages of location, will, nevertheless, reflect seriously on the prospects of other Canadian industries seeking outside capital. The most effective remedy for the wrong done our reputation would be such a reorganization and management of these allied industries, either as a whole or separately, as would yield good hard money in dividends.

The Dominion revenue from customs for the three months ending September 30 was $10,888,166 compared with $9,070,717 for the same three months last year, or an increase of $1,817,448. The customs revenue for the month of September alone was $3,756,705, or an increase of $615,675 over September last year.

The final consummation of the separation of The Dominion Coal and The Dominion Steel companies should have a good effect on both. The Steel Co. should now be provided with sufficient funds to complete the plant and develop what is undoubtedly a good proposition in spite of the excessive first cost. Coal will now be relieved of the steel incubus and in a position to be developed along profitable lines. The unsatisfactory showing of these eastern enterprises after having been launched with such promise, has been most unfortunate for Canadian industries in general, as tending to discourage the investment of the European capital we so much need at the present, and will so much more need in the future, if our dreams are to be realized. It is the more unfortunate in that in both cases mismanagement rather than lack of natural resources and facilities has been the source of the difficulty. Every Canadian will hail with acclaim the day on which the Sydney interests come to their own in the industrial and financial world.

Too much American silver coin in Canada, was a complaint heard at the Manufacturers' Association meeting, and a resolution was passed asking the banks and the Government to take measures to secure its exodus and prevent the recurrence of the nuisance, for such it has become. There is reason in the resolution. The profit in the coinage of silver is about 60 per cent., and that profit should be the perquisite of our own rather than of a foreign government. Patriotism was also appealed to and Canadian pride was enlisted against the dimes, quarters, half-dollars, and "cart wheels" that load down our pockets and irritate our tempers.

If there was reciprocity in the matter and our coins passed current across the border, we might submit to the indignity of accepting Yankee money, which is being poured into our country in greater abundance every year by the tourist route. But there isn't. On crossing the border you must pay tribute to the money changer, and we might just as well do likewise. The act of revealing to the American tourist the fact that the almighty dollar isn't almighty over here unless in the form of a Dominion note, while perhaps ruffling his temper for the moment, may just possibly have the effect of increasing his respect for the Johnny Canucks. On the other hand there is the question whether it is worth while to discourage the profitable American tourist trade, which is annually growing greater, by putting what is undoubtedly an irritating impediment in the way.

Daylight is beginning to show through the darkness surrounding the Soo. Senator Dandurand has been handed over all the necessary documents to complete the sale of The Lake Superior Consolidated Co. to his English clients, The Vickers-Maxim Co. and the Armstrongs. The terms of sale, subject to ratification by the prospective purchasers, call for an immediate cash payment of $8,000,000 and subsequent payments until the sum of about $30,000,000, the purchase price, is reached.

Insurance as a Basis of Credit.

THE convention of the National Association of Credit Men, held recently at St. Louis, paid some attention to fire insurance as it affects the credit of retail merchants. The following resolution appears to have been generally approved:

"Whereas, A great many country merchants do not appreciate the importance of carrying insurance on their stock;

"And Whereas, It is likely to cause ill feeling towards any individual concern that takes it upon itself to call attention to such failure;

"Therefore, Be It Resolved, That the secretary of the National Association be directed to prepare a letter to be distributed to the various local associations, which letter shall be sent by the secretaries of such local associations to merchants who carry no insurance and such letter to be accompanied by any literature which shall be published by the association bearing upon insurance as a necessary requisite to the securing of credit upon wholesale or manufacturing trade, such names to be furnished the local secretaries by members who desire such letters sent."

It came out during the discussion that there was considerable loss inflicted on manufacturers and wholesale dealers, by retail stocks being inadequately insured. This arose, first, from the indifference of merchants; second, from injudicious economy in trying to save the cost of insurance; third, from inability to secure insurance. The proper system was admitted to be, the refusal of credit to any retailer who keeps his stock uninsured. The fact that a retailer is unable to secure insurance on his stock was recognized as a caution against his being granted credit, as, in these days of competition, if insurance companies decline a risk, they must have some special reason for this course. Fire insurance as a basis of credit is also shown by the uniform practice of mortgage loan companies who insist upon the properties covered by any loan they grant being covered by a fire policy. Banks also are equally strict in protecting themselves when making loans that are secured, more or less, by such property as is liable to damage by fire. The banks also take assignments of life assurance policies as collateral security, though only in the last resort, as this is an undesirable practice. The business which is rendered possible by the security of insurance, amounts to hundreds of millions. Insurance to-day is one of the bulwarks of credit.—Insurance and Finance Chronicle.

Rate of Interest on Savings Deposits.

A RECENT event of interest in Canadian financial circles was the decision of the Canadian Bankers' Association against the proposal of the Bank of Nova Scotia to raise the rate of interest allowed depositors in chartered banks from 3 to 3½ per cent.

Although the proposal was turned down, other leading financial institutions besides the Bank of Nova Scotia were prepared to make the change because of the pressure being brought to bear by depositors through the country, the increasing demand for loans and the scarcity of money at their disposal.

Canadian banks have experienced no difficulty in finding employment for all their funds during the past two or three years, and they have actually no money to spare now except for investment in choice collaterals promising good returns. One cannot help noticing the handsome dividends they are able to declare and the respectable rest accounts they are building up. Depositors are beginning to feel that they too ought to enjoy the fruits of this harvest, especially as their money is largely responsible for the good times Canadian banks are enjoying. They think that they are entitled to receive more than the nominal rate of 3 per cent. on deposits when the demand for funds is so great. Indeed, in order to secure the supply of money required for loans, the banks may yet have to agree to the proposed increase.

Some bankers say that if the rate of interest is raised the charge for accommodation to clients will have to be correspondingly increased. It is interesting to note that the Bank of Nova Scotia threatens to compete for funds at a higher rate, and it must see a clear road ahead for the investment of the extra funds that would undoubtedly be attracted by the higher rate. The present commercial rate for loans cannot easily be raised higher than it is at present. If any readjustment has to be made it looks as if the banks may be the ones who will have to be satisfied with less profits.

Others argue that a high rate of interest will act as a damper on business, and this is undoubtedly the case. Cheap money is as important for the growing industries of a country as cheap fuel, cheap raw material and cheap labor.

With the extra amount of business, however, the banks would probably be able to make up whatever deficiency might result from the advanced rate. The prosperity of the banks should cause no jealousy. Were they otherwise than prosperous the business world would have more reason for concern.

Mr. Gould, of the Bank of Toronto, states that we haven't yet heard the end of the recent proposal of the Bank of Nova Scotia to raise the rate of interest on savings deposits from 3 to 3½ per cent. It is to be taken up again by the Canadian Bankers' Association in Montreal. Mr. Gould says western banks will stand by the 3 per cent. rate, and that the Minister of Finance is in favor of keeping it where it is. If the banks should raise the rate it is probable that depositors in the Savings Department, Ottawa, would also petition for a ½ per cent. increase. Such a state of affairs would place the Minister in an awkward position.

The Mystery of Consols.

THE low price of consols is referred to as "a mystery." A member of one of the largest financial houses in the city this morning confirmed the judgment of the most expert writers on the subject in these words:

"The course of the quotation for consols seems to me the most natural thing in the world. The huge borrowings of the Government on account of the South African War are, of course, telling their own tale on the security. But, besides that consideration, there is the additional factor to be reckoned with that so many other trustee securities bearing interest at 3 per cent. are now competing for popular favor. People are naturally anxious to get the best return possible for their capital, and so consols at 2½ per cent., even at their present price, are getting the cold shoulder more and more. There is also at the moment a very large "bull" account open in consols, which affects the situation to a very large extent. There is no reason to think anything extraordinary is going on in the city just now with regard to consols; and most financial men look upon the situation as a perfectly normal one—having regard, that is, to all the circumstances of the case."

Men of the highest rank in financial circles have substantially confirmed this view again and again.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Current Financial Notes.

THE success of the branch of the Royal Bank of Canada, opened at Havana, Cuba, has warranted the opening of an additional new branch at Santiago.

The Imperial Bank of Canada has opened a branch at Trout Lake, B.C.

A branch of the Traders Bank has been established at Embro, Ont.

The Sovereign Bank has opened a branch at Belmont, Ont.

The Bank of British North America has opened a branch at Levis, Que.

A branch of the Union Bank of Canada has been opened at Mount Brydges, Ont., with W. B. Dunn, as manager.

A branch of the Bank of Toronto was opened at Coldwater, Ont., on October 5, 1903.

During the first week of October a seat on the New York Stock Exchange sold at $52,500, a drop of $20,000 from the top price and of $7,000 from the previous sale recently. One on Montreal 'Change sold for $15,500, which was $1,500 below the price paid recently and $12,000 below the record price. The reason for this must be the pessimistic outlook for stock trading.

Only the apathy of investors can explain the weakness of the current stock market. General conditions are healthy. The Toronto Railway reports average daily gains of $1,000 in its earnings for the past week. The increase in the gross earnings of the C.P.R. for the first week of October is $109,000, the total increase since July 1 being $1,688.000. The increase in the gross earnings of the G.T.R. for the week ending October 7 is $50,196, and that since January 1, $3,839,467. Other Canadian transportation companies and industrial corporations are proportionately fortunate, while the banks are doing a phenomenally successful business. In the meantime the market prices of stocks are away below the level of their intrinsic values and the market dull.

ARGUMENT.

We now offer a practical time piece for the Grocery Trade of Canada, and base our statement upon the following:

First—It is absolutely guaranteed to keep accurate time.

Second—It stands rough usage and does not get out of order easily, making it the only watch for dealers outside of the jewelery trade to handle, and also making it a practical one for sportsmen, boys and all men who give a watch hard usage.

Third—Its low price and high quality insure a tremendous sale, which we further augment by furnishing many handsome advertising devices for your store.

Fourth—Last but not least, these watches offer a handsome profit. Price cutters are not supplied.

Sold by several leading Grocery Jobbers of Canada. We will tell you who they are upon request.

Trial Offer—To any Grocery Dealer who will write to us upon his business letter head and inclose 75c. we will send a sample watch (duty not paid) and our catalogue, so that he can test its accuracy and durability.

THE OFFICE

DEVOTED TO THE OFFICE STAFF OF BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS.

Credit is Capital.

By A. M. B.

"A GOOD name is rather to be chosen than great riches." A good reputation is an important factor in business to ensure success. A merchant should do all in his power to establish a reputation as a person whose word can ever be relied upon. A temporary advantage may be gained by a false or misleading statement, but upon no such foundation can a merchant hope to erect a successful business. A business whose foundation rests upon the treacherous sands of falsehood cannot withstand the ravages of time and weather. Truth is the foundation upon which every business should be based.

Merchants should look well after their credit. Credit is capital—it is a fortune. If a merchant abuses his credit he might as well throw away so much stock. How may a merchant impair his credit? By not discharging his obligations promptly; by waiting until the last moment, or, perhaps, longer than the last moment; by neglecting their accounts so long that creditors have to send in dunners.

Nothing should give more pleasure to a high-minded merchant than to discharge his obligations cheerfully and with promptitude; and in so doing he is giving his creditors the best evidence possible that their confidence in him has not been misplaced.

It is not always the man with the most prosperous looking business and the largest banking account who has the best credit, although, of course, that goes a long way. The man who is ever in time—who always meets his accounts with a smiling face and an open hand—who pays up as if it were a pleasure, as it should be, and never dishonors a creditor's draft because it happens to be a few cents out—he is the man whose credit, although he may not have so much money out at interest as the other fellow, is better than the "other fellow."

At the time of a crisis a merchant may transfer his money; he cannot change his character. When considering the worth of debtors the question with the creditor is not so much what a man has, but what he is; not what his means, but what his character. Is he truthful? Will he equivocate? Will his assets in case of financial difficulty be found in the possession of some trumped-up creditor? or, will he prove loyal to his creditors, even if he has to suffer himself?

Substantial credit, which may be drawn upon in pressing need, may bridge over many an abyss, into which the merchant would otherwise plunge to destruction; it ever gives the merchant a lift towards success. So let not business men abuse their credit; let them guard it well.

A Word for the Boss.

"SEE that man going in there?"

"Where?"

"Why, right there, going in the office—the chap with the silk tile and the blue striped trousers."

"Yes, I see him. Who is he?"

"Why, he is the boss."

Now, boys, here's a word for him, for the boss.

You have your troubles. Well, he has his, too.

You have your rent day, and landlords will not wait. He has his pay day, and his Bills Payable is a large, fat book.

You get a note from the butcher, "Please call and settle up the $8 you owe." The boss gets a message from the banker, "Please cover your account; you have an overdraft of $8,000."

The butcher is your bother.

The banker is his.

"But the boss comes down at nine and I have been working for an hour and a half."

"Hish!"

Softly, now, for we will enter his bedroom. That's a massive bed—quartered oak. Someone is tossing on it. A bell afar off strikes one, and soon a silvery chime from a sweet-voiced clock in the library emphasizes the hour just gone. The figure tosses on. One-two-three. The chimes have spoken twice, the bell afar off has preceded it. And who is the one that tosses? Why, it is the boss. Business sits on the bed-post, and reaching down, sticks and stabs him. So, don't forget the two golden recuperating hours tossed away through the night. That evens up the hour and a half, doesn't it?

"Come on, now, let's go over to the house of Bill, the blacksmith."

"Hello, Bill." No answer. "Hello, Bill!" No answer yet. Say, Bill sleeps soundly, doesn't he?

Well, Bill banked Care when he banked his fire. "Sleep on, Bill; sleep on, you have no marble clock, but you rest well."

Is the dinner for the boss nice? Have the servants and the mistress done their best? Yes, but there is the unbidden guest, Business. And Business refuses to eat, but he draws his skeleton chair and spreads out bad debts and care all over the table. Then the boss runs to the club to escape him. But business passes the door man and doesn't need his card. Business pushes up his chair and gets in the cafe with the boss and mixes himself up with the drinks. He goes to the theatre with the boss and, robbing the players of their individuality, roosts [illegible] the footlights.

"Someone has touched you for a quarter, did they, and you loosened?"

"Yes, I did."

"Well, that is good. But an old friend has just touched the boss for $25."

"But if I had his wad."

"Oh, his wad! How do you know whether he has a wad or not? Perhaps the bank runs his business, and the whole shooting match is mortgaged from stem to gudgeon."

"Failed, assets $50,000, liabilities about the same."

How often have you read this? There are many heartaches in those few words, my boy.

So here is a word for the boss, even if he does come in at nine, wears trousers with a delicate blue stripe, and sets it off with a silk tile.—Charles F. Raymond.

Romanizing Japanese Writing.

WRITING of the proposed changes in Japanese character writing, The London Times, of July 9, says: "The scheme, if adopted, will probably come into operation at the beginning of the next scholastic year, leaving a few months for the preparation of the readers and other handbooks. The possibility of the Government setting aside the expert advice is remote, and, therefore, it is permissible to contemplate the suggestion as something by no means chimerical.

"When accomplished, the Romanization of the Japanese language will put the final touch of victory to that revolution begun some 40 years ago. It is difficult to realize in a small measure what the step means to the Japanese nation. Not only will commercial relations be infinitely simplified; not only will ready intercourse between native and European be made a thousandfold easier and thus contribute to the adjustment of political difficulties; not only will the germs of western literature on the one hand and the classics of Japan on the other be rendered accessible to the ordinary translator, but the whole wealth and weight of European thought, opinion and current criticism will become susceptible of reduction to a common medium, for the mere language of Japan is fairly easy to acquire. The great obstacle hitherto has been the practical impossibility of reaching the bulk of the people, who, acquainted only with character writing and not much in contact with western people, are still unable to grasp the European aspect of events; but this suggestion, if carried out, will remove that obstacle. In fact, the Romanization of the written tongue will mark the advent of Japan's maturity, and to this end its adoption in schools is essential."

The Need of Expert Auditing.

HOW imperative is the need of an expert audit is well illustrated by the failure of a large Chicago business house which not long since went into liquidation. This business, according to an exchange, was conducted by three partners, the nominal head of the house being a gentleman too advanced in years to give more than a "consulting" service to the business. Another partner was a man of middle age who had been trained in the selling end of the house and had practically no experience in the management of finances. The third partner was a young man who had inherited his interest in the business and was supposed to be the controlling factor in the finances of the house. Suddenly, and very unexpectedly, this old and well-known business went to the wall. When it was too late, an auditor was called in and quickly found the cause of the trouble.

The business had been sapped by the outside investments and speculations of the youngest partner. "For several years," said the oldest partner, "I have been, on account of age, practically retired from business and have only been consulted occasionally by the men entrusted with the active management. I did not know anything about this drain upon the resources of the concern and supposed that we were in good condition."

"I have been busy," explained the second partner, "promoting sales and handing out goods. Of course I knew we were doing a very good business and felt that any important matter connected with the finances of the house would be called to my attention by the partner in charge of that department."

In other words, if within the last two or three years this house had subjected its accounting records to examination by an audit company, both of the elder partners would have been at once informed of the outside investments of the youngest partner and the latter would have been speedily called to account and his outside investments and operations stopped and the failure of the business averted.

The Hobby for Round Numbers.

HERE is a little lecture for retailers who are fond of round numbers in the invoices of the wholesale merchants they get their merchandise from. Writers on this subject, who are connected with prominent wholesale establishments, say that there are retailers who have a regular hobby for cutting down their wholesalers' accounts to round numbers, and in remitting, send only that amount. If the retailers' account with the wholesale merchant amounts to $83.17 or $83.29, and he receives a statement to that effect, he will drop off the 17c. or the 29c. for good luck and remit the $83.

Of course that 17 or 29 cents is nothing in an eighty-three dollar account, but is it business? Leaving out of consideration all other sides of the question, is not that dropping off of the cents in an account a rather loose method of doing business? The retailers who practice it may consider it "sharpness," but if those retailers found themselves in the wholesalers' shoes, in all probability they would not look at it in that light. The only true business way of paying that account is to remit the exact $83.17 or the $83.29.

It is to be noticed, too, that if the account should be $82.87, the retailer never thinks of remitting the round $83. Rather it would be that he would cut it down to the even $82.75.

The retailer cannot claim that it is for convenience that he does business so, since it is quite as convenient to remit $83.29 as $83. Then in entering the item in his books, allowance must be made for the 29 cents as discount or some such thing, and therefore it would in reality be more convenient to remit the $83.29. If it be not for convenience it must be for the 29 cents in itself. Now the retailer has received value for $83.29 and not only $83, and it is only right that the wholesaler should receive to the cent the value of his goods. The 29 cents is of as much value to the wholesaler as to the retailer; it rightly belongs to the wholesaler and he should receive it. If the retailer would look at it from the wholesaler's standpoint he would at once see the justice of the argument.

In all probability the retailer has the same trouble with his customers as the wholesaler has with his. If a customer's purchases amount to $1.05 in some cases that customer would be quite indignant should he put up a two dollar bill and not get one dollar back. Not only is that 5 cents a clear loss to the retail merchant, which loss on a bill of $1.05 means nearly 5 per cent., but there is the trouble of dealing with it in the books, since if the merchant wishes to keep an accurate account of his business it would not do to write across that bill "Paid in full."

This system of doing business is altogether wrong, and should not be. The sooner it is discontinued the better it will be for the mercantile world. The retailer can do more than the wholesaler can to remedy this evil. The retailer has his customer right before him and can show him directly the reasonableness of his request that the account be paid to the cent. Should the retailer remit to his wholesaler 17 to 29 cents less than the account calls for, it is not so easy for him to reason with the retailer.

Window and Interior Displays

Timely Hints and Suggestions.

THE window which secured first prize in "The Grocer's" window dressing contest, a cut of which appears below, was submitted by Whitehead & Huether, Walkerton, Ont., and was devoted to the display of canned fish.

The particular feature of the window that makes it of exceptional value as a drawing card is the small tub of water in the centre front, with live fish swimming around. This usage of live animals of any kind in a window has always been a great attraction and such a scheme will never fail to collect a crowd. The principal objection to the average window of this kind, however, is that they can so very seldom be used as an advertisement of any particular line, and the animal must have the whole window to itself, acting, to some extent, as an advertisement of the firm, but not of any line of goods. In this window, however, the fish are right in a line with the goods displayed and every purpose is served.

The tub of water is made to represent a pond and the idea is further carried out by the use of sod around the edges, and a gravel road curving from one side of the window to the other, with a little wagon and some artificial palms on the brink of the pond, adding materially to the effect.

Artificial palms have always been an important addition to any window, as an artistic touch, and Whitehead & Huether have fully recognized this. In this window they relieve the stiff outline which would exist with the use of canned goods only, however attractively they might be arranged. These things, together with the fishing pole leaning against the side, form what might be called the extraneous decoration, although none of it is really foreign to the subject of the display.

The stocking of the goods has been carefully done, with an eye to their advertisement and yet to the avoidance of overcrowding. The piles of canned goods are just high enough and numerous enough to advertise themselves without interfering in any way with the general good effect, but rather add very much to the appearance of the window.

The arrangement of such a window can be accomplished with almost no expense, and very little outlay of time. These facts add much to the value of such a window.

SECOND PRIZE.

The second prize window, shown by John Robertson & Son, Montreal, is one that for ingenuity and carefulness in working out the idea is one of the best that could be used. As a Summer window its selling value must have been very great. Unfortunately its suitability for reproduction depends more upon the idea it contains than on the distinct view to be had of the entire scheme.

It was a campers' and tourists' supplies window and the whole window was a miniature Summer resort with everything that is to be found in the genuine camping grounds. The bush, the lake, the rocks, the boats, floats, docks, canoes and landing places are all naturally shown, and life is given the picture by the introduction of wigwams, a Summer hotel, tents and Indians. All the roughness, all the pleasures of a camper's life are illustrated and in such a natural life-like way that a person could not pass without studying the window and spending much time on it.

Where the window loses a trifle in value is in its unsuitability as an advertisement for any particular goods, although it will attract campers, as it shows that special attention is paid their lines. The only direct advertisement of goods is made by the placing of campers' supplies here and there through the window, but as these would interfere more or less with the scene and would attract limited attention, the use of them is a matter of taste. What would add to the merits of such a window was a large framed card in the doorway advising campers of the hours of delivery to the several resorts adjoining Montreal.

THIRD PRIZE.

A window dressed for Mr. J. B. Berthiaume, Montreal, showing "Red Heart" tonic wine, was given the third prize. The back, walls and ceiling are lined with white, on which small hearts, the trade mark of the wine, appear. The central stack of bottles was built up on white covered steps, and the side stacks were supported by sheets of glass between each row of bottles. In the front a few paper-covered bottles placed carelessly around and some pictures of "the fencing girl," relieved the monotony of a solid bottle window. Price tickets are not neglected.

This display was attractive enough by day, but at night, when the two large hearts on the centre stack shone with small incandescent lights, the effect must have been particularly striking. A purely bottle display is rather a difficult window to arrange with much satisfaction, but in this window the dresser obtained excellent results with very little expense.

Second Prize Window—John Robertson & Son, Montreal.

Baby as a Window Trim.

Lela May Stetler, who has attained the venerable age of seven weeks, is in line for a prize for the best drawing advertisement in the city, says a Chicago daily.

The wee baby occupies a throne of soft pillows in the window of her father's store at the corner of Curtis and West Madison streets.

She is surrounded by a varied assortment of canned goods, tomatoes, sirloin steaks and melons, but she is as happy and contented as if she were in the finest and best equipped nursery in the world.

And why shouldn't she be?

A Peep into the Future

We cannot tell your fortune, but we can help you make it.

Our plan is very simple; you will be surprised at what a change a DAYTON MONEYWEIGHT SCALE, with the new invention, the Nearweight Detector, will make in your monthly profits.

Never did queen on a throne receive more genuine homage than is the portion of this wee ruler of her father's heart and home. Gathered outside her window is a constantly changing crowd of men, women and children, who nod and beckon and laugh and talk baby jargon to the cooing infant in the window.

"The window is a good, safe place for her," said Mr. Stetler, last night, as he lifted the gurgling, laughing baby high in his strong arms. "She can't hurt herself there, and she's a splendid advertisement.

"I'll match her against any seven-week-old baby in the city," he added, proudly, and the baby cooed her approbation of the proposition.

while the humpback is not in great demand on the Canadian market. At the present moment, therefore, the following extract from The Seattle Register anent the salmon, should interest :

Onchorynchus (ong-ko-ring-kus) is the scientific name for Pacific coast salmon, of which there are five distinct species, scientifically. At present ichthyologists are a unit in this opinion : (1) The chinook or quinnat salmon (onchorynchus and schawtytscha) ; (2) the blueback salmon or red fish (onchorynchus nerka) ; (3) the silver salmon (onchorynchus kisutch) ; (4) the dog salmon (onchorynchus keta) and (5) the humpback salmon is short. Shipments cannot be safely promised before September 1.

Cohoe salmon.—This is next in graxe of Puget Sound salmon ; is of deep pink color, although some class it among red fish. Still it is not red. It is a very delicately flavored fish ; shows quite a little oil, although the oil develops but little color. The fish is highly regarded in some sections on account of its delicious flavor. Like the sockeye, it is also a salt water caught fish, and opens firm in the can. The cohoe season commences about August 20, although the goods are hardly ever ready for shipment before September 20.

PACIFIC COAST SALMON.

THE attention of the trade has been drawn to salmon very especially this year on account of the short pack at the British Columbia canneries with the consequent high prices for what has become one of our staple foods and one of the largest items in our canned goods trade. Sockeyes of the highest grade have been withdrawn from the market for some time, and only those supplied who were fortunate enough to have their orders accepted early enough. Cohoes, the next grade, are very high, mon (onchorynchus gorbuscha), their scientific names being given by Walbaum nearly one hundred years ago.

The three kinds best known to the trade are as follows : Sockeye salmon is the first grade of Puget Sound salmon, sometimes called Fraser River. It is blood-red in color, closely knitted and of heavy red oil, and regarded as the most absolutely uniform salmon known to the trade. It is excellent eating and ranks with the Columbia River chinook. Packed from July 10 to August 10. The sea-

Humpback salmon runs only every other year. This grade of salmon is also caught in Alaska, and is there termed Pink Alaska. The run is in the Fall, from early August till September. It possesses a good flavor, is the sweetest salmon known, has some oil, but is very light in color. The fish when fresh is red, but having no body, loses color while cooking. In designating color of humpback, it should not be described as pink ; "pale pink" would be more appropriate. Humpback are not ready for shipment before September 1.

Lives Saved by Tobacco.

HOW many lives My Lady Nicotine has saved from a lingering death of ennui no man can tell. Her devotees would place the number at no slight figure. The following waif tales, whose authenticity no true smoker will doubt for a moment, are well worth perusal:

A plot against the life of Mazzini, the Italian patriot, once failed because of his courtesy with a box of cigars. It came to his knowledge that an attempt was to be made on his life. He procured a box of the finest cigars and waited for his would-be assassins to call on him. When they came in he handed out the cigars. Taken aback by this manoeuvre, they took them and began to smoke.

They did not find it easy to start killing a man who had just handed them good cigars, and they sat about awkwardly until Mazzini said:

"Gentlemen, take another cigar. I believe you came to kill me? Why do you not proceed to business?"

The assassins muttered some words of lame regret and left.

Then there is the story told of how Sig. Mario, the famous tenor, saved his life with a cigar. The singer had just started on a long railroad journey when the man with whom he was locked in the compartment drew a truculent looking knife from his pocket and announced that he intended to cut his throat. The singer recognized that he had to deal with a crazy man, and he saw that coolness alone could save him, as it was highly probable that a struggle would end in the maniac accomplishing his purpose.

Before you begin, wouldn't you like to smoke a good cigar?" he asked of his murderous companion.

"That wouldn't be a bad idea," said the man, laying aside his knife.

"My nerves will be steadier."

Mario gave him the biggest cigar he had in his case, and when the crazy man had smoked it he offered him another big one. The man continued smoking the singer's cigars, and, luckily for the Italian, he had a good supply. The man was still smoking when the train stopped at the next station, and Mario managed to hand him over to the police.

The late King Humbert, of Italy, in his youth, was an habitual smoker. One day while driving through the streets of Naples he happened to drop a cigar which he had just lighted. He noticed that a singularly dejected-looking citizen darted forward and grabbed the cigar from the street. He thought nothing more of the matter until some months later, when it was called to his memory upon receipt of an unsigned letter relating that the writer had been on the verge of committing suicide when he had chanced to pick up the cigar which the King had dropped.

The smoking of this, he said, had changed the moodiness of his thoughts for the time being and the impulse to suicide had been overcome. He added that he was happy to say that the troubles which had threatened to overwhelm him then had left him. In that case the King's cigar saved not himself, but the other man.

Two more instances are given to show where men saved themselves from embarrassment, not from peril, with using cigars. When Bismarck was entering Paris with the German army he noticed that some French workmen were gathered at the gate evidently prepared to make a hostile demonstration. Quickly he turned his horse toward them and pulling out a cigar, asked their leader for a match. The man handed him one and the attitude of the Frenchmen changed completely as the German leader thanked the workmen courteously.

Edwin Booth once thus disarmed a small mob of men who had been hired to make a demonstration at a performance he was giving on one of his tours. They had been hired by rival actors to attend Booth's performance and cause an uproar which would spoil the play. They were seated in two upper boxes and Booth learned the plan. He sent them a box of cigars and expressed the hope that they would be pleased with them even if they were not with his performance. The policy succeeded and the men who were hired to hiss stayed to applaud.

Diary of a Reformer.

Extracts from the diary of George Washington Throggins, in The Chicago Tribune.

October 1.—Have become convinced that I am smoking too much, and have decided to quit it at once and for good. As a sort of object lesson to keep before my mind the extravagance of which I have been guilty in the indulgence of the foolish habit, I have adopted this rule:

Whenever I have an inclination to smoke a cigar I shall drop into a small pasteboard box the sum of money it would take to buy the cigar. I shall deposit this money in bank from time to time and watch it grow.

October 2.—Pretty tough, but I'm sticking to it. Wanted a ten cent cigar first thing this morning. Put a dime in the pasteboard box. Felt the same inclination twice during the forenoon. Two more dimes. Wanted to smoke three times in the afternoon. Sixty cents in the box.

October 3.—Decided it would be good to taper off on my inclinations a little. Wanted to smoke three times this norning. Dropped a quarter in the box. Same thing in the afternoon. Another quarter. Got $1.10 saved now.

October 4.—Thought I might as well come down to nickel cigars. Getting rich too fast. All my hankerings to-day were resolutely scaled down to five centers. Saved 40 cents. Got $1.50 now. When it gets to be $10 I shall deposit it in the bank.

October 5.—Smoked a still cheaper grade to-day—in my mind. Eight for a quarter. Put 25 cents in the box.

October 6.—Had a strong inclination this morning for a 25 cent cigar. Decided to humor it to the extent of adding 25 cents to the collection. Cheap smokes are demoralizing. Humored it some more. Added $1.50 to the sum on hand, making $3.25 in all. This is too reckless. Must economize.

October 7.—Smoked — constructively — nothing but stogies to-day. Three for a nickel. Too cheap. Left a bad taste in my mind. All I put away to-day was 10 cents.

October 8.—Went back to the three for a quarter kind. Added half a dollar to the treasury.

October 9.—Had a strong desire for a 50 center to-day. Gratified it—in the same way. Felt that I could have smoked a coffin nail. Punished myself by going out and contributing a quarter to the fresh air fund.

October 10.—Got reckless again to-day and indulged in wild imaginings of unlimited stogies. Dropped 65 cents in the box. Have $5 now.

October 11.—Took the $5 and went out and bought a box of perfectos.

MCALPIN CONSUMERS TOBACCO FACTORY, TORONTO.

The McAlpin Consumers Tobacco Co., Limited.

THE McAlpin Consumers Tobacco Co., Ltd., which has a capitalization of $500,000, was organized in February, 1902, with Gen. E. A. McAlpin president, C. E. Fleming vice-president, R. Pinchin managing director and W. A. McAlpin secretary and treasurer. These, with C. A. B. Pratt, New York, and Jas. A. Straith, Windsor, comprise the board of directors.

A branch of the company in operation at Leamington was originally The Consumers Tobacco Co. and manufactured straight Canadian goods. In the new plant a combination of Canadian and American goods is manufactured, and in the new factory just completed straight American goods will be manufactured. The company has also in Leamington large warehouses in charge of an expert raw leaf operator for curing the Canadian product.

The business of the company is steadily increasing. Their brands British and King's Navy chewing tobacco are known from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Their Apricot fine cut chewing in ounce packages is held to be one of the best fine-cut chewing tobaccos in Canada. As an illustration of the increase in their high-priced brands, one of the largest shipments of Virginia tobacco ever entering Canada was delivered at the factory recently, the procession of drays carrying these goods furnishing a picture not soon to be forgotten.

Gen. E. A. McAlpin, president of The McAlpin Consumers Tobacco Co., Ltd., is a son of D. H. McAlpin, the large American tobacco manufacturer. In 1887 he founded The McAlpin Tobacco Co. which had its first factory in Toronto, on the Esplanade, removing in 1891 to the corner of McAlpin and McMurrich streets, which is still the site of the company's plant. For many years Gen. McAlpin was manager of the large tobacco manufacturing firm of D. H. McAlpin & Co., New York. About two years ago The American Tobacco Co. purchased this concern, and since then Gen. McAlpin has been devoting more attention to his Canadian business. As a result the fine new addition illustrated by the accompanying cut has been added to the company's plant. Besides being president of this company in Canada Gen. McAlpin occupies several important positions in various leading New York financial institutions. He and his accomplished wife have also won a high reputation in New York for their philanthropy and benevolence.

Robert Pinchin, managing director of The McAlpin Consumers Tobacco Co., Ltd., occupied for years a similar position with The Consumers Tobacco Co, until their amalgamation with The McAlpin Consumers Tobacco Co. in November, 1902. Outside his tobacco interests Mr. Pinchin is vice-president of The Windsor Turned Goods Co., director of The Standard Paint & Varnish Co., both of Windsor, and an active member of The Canadian Manufacturers' Association.

W. A. McAlpin, secretary and treasurer of The McAlpin Consumers Tobacco Co., is a nephew of the late D. H. McAlpin. He has been in the tobacco business for 20 years and is an expert manufacturer. A wide experience gained with D. H. McAlpin & Co., New York, and in the manufacture of Canadian tobaccos, make him a valuable officer for the company.

London Notes.

There is nothing particularly worthy of record in cigar and tobacco circles this week. Every factory is busy; some behind with orders. Already Christmas orders are being made up, the interim between now and the festive season being required for the proper seasoning of the goods. The Christmas package business is by no means a profitable one for the manufacturer. The demand is for boxes of ten and twenty-five each. When the cost of these extra boxes per thousand cigars, added to the additional labels required, the labor, packing, stamping, etc., is figured and the manufacturer asks per thousand the exact net additional cost, the dealer is sometimes inclined to dub him an extortioner. In further notice of the holiday package business, we might mention the fact of the impossibility of foreseeing just what quantity will be necessary, the result being frequently that a large quantity is carried over from year to year. Nevertheless, the factory not offering holiday cigars would be considered unenterprising, "just behind the times," etc.

The firm of Geo. Kelly & Co., consisting of Geo. Kelly and Lou Davies, has been dissolved, the former continuing under same style.

The Tuckett Cigar Co. are about to open a factory in Winnipeg, it is said.

How to Fill a Pipe.

Comparatively few people know how to fill a pipe and take care of it so as to get the best possible results. An interesting work called "Points on Pipes," brought out by an English pipe house, has this to say on the subject:

"Put a small plug of tobacco right down into the bottom of the bowl, then add the remainder gradually, pressing lightly round the inside of the bowl, especially next the stem. This insures the tobacco burning evenly. It is better to undercharge than overcharge. Never refill a pipe until it has quite cooled down; it is a practice of regular smokers to have two pipes in use, so that they never have to recharge a pipe until it has had ample time to become perfectly cool. A new pipe should only be half filled and the tobacco smoked slowly right out to the bottom. If necessary relight again and again, that the tobacco may be smoked right to the end and the bottom of the bowl charred. If the pipe is smoked thus, carefully, a few times until the whole of the interior of the bowl is well charred, there will be no danger of the pipe burning afterwards."

It might be added that Englishmen, as a rule, are better pipe smokers than Americans.

PIPES, AND HOW THEY ARE MADE.

BY GEORGE WESTERN.

DELIGHTFUL as is the irresponsibility of the cigarette, soul-stirring and divinely pungent the aroma of a cigar, the pipe is the best of all. You need never be afraid of your pipe. It is worth all the medicine and the pills that the whole pharmacopœia could produce. Were it not so, why call it the pipe of peace? It is about this "pipe of peace" that I am going to tell you—how it is made, where the materials come from, and all the rest of it. There is a lot to say about pipes. In fact, you could fill a book with interesting talk about them, and still leave a lot unsaid, so I must curb my pen and get to the business at once and tell you all that I learned on my visit to a large factory in London, England, where pipes of all kinds are manufactured.

Let us start with the meerschaum, that beautiful white pipe whose bowl you must touch with the greatest care, lest you leave the slightest scratch or finger mark on its silky surface. The word meerschaum means, literally, sea foam. But you must not run away with the idea that meerschaum pipes are made of petrified sea foam. That is wrong. Meerschaum is a mineral found in the neighborhood of Asia Minor by a man called Meerschaum. When dug out of the ground it is soft and flaky, like soap.

Well, the meerschaum is taken to Vienna and sent packed in cases to the merchants in this country. The price to the trade varies according to the size of the pieces. Thus, a case containing about 200 small pieces, each piece to be made into a small meerschaum bowl, will cost at the rate of four shillings apiece. But when the case contains bigger pieces the price is higher, ranging from seven to twenty shillings.

The first thing to do before cutting the bowl of a pipe is to soak the lump of raw meerschaum in water. There is an extraordinary quality about meerschaum. It will absorb more than its own weight of water. But if you leave it in the water too long it will break up into little pieces, and therefore be useless. After it has been soaked in water it becomes about as soft as cheese and is easily cut with a knife.

When it is in this soft flaky state the meerschaum is cut with an ordinary knife, into the rough shape of a pipe, and then the skilled mechanic sets to work on the bowl. With the lathe and a sharp knife he cuts the bowl and the stem. He then clamps the bowl on to the lathe once more and hollows it out. For this a circular chisel is used. A bradawl does the same offices to the stem.

As far as the chisel and knife work go the pipe is complete. It is, of course, in a very rough state, and has to be sandpapered very carefully until quite smooth. Then comes the wax bath. A pan is filled with wax, and when this is heated until it has reached liquid state, the pipe is immersed for two or three minutes. It is then put away to dry for the mouthpiece of amber to be fitted on.

filled—

waxed—

polished, and finally fitted with a mouthpiece, then being ready to smoke.

The meer schaum pipe now awaits its mouthpiece. This is almost invariably made of that pretty clouded amber so universally admired.

Having been soaked in water—

the meerschaum is turned down—

The amber is imported into England from Konigsberg, in Prussia, where it is a Government monopoly. But it comes in the first place from the shores of the Baltic, where it is taken from the sea. Amber is purchased by manufacturers at the rate of fifty shillings for a kilo, roughly, more than two pounds, containing a hundred small pieces, only big enough for beads. The larger sizes for mouth-pieces and cigarette-holders cost at the rate of ten shillings to one hundred shillings a piece.

The first thing a workman does when he starts cutting an amber pipe stem is to place the rough piece, which will probably be the right length, more or less, on a circular saw. This cuts away most of the superfluous amber, and reduces it down to a size that can easily be worked upon with a chisel — step number two. With the chisel he cuts off the corners and reduces the Five phases in the manufacture of an amber mouthpiece. On the left is the rough hewn lump, fresh from the mines in the Baltic. Number two, the same piece cut in two. Then a well-chiselled lump. Next we see the mouthpiece taking tangible shape, and finally ready and waiting to be screwed into the meerschaum pipe.

mouthpiece in size still more. Step number three will be to round off all the corners. This is done with the help of a circular file worked by a foot lathe. After some more file work a hand file of moderate surface is used, for amber must be treated very gently. The more superfluous edges are rubbed off, the amber is put into the lathe once more, and tightly fixed in such a position that it may be bored. This is very delicate work, and is done with a fine, but very sharp drill. Then the mouthpiece is placed on another circular file and shaped properly. Finally, it is polished and the screw fitted to it, so that it may be screwed on to the meerschaum bowl.

Let us now talk about briar pipes—after all, the most popular. A meerschaum is a very beautiful thing when it is colored, but you have to take care of it. Now, the average smoker does not take care of his pipe. He wants a good, strong bit of wood that will stand being knocked about, and will not chip or break. So he gets a briar. Briar pipes are made from the root of the briar tree that grows in Tuscany and other parts of Italy. When cut down the wood is sawed into small pieces, and each piece is boiled on the spot. This closes up the grain of the wood, and prevents it from burning or leaking. The briar wood is found to be the most satisfactory by makers; it often contains a good grain. A straight grain on a pipe—straight up the bowl from the stem—is most admired by connoisseurs. Like the meerschaum, the wood is roughly cut into the shape of a pipe. It is then put into a lathe, a most wonderful contrivance that by the mere pressure of the hand of the workman, and the drawing together of two complicated pieces of mechanism, carves the bowl of the pipe outside and inside. And, moreover, it does not merely gouge out the inside roughly and cut the outside as roughly, but the whole job is done in a thoroughly workmanlike style, and the bowl is as smooth and neat as it can possibly be when it is taken out of the lathe a few seconds later.

This is a wonderful piece of machinery. The rough piece of wood is clamped into it, and with one twist of the hand and a twirl of the lathe the pipe bowl is cut and hollowed out.

The bowl has now been cut out and rounded off – the work of a few secopds only.

This lathe receives the pipe when the bowl has been hollowed out, and rounds the stem.

The pipe is put into another lathe and the stem is rounded and bored. Then a workman with a chisel trims off the projecting pieces between the stem and the bowl, for there is a point on the pipe where even the most ingenious of lathes is powerless, and the pipe is handed over to the man who puts in the mouthpiece and fits on the silver band.

Mouthpieces for briars vary a good deal. The nicest—that is to say, the most popular—are those of vulcanite—hard vulcanite with no smell. But some people prefer bone, while a a few are partial to ivory and amber.

Horn and vulcanite mouthpieces are made in precisely the same way as amber ones. One would think that the vulcanite could be melted and poured into a mould. This is not usually done. For molten vulcanite is very soft. You all know those delightful corn cob pipes with long vulcanite mouthpieces? Well, most of these mouthpieces are molten. For good briar pipes, the vulcanite is cut on saws, just as the amber is cut.

The vulcanite is bought in sheets of a half to an inch and a half thick. It is as hard as wood, and can only be cut with sharp knives and chisels.

When a pipe stem of amber or an amber cigarette tube is cut, naturally the shavings and amber dust are thrown off in large quantities. This dust is collected, moistened, and compressed into a solid substance which the trade call amberoid, and which is used for cheap mouthpieces and tubes. But, of course, it has not the beautiful appearance and the polished hard surface of the genuine amber.

An amber mouthpiece is turned roughly into shape on a lathe, and with a chisel, then filed down with a pumice polisher and file. Then a hole is bored through it with a sharp brad-awl, and it is given a final polish.

Clay pipes are turned out in large quantities. The clay is mostly got from Dorset and Devonshire, in the latter county from Newton Abbot especially. The most interesting part of clay pipe making is the drying process at the end. The clay is moulded when soft and damp, and must of necessity be burned or rather baked or dry. This is done in kilns, called muffle kilns, where the pipes are protected from a direct contact with the flames.

To give definite figures of the number of pipes turned out in a year by the manufacturers in the country have built up an immense business in Smoking and Chewing Tobaccos in every quarter of Canada. Energy for one thing; a good article for another. There was a time—when they began business—when they had their troubles in getting grocers to stock a new make. No trouble with those who once bought. There are new firms, however, constantly engaging in the grocery trade. This message is to them. Their Tobaccos, both smoking and chewing, pay the grocer a satisfactory profit. This can't be said of all lines the grocer sells.

The McAlpin Consumers Tobacco Co., Limited, Toronto.

would be well nigh impossible. The manufacturers of the London-made pipes and cigarette holders alone make nearly 100,000 briar pipes yearly, 3,500 meerschaum pipes, and about 10 times that number of amber tubes. The value of all this is not far from £65,000.

Finally, if you want a pipe made in a hurry, it can be cut, polished, and fitted with stem, silver mount and all, in an hour and a half! It sounds wonderful, but it is true.

So much for the briar. A meerschaum will take longer, for it has to be carefully dried and is much more difficult to make. It will take about four and a half hours. When the meerschaum pipe is quite finished, it is put into a case of pretty red leather lined with chamois leather, and sent off to the retail shop. Then it is sold for a guinea, or perhaps 25 shillings. You must not grumble at this price. The pipe is made of the best meerschaum and amber, the raw materials alone costing over seven and six. Then there are the salaries of several skilled mechanics to be paid off. Finally, if there is a flaw in the meerschaum the whole pipe has to be made over again, and that is all dead loss to the makers.

Hygienic Uses of Tobacco.

A GOOD deal of the world's tobacco crop is neither smoked, snuffed or chewed, observes Health. Nothing will so rapidly destroy insect pests on fruit trees as tobacco. In countries where the plant is grown large bundles of tobacco stalks are piled around the roots of each tree. These stalks not only kill the insects, but as they decay form an excellent fertilizer for the soil. Many hundreds of tons of coarse tobacco are also manufactured into liquid insecticide. As a remedy for plant lice this cannot be beaten.

A cheap kind of coarse tobacco is employed entirely for the manufacture of sheep wash. Twenty pounds of this, leaf and stalk, is boiled in forty gallons of water, and the sheep dipped in the liquid.

At one time tobacco was very largely prescribed in medicine, and even to-day considerable quantities are so made use of. General Chapman records that he was cured of a severe sprain simply by a poultice of tobacco leaves. As an external remedy for wounds and bruises and sprains a wet tobacco poultice is commonly used in all countries where tobacco is grown. On sore throat, erysipelas, sciatica and swellings of various kinds tobacco, externally applied, has a wonderfully good effect. It seems to increase the pain for a few minutes, but afterwards acts as a sedative and allays the suffering. It may take as much as two hours to produce the soothing effect, but the result is usually that the sufferer is enabled to sleep, and inflammation entirely subsides.

Moist tobacco is one of the best cures imaginable for the bite of any poisonous insect. Ordinary leaf tobacco, well soaked, and tied over the bitten spot, takes the pain away rapidly and brings down the inflammation. For ordinary cases of ophthalmia or sore eyes it is also efficacious.

Tobacco is sometimes applied by soldiers to raw wounds. It is said that no case of lock-jaw or mortification has ever occurred where this precaution has been taken. Altogether, a good deal of tobacco is used up medicinally, especially in India, where a hot poultice of tobacco leaves is a usual first remedy when symptoms of cholera appear.

" Sublime tobacco ! which, from east to west,
Cheers the tar s labor or the Turkman's rest ;
Which on the Moslem's ottoman divides
His hours, and rivals opium and his brides ;
Magnificent in Stamboul, but less grand,
Though not less loved, in Wapping, or the Strand ;
Divine in hookas, glorious in a pipe,
When tipp'd with amber, mellow, rich, and ripe ;
Like other charmers, wooing the caress
More dazzlingly when daring in full dress ;
Yet thy true lovers more admire by far,
Thy naked beauties—give me a cigar !"

—Lord Byron,
"The Island," Canto II., Stanza 19.

Why Not Handle Cigars?

"GIMME a cigar !" "Perfecto, same as last ?" "By Joe, yes ! they are a good line, I'll take a quarter's worth." In ten seconds the sale is over, the quarter is in the cash register and Mr. Grocer is free to help Mrs. Blank make up her mind as to which of two five cent bars of soap it would be advisable to invest in when all the attending circumstances have been carefully weighed and considered.

When one regards the small investment and little extra service required for a cigar and tobacco section it is surprising that grocers have not earlier given attento this matter, though it must be confessed that of late cigar departments are becoming more and more common in the grocery store and the druggist and the barber are being no longer left to monopolize this profitable trade outside the regular tobacconists.

Grocers have been most backward in taking up the cigar as a line, but it would appear that a good thing has thus been overlooked.

But a small investment is necessary to put in a very fair assortment, and by handling only good reliable brands the men of the neighborhood will "form the habit" of dropping in to get a cigar and take a quarter's worth in knowledge of the fact that the cigars can be depended upon.

There is a very fair profit in carrying a good line of five cent cigars and a most attractive margin on ten centers.

A neat little show case convenient of access will net a handsome return in itself besides attracting the men who are liberal with their money when they see things they want but which if not already in a grocery store they would not take the trouble to call for.

A cigar never has to be "sent" and a neat little department may be conducted without adding to the general expenses of the business, so that the profit realized is largely net.

A large percentage of men are smokers. The number of cigars smoked annually is astounding to one who has never given the matter any particular attention.

There are excellent reasons why the grocer should have his share in this profitable trade as well as the druggist and barber.

Tobacco Notes.

Horrocks, the Toronto cigar and tobacco jobber, says that the Fall trade has exceeded his expectations, and the demand for the "Ronto" cigar is increasing steadily every month.

The surprising and continued increase in the demand for the "Marguerite" cigar is taxing the Tuckett factory to their utmost capacity, and, at the moment, they are unable to supply the demand.

W. H. Steele, of the firm of W. H. Steele & Co., Scott street, Toronto, has returned from his visit to the Coast. Like his brother manufacturers he was highly pleased with his trip, which he says has made him prouder of Canada than ever.

A very attractive poster, issued by J. M. Fortier, Limited, advertising the "Chamberlain" cigar, is commanding a great deal of attention. The poster is bold and handsome in design ; the great "Joey" shows up to good advantage, and a globe showing the British possessions with the inscription : "The Preferential 10c. Cigar," completes a very striking and original conception.

CAN'T CAN IT.

But hear my whole souled, thankful cry,
Praise be, they cannot can the pie !

Christmas Trade in the Grocery Store

By M. A. C.

CHRISTMAS is the season of joy, peace and plenty in all households of Canada. No matter how poor or how lacking in sentiment the head of the family may be he recognizes Christmas as the season of seasons when he should do something special for his family. While the retailer should be pleased to know that joy and peace are abroad in the land about Christmas time he should not fail to remember that he is one of the factors in making the term "plenty" expressive in the true sense to the households.

It is not too early for the grocer to make plans for doing his part during the Christmas season. First provision must be made to have on hand ample stock of flour and other supplies, raisins, currants, peel, etc., for the baking season, which is such an important feature in many homes in the preparation for Christmas.

Some housekeepers make their Christmas cake weeks, even months, before the day it is cut. The general Christmas baking is, however, done from two to three weeks in advance. The shrewd grocer, in recognition of this fact, will start talking Christmas trade early in December and keep on talking it until ten or eleven o'clock Christmas eve. Even after the holiday it may be wise to have a clearance sale of some lines.

While attention in selling will be first devoted to baking supplies, owing to their being called for so early, the same rule does not apply to buying. For instance, many grocers find it pays them well to handle several lines of fancy goods at the Christmas season. These should be bought well in advance, displayed two or three weeks at the shortest before Christmas Eve. Fruits and candies are beyond question a paying line at Christmas time. Orders for these should be placed in good time to ensure prompt delivery. The same is true of tobaccos and cigars. The Christmas season would be, in fact, an excellent season for grocers who have not handled candies, cigars, etc., but who have decided to start to make the step. Buying is more general as well as more generous at this season and it would be easier to make sufficient sales to make these lines pay well than would be the case at other seasons.

The important consideration is, in short, what to buy and when to buy it. Let us consider the matter in greater detail. We will take for granted that every grocer will stock up baking supplies and have them ready for display in good time. How about other lines?

Should a grocer handle such a line as dolls, for instance? It is a question that must be decided by circumstances. If, after sufficient counter or shelf space has been given to ordinary grocery lines one still has space for a counter show case or a few shelves on which dolls can be shown to advantage, and if one can spare the capital, not a great amount, this line will be found an excellent one. But it is one that should never be touched unless space can be given it for display and time for its sale. A point worthy of consideration is that for $2 or $3 per week one can easily get a bright young boy or girl who in the busy part of the day can look after the doll or fancy goods tables and in the rest of the day can be used to advantage at something else.

Granting the advisability of handling dolls, how should they be bought, handled and sold? It is not a moment too soon to place orders for either toys or dolls. They should be bought for delivery in late November or early December and at once displayed.

ARRANGING A DOLL EXHIBIT.

The doll of to-day with its delicate clothes and dainty millinery is so easily soiled by the hands of careless shoppers, that one of the problems of handling it is to place them where they can be seen but not soiled. Where stocks are large, provision must be carefully made for the display, even though the expense be great, and where stocks are small the question is still worthy of consideration.

The best way to show dolls is to enclose them in upright positions in large glass cases against the wall, but as this is more expensive than many feel they can afford, a compromise has been affected in some cases by the use of counters with glass tops, beneath which the dolls are placed on their backs. The advantage of this scheme is that such a counter is really the best for all purposes, as everything can be shown with the best success in such a case, and the merits of it are of permanent value in all lines. Dust and handling is avoided, and yet a neat display is made.

Dolls with Several Costumes.

One large store has dolls arranged on end in their boxes on the front of the shelving, beyond the reach of customers, and yet in plain sight. A doll, when asked for, is taken down and shown in the box, so that unless the customer is very favorably impressed, no hand touches the delicate clothing. Another merchant has built a small room in his store with a side of the store forming the back of the room, and two partitions about eight feet high jutting out at right angles making the sides. A sloping platform of about 15 degrees from the perpendicular, is built around the walls, and on this the dolls are placed in their boxes (with the tops off, of course), and narrow slats retain them in position. The slats are distanced to suit the different sizes of dolls, and the slant prevents the boxes from falling forward.

TOYS IN THE GROCERY STORE.

Toys hold much the same place as dolls, and are about as valuable a line to carry at the Christmas season. Every child must have its toy, whether it is home-made or not, and every store carries something in the toy line. But it is left for the merchant to decide how and when to carry toys, what lines to handle, what class to satisfy, and how best to arrange the stock. With them, be it tops, or banks, dolls, or leaping clowns, rattles or speaking figures, price, display, quantity and all the other little details are earnestly considered.

Every stock in these days is made up, for a great part, of mechanical toys, and in this branch particularly every year is producing a profusion of new ideas that makes the buying season a nightmare for anxiety and variety, and a pleasure for the novelties shown, to every merchant. Toys that run around when wound up can now be bought for the smallest piece of silver, and all the bankings of a child can be spent in spouting whales that swim around in water, or twining, twisting figures that do all the actions of the vaudeville stage. Cheap tin trains on wheels stand beside mechanically correct steamboats that float around and spurt water through hose, and locomotives run rapidly around circular tracks, drawing parlor and dining cars.

FANCY CHINA AND GLASSWARE.

Should the grocer carry glassware and crockery? The answer lies in the simple fact that an increasing proportion of grocers do handle the line, make good profits out of it and are, in the opinion of leading crockery jobbers, the best agents for it, particularly in the towns. In the Christmas season it is one of the best lines in the store. No line affords more variety of plans for its successful display than that of chinaware and glassware. In itself each piece is usually a piece of art, and the shapes lend themselves so readily to every kind of arrangement, that with any thought at all novel ideas, and ideas that will show the goods to advantage, can be worked out by any merchant. So many of these present themselves that no china department should be without its attractiveness to the customers of a store, no matter how often they enter.

A china table recently had the top arranged in steps of about six inches width ascending from one side to the other, while what might be called the back was divided off into shelves about six inches high, designed to hold cups and saucers. Viewed from one way the cups with their saucers were seen on shelves one above the other, and showing the side pattern of the cups, and from the other side, cups and saucers and other small lines were arranged on the steps. The table was covered with a deep red material.

A good method to adopt in separating goods of one quality or price from another is to use a long table built up in narrow steps from both sides to the centre. At certain points at the edges of the top step, little brass hooks can be screwed in, and, hanging from them by means of a screw-eye, down the steps, strips of a narrow gilt or black picture framing divide the sides into sections, each of which can contain ware of a certain kind or price. This method of subdividing has the great advantage of affording opportunity for sizing the different compartments by inserting the top hook wherever desired.

When a complete set of dinnerware, or a certain expensive chinaware, is to be shown, the separate pieces of which are also for sale, it is well to display it all on one table, each kind of plate and as many cups and saucers as possible being stacked by themselves. On the table a loose card can be placed containing the price of each piece and that of the complete set. This does away with much handling and the consequent risk of breakage, and in this way the display retains its original position longer than when each piece has to be turned up to find the peice.

Where pillars occur, shelves can be built up around them to almost any height, and the pillar behind covered with some dark material. The smaller articles should be on the bottom shelves and the larger ones higher up if the shelves run above the head, so that all can be seen without handling.

CHRISTMAS CONFECTIONS.

Some gracers will not be disposed to handle dolls, toys or crockery ware, but will devote considerable attention to confectionery, particularly candies. Others will be able to carry all these lines. The retailer who stocks confectionery should allow for its display one of the best situated counter show cases in the store. Most of the city retailers who handle this line put in the counter case nearest the street door their display of high-class chocolates, etc. This has been found to attract customers who might not otherwise enter the store, people who do not buy the family groceries, but who spend a good deal of money in the year on candies, fruit and other dainties. They are good friends to make.

About Christmas time an especially good display of this line should be made, for on Christmas Day almost every member of the average Canadian household gets from one person or another some present of candies, whether it be five cents worth of "sweeties" or a three-pound box of bon-bons. These are bought by the giver any time from a month to a few hours before the holiday and the wise retailer will be ready all this time to supply this demand.

CIGARS IN THE GROCERY TRADE.

"What can I give Jack this Winter," asked a married woman of another. The object of the question was the speaker's brother-in-law.

"Give him a new pipe," was the suggestion.

"That would be all right," came the response, "but I will not go into a tobacco store to get it. Who could I get to buy it for me?"

The above conversation gives in brief one reason why the grocer has a particularly good sale of tobaccos, pipes, etc., at the Christmas season. It might surprise many merchants to learn how many women buy nice pipes or tobacco for their friends of the male persuasion. They, however, prefer not to go into a tobacco store where even the atmosphere is redolent of tobacco fumes. The grocer, by keeping an attractive display of this line and by having this line, like the rest of his store, fresh and clean-looking, may expect good returns on the investment necessary to its installation.

A Business Man for the Senate.

THE GROCER has always advocated the election and appointment of M.P.'s and Senators from among our business men and it is a hopeful sign that such appointments are becoming more and more common. The Hon. Thomas R. Black, of Amherst, Nova Scotia, who is prominently mentioned for the Senate and whose appointment is said to be assured, is a fine example of the type of men who should be more common in our Houses of Parliament..

Mr. Black was born in Cumberland County, on October 16, 1832, and is thus in his seventy-first year. He is a prominent citizen of the growing town of Amherst, a farmer and stock-breeder, real estate owner, builder, and local politician, having been a valued member of the Local Legislature since the year 1884.

He is of Scotch ancestry, his great grandfather being William Black, born in Paisley, in 1727. William Black, who was the son of a gentleman of independent fortune, lived for a time in Huddersfield, England. In 1774 his attention was drawn to Nova Scotia, and he took passage in a vessel which arrived at Halifax in May of that year. Having visited the section now known as Cumberland County, and being pleased with the country, he purchased an estate which is still largely in the hands of his descendants. In 1775 he returned to England, chartered a vessel and transported his family to Nova Scotia. A notable fact is that he brought with him some stock of improved breeds,—and to-day his great-grandson is one of the most successful breeders of and believers in improved breeds of cattle, sheep and horses.

Thomas R. Black was brought up on the farm adjoining Amherst, and received his education in the grammar school of that town. Early in life he moved into the town and though he still continued farming, he engaged largely in real estate, in building operations, and grew up with the town. He is an engineer, architect and builder of no mean ability, designs, plans and superintends the erection of his buildings and is credited with some of the most ornamental and substantial buildings in the town, both in wood and stone. He has also constructed some of the most important bridges in the county.

Mr. Black has always taken the greatest interest in the improvement of stock, and in connection with his son, Wm. W., this valuable and profitable work is carried on—not valuable alone to himself, but to the whole province. He is not a visionary enthusiast but has practical ideas on this subject which he puts into practice, and he considers the problem as one in which there may be almost indefinite improvement. He has naturally taken a large share in the development of the annual Nova Scotia Exhibition. On their extensive stock farm may be seen the finest of herds of Hereford and Jersey cattle, and French Percherons, Clydesdales, and Hackney horses.

Mr. Black has always taken the deepest interest in the affairs of the town of Amherst, and his public spirit has won for him the esteem of his fellow citizens, and he has several times been called on to serve in a public capacity. In July, 1884, this esteem was shown by the fact that in a strongly Conservative county he was elected to the Local Legislature by acclamation. He was re-elected at the head of the poll in 1886, and again in 1894 and 1897. In July, 1896, he was appointed a member of the Murray administration.

Hon. Thamas R. Black.

Hon. T. R. Black is a man of broad views and wide experience; thoroughly imbued with the importance of Nova Scotia as a part of the Dominion, and of the Dominion as a whole, he is well qualified to fill a seat in the Senate. As a matter of political advancement, no man in Nova Scotia has more right to look to his party for preference. His influence in the County of Cumberland for the Liberal party has been great, he has held his own party together, and such is their confidence in his ability to further the interests of Cumberland and the province in general that he receives the endorsement and support of the better element of the Conservative party throughout the county. The appointment will be a very popular one.

THE OYSTER SEASON OPEN.

ALL indications point to a successful oyster season this year, and the planters of New York Bay and Long Island will probably reap a rich harvest, says The New England Grocer, and, as by far the greater part of the oysters raised in the waters of New York, Connecticut and New Jersey are either sold in New York City or shipped to interior points by the wholesale dealers business will boom in the oyster trade for about three months. Hundreds of extra men must be put on to cull the oysters and prepare them for sale. The methods followed in raising oysters for market are very interesting, and to the uninitiated are little known.

For many years the market was supplied from the natural beds, but most of these were soon exhausted and it was then necessary to have recourse to the method of private planting. The law permits oystermen to lease certain plots of ground under water which are suitable for oyster cultivation, provided there are no natural beds on the ground at the time. Each planter divides and stakes off his planting ground into rectangular lots of varying sizes, governed in number by the necessities of his business, and also to some extent by his individual opinions as to the most advantageous arrangement of them. The number, therefore, varies somewhat with the different planters, but usually four or five lots are necessary. The reason for this is that the oysters have to be shifted from time to time in order to improve them and expedite their growth. Some planters have hundreds of acres under cultivation.

When the planter secures his ground he proceeds to cover the bottom with old oyster shells. This is to furnish something for the spat or young oyster to attach itself to.

In Staten Island Sound, Newark Bay and Long Island Sound are the natural beds, and from these the planters secure a good part of their seed, which they dump on the old shells previously placed in the beds. The growing period, which intervenes between the first planting and the final shifting of the oysters, is ordinarily three years, but is not confined strictly to that length of time. The size of the seed when planted, the rate of growth and the opinion of the planter have a great deal to do with this point. Some seed are quite large when planted, and these, of course, require less time to mature, while on some grounds the rate of growth is much more rapid than on others. The longer the oysters are allowed to grow the larger they will be, and the greater the return to the planter.

ter shifts from the beds of soft bottom to those of hard bottom the oysters he intends to market in the Fall. This is done because it has been found beneficial to the oyster, as it cleans it from mud and other extraneous substances, improves its color and flavor, and gives an opportunity for separating the clusters, when necessary, into single oysters. The bed so cleaned by shifting is then replanted with seed. The season for marketing the full grown oyster is from September 1 to shortly before Christmas. Formerly each planter gathered his own oysters when they were ready for market by means of his own sailing vessels, but now he usually hires one of the numerous small steamers engaged in the business, and in one-third of the time formerly required the oysters are ready for shipment. They are taken from the beds by means of dredges and tongs, and are then ready for "drinking" in fresh water. The Staten Island planters take their oysters around to the Raritan River to "drink," while the Keyport, N.J., planters "drink" their oysters in Luppatatong creek, which flows through the town. The purpose of "drinking" is to clean the oyster from dirt, remove a portion of its salty flavor, and, by causing the oyster to swell up with the fresh water absorbed, give it a plumper and whiter appearance. In the Raritan River the oysters are put into large floats, the bottoms of which are submerged, but in Luppatatong creek they are dumped on the bottom, which is of sand and almost bare at low tide. They are put in the fresh water at the time of high water and are removed at low water.

They are then shipped to the city by rail, by sailing vessels, or by the regular lines of steamers plying between the city and the different oyster centres. In Boston there are two wholesale oyster districts—one alongside of Fulton Fish Market, at Beekman street and the East River, and the other at West Washington Market Basin, at West Eleventh street and the North River. At both places are moored large barges with houses built on them, and in these the work is carried on. On arrival at the barges the oysters are sorted into three sizes known respectively in the trade as "box," "culls" and "cullentines." The "box" oysters generally average about $6.50 a thousand, the "culls" about $3.50 a thousand, the "cullentines" about 50 cents a basket. These are the prices paid to the planters, and vary considerably from time to time during the season. It is estimated that the dealers of New York city, in a fairly good season, handle between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000 worth of oysters.

The Keyport oyster planters also do considerable business in marketing oysters during the Summer season. As the native oyster is not fit to eat during this season, which is the spawning time of the bivalve, the planters secure large seed from Chesapeake Bay in the Spring and plant these on the beds. In April they are shifted, and about July 1 are ready for market, and bring a good price, as there is little competition at that time. At home the Chesapeake oyster is not good to eat during the spawning period, but transplanting it to northern waters hardens its spawn and makes it delicious. —N. E. Grocer.

He believes now that all cheap products and falsified goods have been eliminated from his list. Comfort and health is the motto of Mr. Beland—in other words, live and let live.

In champagne he represents the good make of Leon Chaudon; in cognac the old firm of Jacques Nicot & Co., Cognac; and in apperitive and medicated ozonified wine, Quino Excelsior. Mr. Beland represents P. Garnier, and G. Hartmann & Co. in fancy liqueurs, and claims that the most difficult tastes can be satisfied with their goods—chartreuse, monastine, curacao, maraschino and cremes of all kinds. In gin it is sufficient to say he represents H. Jansen, of Shiedam, Holland, which distillation is under the direct supervision of the authorities. His Scotch whisky specialties are the "Extra Special," "Freedom" and the "Liqueur Creme" of Macleay, Duff & Co., distillers, Glasgow, Scotland. In chocolates and cocoas he represents the Chocolaterie de l'Universe, Lyons; in vermicellis and macaronis, those of Buschetts Freres, of Toulouse; in truffles, mushrooms, alimentary products, castile soaps, the choice of many firms.

PLUM PUDDINGS AS A SPECIAL LINE.

A NEW and profitable line in which there is a steadily increasing trade for the grocers is plum puddings. For years there was a prejudice—and among some grocers there is still—against factory-made puddings. There was every reason for this objection. The puddings put on the market were made by indifferent cooks, who believed, however, that they were perfect because at some time their mistress had praised them. Others were made by boarding-house keepers who had been similarly complimented by their lodgers who had stomachs capable of digesting iron. They were made in small quantities in small kitchens and peddled about the local town or city. They were generally coarse and lacked flavor because cheap and nasty materials were used in making them.

They sold, however, and the sale increased; then the bigger concerns took them up and immediately there was an improvement. The very best materials were used. Instead of $10 cooks, chefs worth $200 or $300 a month superintended the mixing and preparation, and to-day the plum puddings sold in the grocery stores bearing the names of well-known firms, are much superior in every way to those made by even the high-priced family cooks.

In Canada Christie, Brown & Co., Ltd., whose reputation as biscuit manufacturers is second to none in the world, have built up a steadily increasing trade in plum puddings. In the United States F. H. Leggett & Co., New York, have done likewise. The latter firm have recently offered to send any regular reader of "The Grocer" a sample pudding with their compliments, and no doubt many of those who have not hitherto handled factory-made puddings will take advantage of this offer to test the matter for themselves.

Once the housewife realizes that she can get a very much better article, as cheap if not cheaper than it can be made at home, there will be a large trade for the factory-made article, not only at Christmas, but at other times during the year. It is for the grocer to be sure he handles a first-class brand, otherwise the trade cannot be developed satisfactorily.

Their Excellency

Has made my brands welcome everywhere, and once used are always called for again. My aim has been to give them the highest standard of quality, and an increasing business is proof that my efforts are appreciated by the best buyers, to whom I appeal.

WE STILL HAVE WINNIPEG.

"WELL, we still have Winnipeg," philosophically remarked a disappointed citizen when the decision of the Alaska Boundary Commission was announced. And, ironical as it was, there is perhaps more wisdom in the remark than the speaker designed. We never had any chance of winning our contention from the time that the United States chose their representatives on the tribunal. Despite this Canada put up a manly fight, and, in the opinion of her citizens, made out her case. The commission has decided otherwise, and the hope of an open Canadian port to the Yukon is doomed to disappointment.

That motives of imperial diplomacy had a place in determining the verdict it would be unfair to a man of Lord Alverstone's character to impute without having before us the text of the decision, but it is peculiarly aggravating to Canadians that in the British press Canadian rights were given scant consideration as compared with the exigencies of imperial diplomacy. Indeed, in the past Canada has suffered far greater losses from the laxity of British diplomacy and the "slimness" of American negotiators than in the matter just passed upon.

Our experience with international litigation has been of a nature as to discourage any further dealings with "the party of the second part."

But we still have Winnipeg. There is a world of comfort in that thought. And we have the greatest wheat belt in the world. We have outlets to the Atlantic and to the Pacific independent of our grasping neighbor to the south, and before long we will have all-rail communication to the Yukon which will render nugatory the temporary advantage the United States has won.

In the meantime let us turn our attention to our own development. Let us fill our prairies with wheat fields and our cities with workshops. Let "Canada for the Canadians" be our policy. Let us forget international politics, and for that matter internal politics, and let the aim of our public men on both sides of the House at Ottawa be to advance the general interests of this Dominion.

The key to our future greatness lies in the West. Let us fill that West with teeming millions, and the wealth of the Yukon will pale into insignificance in comparison with what the prairies will yield.

A WISE CONCESSION.

A FEW weeks ago THE GROCER had occasion to consider the selling terms of the Canadian salt manufacturers and to criticize one of the clauses therein. We are glad to be able to announce the issuance of a circular in which it is stated that the observance of this clause will not be insisted upon. This is as it should be, and we are confident that the trade will respond generously to this action upon the part of the salt manufacturers. There have indeed been exceptional circumstances this year which have hindered them greatly in filling orders, but the improvements that have been made during the Summer are said to be almost completed, and no further cause for complaint is anticipated.

We believe the trade will demonstrate to the manufacturers that the abatement of this clause rebounds to the advantage of both sides.

It is now to be hoped that The Canners' Consolidated Co. will follow the example set by the salt manufacturers and withdraw the exclusive clause of their selling terms.

With the prospect held out of delivering but 80 per cent. of tomato orders and still less of corn, and with no orders being accepted even at the high-listed prices, the clause in their case becomes, not only inequitable, but absurd. It is hard to conceive that the canners should long continue to maintain this impossible position.

THE KERNEL OF SUCCESS.

ENDEAVOR at all times to please your customers. The faculty of doing so is the kernel of successful business methods. The customer may be a small purchaser, but he may become a large one. But at any rate he is probably able to influence other buyers. It is therefore all-important that misunderstandings should be removed. It is only by removing them that high reputation can be attained.

When a customer is dissatisfied, make it a rule of the store, warehouse or factory that he must be satisfied even if a small loss is entailed thereby.

As a rule, it is more profitable in many ways to lose a few dollars than one customer. This is the principle upon which the largest and one of the most successful retail stores in Canada works. Not long since a mail order for six cents worth of sewing silk was received. The particular color was not in stock, and another was sent, accompanied by a letter to the effect that if it would not do the customer was to return it at the expense of the firm. It did not suit, but although such an insignificant amount of money was involved in the order, the firm persisted until it had satisfied the customer.

It frequently costs a good many dollars to get a customer, but it usually costs a good many more to lose him. In order to hold an offended customer it is not necessary to "eat humble pie." All that is necessary is a little tact and a touch of magnanimity.

CLAIMS FOR SHORTAGE.

WHOLESALERS often complain of the fault-finding of their customers. There is not a jobber of any standing who does not exercise great care in having the goods shipped from his house carefully checked and properly packed. It is to his own interest that he should exercise this care for, otherwise, he would very soon fall behind in the race for trade. Active competition compels him to be careful. Yet in spite of the precautions taken by all first-rate houses, there are some retailers who are constantly making complaints. No doubt there are occasions when complaints are justified, but equally true is it that there are some retailers—fortunately, very few—who have the reputation among the wholesale trade of being confirmed kickers, who, seldom or never, receive a shipment of goods without sending in a claim either on account of shortage or on account of damaged goods. In conversation with THE GROCER the other day, a leading jobber put the case in this way: "There are some men who, when they receive a bill of goods amounting to $100, seem to imagine that the jobber's profit on it is $99.99 and they immediately commence to send in their claims in order to collect as much of that $99.99 as they possibly can. Now every wholesale firm of any standing takes good care that no mistakes are made, that there are no shortages, and that only goods in first-class condition are allowed to leave the warehouse. Goods are carefully checked, usually by three different employes. Of course it is possible that mistakes may sometimes occur, but it is incredible that they should always occur with the same men. It is needless to say that, when a man has made several complaints, very special precautions are taken to ensure that no mistakes be made again in shipping his goods. The jobber is anxious that he may have no excuse to kick. When, after such special care has been taken in sending a shipment of goods, the retailer sends in a claim for shortage it is evident that there can be only one explanation, and that a most unpleasant one."

Inquiries among different wholesale houses show that the number of such customers is fortunately very small in the grocery trade, but, no doubt, every house has more or less of this kind of trouble. As stated above, it is recognized that there are instances, more or less frequent, in which a complaint on the part of the retailer is quite justifiable. He would be foolish not to complain of an actual shortage. But we agree with the jobber quoted above that there is something wrong when, in spite of extra precautions taken, complaints continue to come in from the same customers. It is difficult to find any adequate remedy, but in this connection it is interesting to note the method employed by a number of American houses to protect themselves from such claims. With every shipment of goods, these houses send a card reading somewhat as follows:

NOTICE.

All goods billed on this invoice were shipped as specified on invoice. The goods were checked three times and were delivered in good condition to Transportation Company. If any shortages are found, make claim at once to Transportation Company. Our responsibility CEASES when we deliver goods in good condition to Transportation Company.

Respectfully yours,

To our mind, this remedy is too drastic, as it relieves the wholesaler of all responsibility. We imagine that the retailer would find some difficulty in compelling the transportation company to make good claims for shortage. No railroad could properly be held responsible for a shortage in a case of goods the contents of which it never checked. No railway would assume such responsibility, and in all cases of shortage the retailer would be certain to be the loser. Claims for damaged goods should always be made to the transportation company, which can properly be held responsible when goods are delivered to it in good condition.

We call attention to this American practice not from any desire to approve or disapprove, but merely to show how this ever-present difficulty is actually met by some United States firms. The problem is a difficult one, and most jobbers are anxious to find a solution. It is an easy matter to criticize a proposed remedy; it is more difficult to suggest a workable substitute. But to the American method there is the fatal objection that, if generally adopted, it would stifle all complaint, legitimate as well as illegitimate. The jobber would be relieved of all responsibility. He is exceedingly careful now, but it would be only human nature if, with all checks removed, divorced from all responsibility in the matter, there should be an unconscious slackening of his vigilance. There would be more mistakes made, and the retailer would have practically no remedy. For these reasons we are not inclined to advocate this American plan. But there should be some remedy; we are not inclined to dismiss the subject with a "laissez faire." THE GROCER would be pleased to receive from its readers suggestions whereby the wholesaler may avoid the loss to which he is now subjected by the despicable conduct of a few retailers without stifling bona fide claims from the great body of his customers. Suggestions from the trade are invited.

TAKING THINGS FOR GRANTED.

IT is not good policy to take everything for granted. Be sure you are right, then go ahead. To go ahead without being sure that you are right is surrounded with more or less danger. To fathom the situation and weigh the circumstances may take time, but it pays in the long run; and it is certainly accompanied with a great deal more safety. Many a merchant, as well as many a mariner, has been wrecked because of the habit of taking everything for granted, instead of carefully investigating before taking action.

One cannot always be sure; and to refrain from doing certain things because the results were not sure would be business cowardice. One must take a venture in business as well as in matrimony. What is to be discountenanced is taking a venture when by making an investigation certainty might be acquired.

To take everything for granted is, after all, a type of laziness, and for that reason should be ignored in the practice.

HIGHER EDUCATION AND BUSINESS.

IN these days of enlightenment, when one hears so much about higher education, the value of a practical business training is a topic almost forbidden. The opinion of one of the most prominent clergymen in Canada—and for a time himself a university professor—on this subject is worthy of consideration. In speaking of University vs. Business—and unfortunately one seems to be more or less antagonistic to the other—he remarked incidentally that he would like to see some of our university professors in a down-town office for one week; it would be worth more to them in immediate, practical results than all the logic of the schools. He had a large number of business men in his parish who, as far as general information, practical sagacity, and general ability were concerned, could walk all round the average university lecturer.

Strange to say, the man of the market-place is to-day the power most influential in shaping the future of this new country—not the man pursuing an academic career pure and simple; the man of strenuous life, not the recluse. Yet a senior at the university is sure to have become tainted with the notion—and his professor is largely to blame—that a business career is no career at all. If, perchance, he should ever descend into the midst of the vulgar throng, he would go there, not to pursue his vocation, but only a vocation. Business was a sort of necessary evil. Between it and the sort of life he intended to lead there was a "great gulf fixed." The summum bonum would be reached when matters of business had been relegated to a secondary place—if not to the closet—and in their place, the "activity of pure thought" supreme. The man down town carried an imaginary stigma with him, and because of it he was unworthy of common consideration from his high and mighty brother up at the college. This was a sin of which certain associates of our universities were guilty every day. On the other hand, of the two highest callings in this world he considered the Christian ministry as first and foremost; next in the van came that of the business man. There is no better training school in practical theology than business.

Notwithstanding the fact that some people will persist in pointing the finger of scorn at the strenuous life of the business man, thousands are finding their way into the practical business world. Canada, with its grand possibilities, offers a splendid future to her young men. Without doubt, the field of business is going to be the most attractive for many years to come. Is it not significant that the university graduate is gravitating thither, notwithstanding counter influences which are being exerted? Business is a great vocation—just the thing for the newly-fledged graduate who has completed a thorough drill in mental gymnastics and ought to be in a position to use what brains he has to the best advantage. It is the duty of every university man going into business to do all he can to dissipate false notions that have come to be associated with business because of certain misguided academicians.

A BUOYANT CHEESE MARKET.

CHEESE has again advanced. The weakness displayed on the 10th was short-lived, and on Saturday the market reacted a good three-quarters, and now stands firm at 11 5-16 to 11½c., a shade above the level before the last decline. The continued and persistent buoyancy of cheese in the face of the extraordinary large make this year is at once a great thing for the dairy farmer, and an evidence of the increasing hold our cheese is taking on the British market. Already the chief source of Britain's cheese imports, the fine quality of our make is bringing it more and more into favor.

What has been done in cheese has unfortunately not been duplicated in butter. Why not? Simply because our butter has not been put on the British market in proper condition.

Our cheese trade is growing year by year, but not so our butter trade, as will be seen by statistics elsewhere in this issue.

This butter problem is one that must be faced and solved unless we are to give way to the countries of Northern Europe.

THE MARITIME FISHERIES.

MR. BORDEN struck the right note in the House of Commons the other night when he urged that the Government should adopt a systematic, fair and generous plan for the development of the fish catching and curing industry of the Maritime Provinces as it has developed the agricultural and manufacturing industries in the other provinces.

This is right in line with the policy advocated by THE GROCER for years.

The manufacturing industries have been encouraged by protective tariffs and bounties. The agricultural interests have been encouraged by the establishment of dairy schools, cold storage depots, improvements in transportation and the like. The result has been that these industries are not to be compared with their precursors of a few decades ago.

Mr. Borden is authority for saying that both in taking and curing fish the Atlantic fishermen are 50 years behind the time. If this be so, what steps have the Government taken to remedy matters? The results of the travelling dairy schools show what can be done in improving even such a household art as butter-making. Similar instruction in scientific methods should not be beyond the sphere of an energetic and capable Minister of Marine and Fisheries.

It is to be hoped that Mr. Borden will not let his suggestion drop. Departments are always loath to take on any new duty, and it will require persistent effort to bring the matter to a practical conclusion. But should Mr. Borden induce the Government to carry out his proposal he will not only confer a great benefit on the producing provinces in the east, but on the consumers of the west.

THE GROCER will welcome the day when the fishing interests of the Maritime Provinces receive the attention from the Government their importance and possibilities deserve.

The Western Cattle Industry.

From our Winnipeg Correspondent.

OWING to the weakness of British markets during the past few weeks the export cattle trade of the West is presenting some features that are rather new to it. For this reason your correspondent called upon Mr. J. T. Gordon, M.P.P., western head of the great exporting firm of Gordon, Ironside &Fares, and asked his opinion on the present rate of shipments. Mr. Gordon is an extremely popular man among newspaper fiends for the simple reason that when applied to for information, if he can give it he does so, and does not make you feel that he has conferred an inestimable benefit upon you, or that you have wasted the time of a very busy man, which by the way, he is.

Mr. Gordon said, "Up to the present time we have not shipped more than one-third of the number of cattle we had shipped at the corresponding date last year and those we have shipped included the stock from our own ranges in the West." The Gordon, Ironside & Fares ranges, by the way are among the largest in the West and the same firm has an enormous range in Old Mexico. Continuing, Mr. Gordon said: "The reason for this falling off in shipments through our channels is threefold. In the first place, owing to a number of different causes the cattle are about a month later than last year and then again the Summer has been an exceptional one for rainfall, which has made the grass soft, and although the cattle are all strong and vigorous they are thinner than they should be at this season, but the third is probably the principal reason for the falling off in shipments. The British market, as you know, has been low even for fat cattle and very low for range cattle, and we have not been able to offer more than 3¼c., point of shipment, for several weeks. On the other hand, commission men, particularly in Montreal, have been sending circulars through the country, I have seen them myself, in which they state the price of Canadian cattle to be 12c. on the English market, this at a time when the price of range steers was only 9½ to 10c.

"When a rancher gets a circular like that he assumes that the price quoted is for range steers, the only cattle he has to sell, and when you go and offer him 3¼c. a pound at his own station he refuses to accept it.

"A few of the ranchers have been shipping through the commission houses and I greatly fear that when they get their returns they will be still more dis-satisfied. For instance, taking into account the present price of steers, they have paid far too high a price for steamer space. It all had to be contracted for ahead and some of them are paying 50, 52 and even 55 shillings for it. No matter what price range cattle slump to, that space must be filled at the contract price. Now the average of our steers this year is about 1,200 pounds; such a steer would dress 60 pounds to the hundredweight in Winnipeg, and 55 to the hundredweight in Great Britain. That would give you 660 pounds of dressed beef to sell at 9½c. or $62.70 for the beast sold in England. Now allowing 52 shillings for space and all the freight, feeding and other charges, it costs to lay that beast down in England $32, leaving just $30.70 for him on the ranch after three years' keep, when probably the same animal cost his owner $27 as a stocker. You can figure the profit on that for yourself.

"Personally, I do not expect much improvement in the British market for two years at least, as times are not so good among the working classes in Great Britain as they have been and consequently the demand is not so good, while the supply on this side of the water is constantly increasing."

While the subject of cattle is under discussion it is of interest to note that the new beet sugar industry at Raymond, Alberta, of which notice was sent you last week, is taking up a scheme for the feeding of cattle in connection with the by-products of their factory. Several cattlemen who have been asked about the matter regard the proposition with favor. By another season Alberta may be in a position to ship a small number at least of fatted beeves. The question of finishing cattle from the western ranges on Manitoba farms is also receiving more or less attention. It is only a revival of the doctrine preached so clearly and forcibly by Professor Robertson, Dominion Dairy Commissioner, that the West should ship all her products in the most concrete form.

COMMISSION MAN MARRIED.

Mr. John A. Gunn, of Gunn, Langlois & Co., the St. Paul street, Montreal, commission merchants, was married on October 7, in Toronto, to Miss Isabella Elliott Montgomery, third daughter of Mr. Wm. J. Montgomery. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Gandier, assisted by Rev. John Neil, at the residence of the bride's father, 22 Isabella street, in the presence of only the immediate relatives of the bride and groom. The bride, who was unattended, was given away by her father. After the ceremony and the wedding breakfast Mr. and Mrs. Gunn left for New York and the Eastern States. On completion of their tour they will reside in Montreal. Mr. and Mrs. Gunn have the best wishes of "The Grocer" for a long and happy life.

Wholesale Grocers, = = = = HAMILTON.

What the grocer in Canada wants is an out-and-out good commission house in Toronto to which he can consign his BUTTER, EGGS, POULTRY, etc., and get CASH straightway if desired; or, if preferred, a market opportunity such as his own limited field cannot offer.

The grocer may have exactly what he wants—quick cash, or a first-class market opportunity—that is, a sale on commission when the market is at its high point.

Send us your produce. Your butter, eggs, fowl, are better in our possession than in yours. We have a COLD STORAGE plant, thoroughly modern, with a capacity of 75,000 cubic feet, the equivalent of a room 100 x 75 x 10. We can take care of all the shipments made us without trouble. Whether we buy your consignment outright, or hold for your advice, or sell when we think the markets are highest, we are in a position to handle your consignments better than other firms who lack our advantages.

When the grocer knows that he has a sure, safe outlet for his produce, he need not hesitate to buy or take in exchange all the BUTTER, EGGS, POULTRY, etc., that may offer. There is good money in barter if one has a quick and sure market.

Do you want assurance as to our integrity, our commercial standing? Get your Bank to get a Bradstreet's report on us. We are quite prepared to have the searchlight turned on us. We have our markets in the big Canadian cities and in England. Our connections are of long standing and are constantly increasing. It is the firm with an outlet, a big outlet, that is good for you to be in touch with all the time. Firms with a purely local trade can never do so well for you as we can. We appeal to your intelligence and leave the decision to you with full confidence.

To the English trade we have to say that our Canadian business is growing rapidly; that every week we are having consignments from country merchants who have been persuaded to entrust their produce sales to us. Thus it follows that we are able to cater to a larger market.

A long and intimate acquaintance with the Export Trade to England has made us understand thoroughly what to send, how to send, and when to send. The demand for Canadian Produce of good quality is never satisfied. English dealers will do well to correspond with us if interested in importing Butter, Cheese, Eggs, Fowl, etc.

Review of Season's Cheese Trade.

THE production of cheese this season has increased considerably as compared with last year. This is shown by the export statistics which, although not official, may be taken as substantially correct, as follows :

Shipments of Canadian cheese from the ports of Montreal and Portland, compiled to October 10 :

This season	1,998,773	boxes.
Last "	1,593 595	"
1901	1,413,953	"

This increase in the production of cheese, however, has been at the expense of the butter output, which has fallen off very considerably, as compared with last season ; the total exports from the same ports and for the same dates being :

This season	286,998	packages.
Last "	394,287	"
1901	339,664	"

The higher range of prices for cheese which has prevailed during this season is largely responsible for the increased production.

The stocks of last year's cheese on hand in the early months of the year both here and in Britain were inadequate to supply the trade until the arrival of the new make in sufficiently large quantities to meet the requirements of the British market. As a result prices advanced considerably, and the remaining stocks of old cheese were sold at extraordinarily high prices, while the April and May make of new cheese were sold at prices which were the highest on record for new-made cheese. The price for April ran up to from 13 to 13½c , and the price for May, though lower, was still on a high level.

These prices, of course, could not last, and, as the production increased, were gradually forced down, reaching the lowest point of the season about the end of July, when they hovered about 9c.

On account of the exceptionally large make it was expected at this time that prices would continue at about this level, and the sharp advance which followed was entirely unlooked for by the majority of those in the trade. The advance, however, was warranted by higher prices obtained in England, and the rise was continued until in the early part of September prices reached a level of about 11c., which was 1 to 1¼c. higher than at the same time last year.

Just at this point the market appeared to come under the control of speculators, and prices rose rapidly to as high as 12⅜c. This advance, however, was not warranted by market conditions, and prices have since eased off till on October 10 prices ranged at the boards from 10½ to 10⅞c. There has been an improvement since then, however, and the latest board sales at time of writing were at from 11½ to 11 7-16c.

On the whole the quality of our cheese has been very good this year. There have been some complaints of taint, but these have been largely confined to the Kingston district, and strenuous efforts have been made to determine the cause and provide a remedy. Some complaint has also been made of cheese being forwarded in too green a condition. This, of course, was due to no imperfection in the making, but to the fact that buyers have been over-eager, on account of the light stocks, to secure cheese, and they have insisted on shipping before it was really ready to leave the curing-room.

In looking back over the closing season there are many grounds upon which we can congratulate our cheese producers.

Cheese Section at the Dominion Exhibition.

Dairy Products at the Dominion Exhibition.

THE interest taken in the dairy section at the Dominion Exhibition was as deep as it was deserved. The exhibit of cheese, a view of which is herewith given, is said by old cheesemen to have been the finest they had ever seen, and they were convinced that it had never elsewhere been equalled. The exhibits represented a wide field, and were of the highest quality.

The companion view of the dairy amphitheatre, adding the competitive element, was perhaps of even greater interest. Here daily competition in butter and cheese-making was carried on between amateurs, graduates of our dairy schools and professionals. The most approved scientific and sanitary appliances were in use, and while the interested spectators in the seats around watched the process of making gilt-edged butter and cheese lectures were delivered by experts on various matters of dairy interest, and answered questions proposed by interested auditors. The dairy section was at once a school of instruction and a convincing advertisement of Canada's determination to excel in the products of her dairies.

In the view of the cheese section is seen a group of representative cheese men with Mr. A. F. MacLaren, M.P., the chairman of the dairy section, in the centre. The view of the amphitheatre, taken during a butter and cheese making contest, shows the young lady and young men contestants at their work, and in the centre the lecturers and officials in charge.

A Few Provision Statistics

REFERENCE to the receipts from our Trade and Commerce statistics given below shows a very satisfactory progression. True, 1900, the year of the South-African war, shows an abnormally large output in some lines which has not since been duplicated, but, on the whole, oru progress has been steady and continuous, as witness the growth from $13,797,690 in in 1890 to 41,463,488 in 1902.

Device for Handling Cheese.

WE give below a rough draft of a recent invention for handling cheese, which has been found very serviceable. The device consists of two wooden standards (aa), 2 by 3 inches by 5 feet high, securely fastened together by cross pieces and rods (bbb) and (cc). To these standards is fastened an iron axle (d), with wheels (ee) about 8 inches in diameter, with 2-in. face fastened to either end. Strips (ff) and (gg) of band iron are used as clamps to catch the sides of the boxes of cheese, rendering it easy to pick up a pile of cheese as high as, or higher than, the truck. These clamps are operated by means of lever (h), rod (i) and braces (jj), which, being pressed down, hold the clamps together on the boxes. These are held in place by a "dog" on the back of truck, which is not shown in the drawing; which, being released, allows spring (k), fastened to the rear end of (gg), to draw said clamps together at the back, thus spreading them at the front and releasing the boxes. The operator wheels the truck up to the pile of cheese, presses down lever (h), tips the truck so as to about balance, when it can easily be wheeled along—carrying a load of from 350 to 400 pounds—by means of handles (ll), which are braced with braces (mm).

Pork Factory to be Reopened.

The Farmers' Co-operative Pork Packing Co.'s large factory and outbuildings at Brantford, which have been lying idle for the better part of this year, have been purchased by Geo. Matthews' Co., of Peterboro' and Hull, who will start the factory going as soon as needed changes are made in the drainage of the place. It is said that the Matthews people will push the factory to its full capacity.

The Butter Act, 1903.

WE have at hand a copy of the new Butter Act passed and assented to this session and now in force. The Act defines the various grades of butter, fixes the legal limit for water, and prohibits the manufacture of margerine, or improper marking of packages.

THE ACT.

The important clauses are as follows:

2. In this Act, unless the context otherwise requires,—

(a) "Creamery" means a place where the milk or cream of not less than 50 cows is manufactured into butter;

(b) "Dairy" means a place where the milk or cream of less than 50 cows is manufactured into butter in a building equipped with proper appliances;

(c) "Butter" means the food product commonly known as butter, which is manufactured exclusively from milk or cream or both, with or without the addition of coloring matter, common salt, or other harmless preservative;

(d) "Creamery butter" means butter which is manufactured in a creamery;

(e) "Dairy butter" means butter which is manufactured in a dairy;

(f) "Renovated butter" or "process butter" means any butter which has been melted, clarified or refined and made to resemble butter.

3. No person shall manufacture or import into Canada, or offer, sell or have in his possession for sale any butter containing over 16 per cent. of water.

4. No person shall mix with butter any acid, alkali, chemical or any substance whatever, which is introduced or used for the purpose or with the effect of causing the butter to absorb water or any part of milk or cream.

5. No person shall manufacture, import into Canada, or offer, sell or have in his possession for sale, any oleomargarine, butterine or other substitute for butter, manufactured wholly or in part from any fat other than that of milk or cream.

6. No person shall manufacture, import into Canada, or offer, sell, expose or have in his possession for sale any renovated butter, process butter or butter which has been treated in the manner described in section 4.

7. No person shall brand or mark the word "creamery," or any combination of words which includes the word "creamery," upon any box, package or wrapper containing butter, unless the butter contained in the box, package or wrapper consists wholly of creamery butter manufactured at one place.

8. No person shall sell or offer, expose or have in his possession for sale any butter contained in any box, package or wrapper upon which the word "creamery," or any combination of words which includes the word "creamery," is branded or marked, unless the butter contained in the box, package or wrapper consists wholly of creamery butter manufactured at one place.

9. Nothing contained in sections 7 and 8 of this Act shall apply to butter in rolls, prints or packages or less than 25 pounds in weight, not intended or export, provided the said butter is manufactured n a building equipped with the appliances used in creameries.

The remaining clauses provide for the penalties and the machinery for enforcing the same.

CONDITIONS OF THE TRADE.

Accompanying the copy of the act is a bulletin from the Department signed by J. A. Ruddick, chief of dairy division, and Jas. W. Robertson, commissioner of agriculture and dairying, in which the following interesting comments are made, viz.:

The expansion of our dairy industry in the future depends very largely on the export of creamery butter, and as the extent to which this trade may be developed depends in turn on a high standard of quality being established, we are justified in adopting every possible means necessary to protect the good name of Canadian creamery butter.

The relative selling price of all butter made in Canada is influenced and regulated by the price obtained for that which is exported, and therefore it is obvious that anything which tends to improve that price will help the whole butter trade.

That there is still room for a great increase in our exports of fancy creamery butter to the markets of the United Kingdom is shown by the fact that during the year ending June 30, 1903, we sent only about 6 per cent, of the total importation.

OUR COMPETITORS.

The following countries compete with us for this trade, viz.:

Denmark, Russia, France, Holland, Sweden, New Zealand, Australia, United States, Belgium, Argentina, Norway and Germany. The four first named each supply more at present than Canada does.

In some of these countries very stringent laws have been enacted to regulate the marking, grading and export of butter, but they do not depend wholly on legislation to enable them to capture the trade. They are applying the knowledge gained through investigation and the advancement of dairy science to the production and handling of milk and the manufacture of butter. Canadians must do likewise if they wish to compete successfully in this important trade.

NEEDS OF THE INDUSTRY.

The following are some of the most pressing needs of the Canadian creamery butter-making industry:

(1) Better constructed and more sanitary creamery buildings.

(2) Improved refrigerators at the creameries where the temperature can be kept at least below 36 deg. Fahr.

(3) Delivery of the cream in a fresher and sweeter condition where the cream gathering system has been adopted.

(4) Stronger and neater finished packages for export butter.

(5) Heavier and purer vegetable parchment paper for lining packages.

(6) Frequent and regular shipment of butter from the creamery to a cold storage warehouse where lower temperature can be secured.

(7) Great precaution in transferring butter from the creamery to the cars to prevent it from becoming unnecessarily heated.

Some of these improvements may be effected by simply exercising ordinary care and following common business methods, while others will involve some extra expense. When it is considered, however, that the general quality of Canadian butter may still be improved to the extent of increasing its value at least 1c. a pound—and that must be done before it is on a par with the best butter now sold in Great Britain—there is nothing unreasonable in suggesting that a portion of this possible increase in value should be invested in the manufacture of the butter in order to secure the higher return.

Canadian Butter and the British Market.

By Walter W. Jones.

THE quantity of produce which finds its way into the English market from foreign centres, to meet with ready sale, would probably amaze the casual visitor. The ease, too, with which consignments are "ranked" as to their commercial worth is not a little remarkable, and a "mark" that has been well reported on by previous purchasers is sure to meet with active attention.

Probably one of the most interesting to Canadians is found in that of the London and Liverpool butter markets.

The quantity of butter distributed from these two centres is of great volume, quality in almost every case being the chief consideration. Inferior butter is not wanted, and will go begging for an offer; whilst at the same time there will be found ready buyers for anything showing "quality" and "good making."

An interesting feature, too, and one which should carry weight with Canadians, is the purpose for which the great bulk of butter is purchased. True it is that a fair quantity ultimately finds its way to the breakfast table; but by far the greater bulk is used for confectionery purposes, and for these uses buyers are always in evidence to snap up suitable lines. But here is where the difficulty begins — to find a butter carrying that uniformity of solidity, flavor and color necessary to successful manufacture.

The confectionery trades in Britain have made enormous strides during the past few years, and now the rule is for the housewife to purchase her cake, biscuits and small pastries from her grocer or store, where, heretofore, they were all made at home. This, it can be readily seen, has opened the door for establishing important factories to exploit these industries. Cakes, etc., are made in these factories by the ton, and in an ever increasing variety.

The care and attention which has to be given to every detail of manufacture is what counts in the successful handling of such an industry, and it is not an uncommon sight to see a board of directors consisting of several gentlemen, passing judgment and deciding as to the "mixture" to be used by the foreman in making any given line of cake, etc., and from that moment he must maintain his product equal in every respect to the sample submitted to his directors, and comparison is constantly being made of the various "bakings" by the manager in charge, to secure continued uniformity.

As mentioned before, large batches are made at one time, and the material used accurately measured and weighed for each batch to ensure as far as possible equal final results.

Large quantities of butter are purchased for these industries, and it is an absolute necessity that the butter should be properly made and uniform throughout, as otherwise no two batches of confectionery would be alike, causing serious hindrance and loss to the trade, as upon the fat used, in great measure depends the ultimate fine flavor, texture and quality of the finished cake. For instance, a baker might be most careful to have all his ingredients correct as to quantity, and especially so as to quantity of butter he weighs out; but should that butter differ in its intrinsic value, through improper making, his calculations are all thrown out of line, giving a totally different result in the finished article; often a disastrous one, as a batch once started must be carried through quickly, and there is little time to correct an error in course of manufacture.

The importance, therefore, to the industry of being able to secure a "brand" of equal consistency and continued uniformity, is evident; and the Canadian who wishes to secure the British market for dairy produce cannot afford for one moment to let slip so important a feature.

The continental markets have long since given attention to this feature, and are sending in butter of a fair degree of uniformity, and in some instances—particularly so from Russian centres where the Government are giving special attention to the industry — consignments of different dates can be relied upon to compare favorably with each other.

From other centres—notably American—the difficulty is sought to be overcome by making special "fat" mixture for the purpose, and endeavoring to secure the market by selling at low rates; but the objection to these products is, that they invariably carry with them a flavor foreign to the genuine butter that they are meant to replace, and which can be clearly detected in the finished confectionery.

Unquestionably the scope in this direction is large, and no trouble or care should be spared to secure this output for Canadian butter, as we cannot but think, that with the facilities at our disposal, such as cold storage, continuous and quick freight, any difficulties might be easily overcome to adapt our produce to such market requirements.

Further — butter for household purposes on the British market should be looked at from another standpoint; this market has been held, to some extent, by the continental product know as "margarine," sold at a price with which it would appear to be impossible to compete. The British law, however, is very stringent in this regard, and it cannot be sold otherwise than under its own name, and but very small per cent. of natural butter is allowed by law to enter its composition as flavoring.

There still remains the open market for first-class "table butter," held, to a large extent, by the Brittany and Danish butters, but which Canada with her superior advantages should, by a steady and decided hit for first-class quality, secure against all comers.

Meat and Meat Prices in Germany.

THE continued high prices of meat in Brunswick, Germany, have caused a number of complaints, writes United States Consul T. J. Albert from Brunswick, Germany. A few months ago, when there was a decrease in the price of cattle, it was hoped that it would be accompanied by a fall in the price of meat. This did not occur and there seems to be no prospect of the hope being realized.

WHOLESALE PRICES.

At the end of August the market prices for cattle at the city slaughterhouse, per 110 pounds slaughtered weight, were as follows:

Beef cattle	$15 23 to $17 66
Fatted calves	18 32 to 21 42
Small sucking calves	14 28 to 16 52
Wethers	17 37
Sheep	16 52
Hogs	13 80 to 14 76

These prices for hogs have prevailed for some time. The lowest price for them during the year was slightly under 50 marks (11.90) per 110 pounds slaughtered weight. The tendency is for still higher prices for hogs than the highest given.

RETAIL PRICES.

According to the statements of the Brunswick Butchers' Union the retail prices for meat per pound at the end of August were:

	Cents.
Beef	17 to 19
Veal	18 to 19
Mutton	18
Pork	17

It must be remembered that the German pound is one-tenth greater than the American pound.

A comparison of the wholesale price for cattle with the retail price for meat gives little promise for an early reduction in the latter. The "Freibank," or table, at the slaughterhouse—where meat of an inferior quality, but considered not injurious to health, is exposed for sale at low prices—is more frequented than usual. Nothing is allowed to go to waste here which can

SIBERIAN MEAT FOR GERMANY.

The German butcher's special organ, The Allgemeine Eleischerzeitung, announces that a company has been formed in Berlin to purchase meat in the vast country opened up by the great Siberian railroad. For this purpose salted meat will be packed in 4-kilogram (8.8-pound) packages and transported in carlots of 10,000 kilograms (22,000 pounds) and then brought for sale to the great central meat market of Berlin. Only the better cattle will be slaughtered for the company, representatives of which start on the journey to make arrangements in a few days. The expenses for transport duty and other outlays are placed at 3,500 marks ($833) for a carload of 10,000 kilograms (22,000 pounds). The imports are expected to begin in the Spring.

Canadian Dairyman for South Africa.

Mr. W. J. Palmer, D.S.A., manager of The City Dairy Co., Toronto, has been appointed to the position of director of agriculture for the Orange Free State, and he will accept the position, leaving Toronto for his new home about December 1. The Orange Free Staters have for some time been endeavoring to secure a suitable Canadian to fill this position, the salary accompanying which is $6,000 in gold a year, with various perquisites. Mr. G. E. Day, professor of agriculture in Guelph, was offered the position, and for various reasons he found it impossible to leave Canada. Mr. G. C. Creelman, B.S.A., superintendent of farmers' institutes for Ontario, was also offered the position, but found himself likewise unable to accept it.

Dr. Mills, of the Guelph College, was asked to further recommend a suitable person to fill the responsible office, and he at once nominated Mr. Palmer.

The newly appointed director for the Orange Colony was a student at the O. A.C. ten years ago, and was one of the brightest of its students. He took a leading part in the travelling dairies throughout the province when that work was organized. Mr. Palmer is 35 years of age and is the son of a well-known barrister of Prince Edward Island.

THE PROVISION MARKETS.

Toronto.

The provision market in most lines exhibits a firm tone. This is particularly true in regard to hams. Stocks are short, and with orders booked ahead to be filled as soon as cured, there is evidently a satisfactory demand. Heavy mess pork is weaker and lard is quotable on a lower level. We quote :

Long clear bacon, per lb	$ 0 10½	$0 10½
Smoked breakfast bacon, per lb	0 14½	0 15
Roll bacon, per lb	0 11	0 12

Trade has been somewhat better this last week. Prices are said to have been shaded somewhat to effect business. We quote :

Canadian short cut clear pork	20 00	20 50

Prices of lard are unchanged. We quote :

St. John, N.B.

This line has been a puzzle. After the higher prices quoted the market is again easier. Barrelled pork is quoted at quite a low range. There is a fair sale. Mess and clear are at about the same figure, except for the best clear. Beef is quite low ; there is a steady sale. While refined lard shows no change, pure lard is again quoted rather lower. It also has been quite a puzzle. In fresh beef there is a fair sale. Western beef is steady at quite full figures. Domestic beef is not very plentiful ; prices are, however, quite low. Lamb is low ; there is ample supply. Mutton has had a very light sale. Pork is more freely offered at quite steady prices. Veal is not offered. We quote :

Mess pork, per bbl	$18 00	$19 00

DAIRY PRODUCE.

Toronto.

BUTTER.

There is little change in the butter situation since last writing. Export enquiries are light, nor are stocks so heavy as last year. Creamery prints, however, are in good demand. We quote :

	Per lb.
Creamery prints	0 21	0 22

CHEESE.

The decline of last week did not endure. Improved export demand caused a reaction and the boards showed decided improvement. The local market has firmed up a quarter and if the strength on the boards is continued may go another. We quote :

	Per lb.
Cheese, large	0 11¾	0 12

Lindsay, Oct. 19.—Victoria Cheese Board met this morning ; 2,200 boxes of September and part of October were boarded. The highest price was 11⅛c., but only a few factories were bought at that price. Buyers present were : Flavelle, Fitzgerald, Cook and Whitton. Board adjourned until Monday, Nov. 9.

Montreal.

BUTTER

There is not much change in the situation. The receipts which are coming forward are being taken up for the local trade. There is not much export demand. Eastern Townships are costing 20½c. at the factories, and are being sold locally at 21½c. The local demand is good for all lines. We quote fresh made creamery prints 22c., boxes, 20 to 21c.; dairy, 18c.; baking butter, 15 to 16c.

CHEESE.

The local trade continues unchanged since our last report. As stated before, the local market is more or less supplied with the small 20-lb. cheese, which are selling at from 11 to 12c.; strong cheese, 13c. The country markets for the large cheese continue steady, 11 to 11½c. being the ruling price. Export demand is dull.

St. John, N.B.

BUTTER

While there are quite full stocks held and rather free receipts, prices are quite firm. The difficulty is to get right quality. Good butter is always in demand. We quote :

Butter, creamery prints, per lb	0 21	0 22
" creamery solids (fresh made), per lb	0 20	0 21
" prints	0 18	0 20
" tubs	0 14	0 16
" tubs, selected, per lb	0 17	0 19

EGGS.

Stocks are light. Market is largely supplied from Prince Edward Island, where holders are asking rather higher prices. There is a good sale. We quote :

Eggs, new laid, per doz	0 20	0 22
" case stock, per doz	0 17	0 18

CHEESE.

The market is very lightly supplied. The output in this province has not been as large as was expected. While prices are higher the market is now quiet. The price has affected local sales. We quote :

Cheese, per lb	0 12½	0 13

Provision Notes.

The F. B. Dunn Packing Co., Ltd., made up of leading citizens from all over the province of New Brunswick, has been incorporated.

The premises of the recently organized Sussex Packing Co., of Sussex, N.B., are expected to be ready within the next few weeks. The plant is designed for pork packing and will have a capacity of 200 carcases per day.

OUR CANADIAN FRUIT AND FRUIT TRADE

Products of Orchard and Garden.

WE are a great fruit-eating people in Canada. When we grow eloquent over the natural resources and products of our country it is most often our wheat, our minerals, and our marine products that are held up to the admiration of the world. Of these great staples we have ample cause for pride, but Our Lady of the Sunshine is equally bountiful in the luscious fruits which in uninterrupted succession are ours almost from springtime to springtime. With exception of the tropical fruits there is scarcely a variety which is not produced to perfection somewhere within our broad confines.

In the east the apple orchards of the Annapolis Valley, famous alike in the world's marts and the realms of verse, are the pride of the Nova Scotian's heart, and thence westward there is scarcely a farm throughout New Brunswick, Quebec or Ontario which has not its orchard lot gleaming pink and green in the blossoming springtime and flushing a rosy red with the ripened fruit in the Fall. From these orchards, in some specially favorable districts, running into hundreds of acres, are gathered the million odd barrels above our own requirements annually exported to the world abroad, and although the apple tree is the one regret of the easterner who takes up his abode in our prairie provinces, the fruit reaches the highest degree of excellence in the valleys of British Columbia in the far West.

Apples are, of course, the staple of our fruit culture and are, with the exception perhaps of small fruits, most widely distributed, but pears, plums, peaches and grapes nowhere reach a higher degree of perfection as to appearance, texture and flavor than they do in our Canadian orchards and vineyards.

Pears and plums find a rather more extended field than do peaches and grapes, and exhibit a luxuriant growth over a considerable portion of Southern Ontario and Quebec. Unfortunately there have not yet been evolved adequate arrangements for placing these fruits on the British market. The matter is this year, however, receiving more attention. The Dominion Government has been demonstrating at the local fairs and exhibitions proper methods of packing fruit, especially pears, for export shipment; and experiments, the full returns from which are not yet available, have been made in forwarding wrapped pears in 20 and 40-pound bozes. The secret of the popularity of California fruit has been largely in the attention given to packing and there is reason to hope that with more experience, scientific methods in packing and cold storage transportation facilities, our more tender fruits shall take the important place in the British market their quality deserves.

View of a Nova Scotia Orchard—Early Summer.

Peaches and grapes, looked upon as semi-tropical fruits, are raised to the greatest perfection in the Niagara and Essex fruit districts. A visit to the peach orchards and vineyards of these districts any time from August to October should be arranged for every visitor to Canada who is still laboring under the delusion that the proper title for Canada is Our Lady of the Snows. It is safe to say that nowhere in the world are peaches and grapes more deliciously luscious or of more exquisite flavor to be found.

But these are by no means the full complement of the fruits "Made in Canada." The strawberry, of which it has been said, "God doubtless could have produced a better fruit, but doubtless God never did," is the first visitor to our markets and tables. Following come the raspberries, black and red, cherries, thimbleberries, the humble but succulent huckleberry, in the West the saskatoon, currants, gooseberries, etc., that make up the large catagory of small fruits.

From the first strawberry that blushes under the June sunshine till the frosts of late October there is not a moment when Canadian fruit of one kind or another is not in abundant supply for all requirements.

To the matter of fruit culture the provincial and Dominion Departments of Agriculture have given a great deal of attention. Experimental stations have been established in various parts and bulletins are sent out from time to time giving the results of the experiments; advising as to the best varieties for various conditions of soil and location, in regard to laying out the orchard, cultivating, fertilizing, pruning, picking the fruit, packing, and indeed there is scarcely a detail in the whole industry on which the grower has not received advice and counsel from the department. This may seem like paternal government, but it is a species of paternity that is appreciated and effective, as witness the wonderful development in this industry in the last decade. The trees have been kept low for picking, the most valuable varieties have been determined, the fruit has been saved from blight by spraying, and the best methods of marketing inculcated.

On the other hand the Government has insisted that the improved quality of Canadian fruit should not be deprived of its proper reputation by the dishonest practices of a few unscrupulous shippers, and to this effect a stringent Fruit Marks Act is being enforced which ensures a uniform quality to packages by inflicting severe penalties on delinquents.

The following table will give an indication of the course of the export fruit trade for the last few years. The figures are for the fiscal year ending June 30 of the year indicated:

To this might be added our exports for the same period of canned fruits amounting to $402,186, an item yearly growing in importance. With the increased attention being paid to the cultivation of fruit by the Agricultural Departments at Ottawa and in the different provinces, there are abundant reasons for hope.

View of a Nova Scotia Orchard—Autumn.

At the Dominion Exhibition the fruit exhibit, a reproduction of a section of which is given herewith, was a feature of the very greatest interest, and a revelation of Canadian possibilities, from apples of almost every conceivable variety represented by the very finest specimens, to prize bunches of grapes, reminding one of the trophies brought by Joshua and Caleb out of the land of Canaan; there were fruits of every description fit for the gods.

Our Export Trade.

Our exports of fruits, statistics of which are given below, although noticeably irregular, comprise a very important item in our trade and promise to be more so in the future.

A Fruit Calendar.

THE fruit trade is without doubt one of the most interesting branches of the grocer's business. The utmost parts of the earth are ransacked to provide the delicacies which from month to month appear on our markets and thence find their way to the table of the rich and poor alike. There is no month in the year in which you may not have a choice of fruits plucked from the plantations of the Indies, the groves on the Mediterranean shores, the orchard slopes of sunny California, or, where you will.

During the Summer and early Fall months our home-grown fruits, while not altogether excluding the products of the Sunny South, occupy a large space in the market. But each returning moon brings some new variety, marking the harvest time of some far off land to the south.

With the early part of the present month the deliveries of native peaches and grapes begin to fall off, but the market is by no means left bare. Oranges from Jamaica have been in for some little time and late Valencias from California are now arriving. In lemons, Sicilian Verdillis are still the leaders, while Californias are now coming forward together with a few Floridas. Bananas, which are with us all the year round, we are now receiving from Central America, since the West India crop was destroyed by the recent storm. Cranberries, of the early black variety, are being received from Cape Cod, Jersey, Wisconsin and Nova Scotia, while Almeria grapes from Spain via Liverpool are also available.

With November the Florida oranges will take the premier place, while Mexicans and Jamaicas will be an important feature in the market. The new cut Sicilian lemons will now be at hand, and bananas and cranberries will continue on about the same scale as during October. Dates and figs, along with currants and raisins, from Mediterranean ports, will also arrive during the early part of the month, while the Almeria grapes will be more plentiful and less dear. California dried fruits—peaches, apricots, and so forth, will also be arriving in considerable quantities.

With December comes the California navel orange, which, with the Florida, will constitute the leaders. Genuine Spqnish Valencias will also be available, and Mexican Senoras will supply the demand for low-priced goods. In the latter part of this month come the first Florida pineapples, just in time for the Christmas trade.

Through January California oranges will increase their hold and on through February, when the Cuban pine may be expected. Thenceforth oranges and pines will be the staples on the fruit market through to May, when they will about have reached their limit.

In April the November cut of Mediterranean lemons reaches Montreal in four large steamers, arriving about a week apart. The big sale of lemons following the arrival of these steamers is one of the events in the Canadian fruit market, buyers being present from as far west as Chicago.

In May the California deciduous fruits begin to arrive, commencing with the plum and the early peach, followed shortly by the Bartlett pear and Tokay grape. These hold the market until the arrival of our own basket fruit, somewhere about the middle of June. Early May sees the arrival of the southern strawberry, which is shortly displaced by the home-grown berry, to be followed before long by copious supplies of our home-grown raspberries.

Between the end of the raspberries and the first of our own peaches and pears the market sags, but in the meantime California deciduous fruits receive fresh attention, and California Valencia oranges assist, with the aid of the Georgia peach, to fill up the gap. Nor must it be forgotten that from April to July the ever-present banana is at its best.

With early August our native deciduous fruits begin to arrive and soon crowd out the foreign importations, holding the market for themselves till the middle of October again rolls round and the fruit cycle is completed.

Cold Storage for Pears.

THE effect of an invention upon an industry is often noted. According to a United States Agricultural Department study just made public the pear acreage of that country has been more than doubled in the last decade, due largely to the introduction and perfection of the refrigerator car and cold storage warehouse, supplemented by some growth in the canning industry. The facts should be of interest to all dealers in Winter fruit.

Pear storage has developed most largely in the east. In New York and Jersey City from 60,000 to 100,000 bushels of Summer pears, 30,000 to 60,000 bushels of later varieties, and many cars of California pears are stored annually. In Boston, since 1895, there have been stored each year from 5,000 to 15,000 bushels of early pears, principally Bartlett, and from 7,000 to 20,000 bushels of later varieties, such as Anjou, Bose-Duchess, Seckel and Sheldon. In Buffalo 10,000 bushels are sometimes stored in a single season, and in Philadelphia from 30,000 to 35,000 bushels. While there are no accurate statistics available and the quantity fluctuates from year to year, it is probable that 300,000 bushels are stored in a single year throughout the country.

ABOUT PEARS

Pears of all kinds need to be picked, this investigation shows, before they reach maturity, and to be ripened in a cool temperature, if the best texture and flavor are to be developed. They ripen much more rapidly after they are picked than they do in a similar temperature while hanging on the tree. The rapidity of ripening varies with the maturity of the fruit when picked, and the conditions under which it has been grown. From the experiments with the Bartlett and the Keiffer pears it was found that the Bartlett, if properly packed, kept in prime condition in cold storage for six weeks, provided it was stored within 48 hours after picking in a temperature of 32 deg. Fahrenheit; but that if the fruit did not reach the storage room until four days after it was picked there was a loss of 20 to 30 per cent. from softening and decay under exactly similar storage conditions. The Kieffers stored within 48 hours in a temperature of 32 deg. Fahrenheit have kept in perfect condition until late Winter, although there is little commercial demand for them after the holidays.

There is no uniformity of practice in the temperatures in which pears are stored. Formerly a temperature of 36 to 40 deg. Fahrenheit was considered most desirable, as a lower temperature was supposed to discolor the flesh and to injure the quality of the fruit. The pears were also believed to deteriorate much more rapidly when removed to a warmer air. In recent years a number of storage houses have carried the fruit at the standard apple temperature, i.e., from 30 to 32 deg. Fahrenheit. Large quantities of pears have been stored in 32 and 36 deg. Fahrenheit in the experiments of the Department. The fruit of all varieties has kept longer in the lower temperature and the flesh has retained its commercial qualities longer after removal from the storage house.

FRUIT WRAPPERS.

The life of a fruit in a cold storage is prolonged by the use of a fruit wrapper, and the advantage of the wrapper is more marked as the season progresses. If the fruit is to be stored until late Spring the wrapper keeps it firmer and brighter. It prevents the spread of fungus spores from one fruit to another, and thereby reduces the amount of decay. It checks the accumulation of mold on the stem and calyx in long-term storage fruits, and in light-colored fruits it prevents bruising and the discoloration that usually follows. Careful comparisons have been made of the efficiency of tissue, parchment, unprinted newspaper, and waxed papers, and but little practical difference has been observed. A double wrapper has proved more efficient for long keeping than a single one, and a satisfactory combination consists of an absorbent, unprinted newspaper next to the fruit, with a more impervious paraffin wrapper outside.

There is a general impression that cold storage injures the delicate aroma and characteristic flavors of fruits. It is not true, the reports say, that all cold storage fruits are poor in quality. On the contrary, if the storage house is properly managed, the most delicate aromas and flavors of many fruits are developed and retained for a long time. The quality of the late Fall and Winter apples ripened in this way is equal to that of the same varieties ripened out of storage, and the late pears usually surpass in quality the same varieties ripened in common storage.

SINISTER CONDITIONS.

On the other hand, it is certain that the quality of stored fruits may be injuriously affected by improper handling or by faulty management of the storage rooms. Respiration goes on rapidly when the fruit is warm. If placed in an improperly ventilated storage room, in which odors are arising from other products stored in the same compartment, or in the same cycle of refrigeration, the warm fruit may absorb these gases and become tainted by them, while the same fruit, if cool when it enters the storage room, will breathe much less actively, and there will be less danger of injury to the quality, even though the air is not perfectly sweet. The atmosphere of the rooms in which citrus fruits or vegetables of various kinds—such as cabbage, onions and celery—are stored, is often charged with the odors arising from these products if the ventilation is not thorough.

There is a general impression that cold storage fruit deteriorates quickly after removal from the warehouse. This opinion is based on the experience of the fruit handler and the consumer, and in many cases is well founded, but this rule is not applicable to all fruits in all seasons. The rapidity of deterioration depends principally on the nature of the fruit. A Bartlett pear, which normally ripens quickly, will ripen and break down in a few days after removal. If ripe or overmature when removed, it will decay much more quickly, and in either condition its deterioration will be hastened if the weather is unusually hot and humid.

The easiest way to court failure is not to strive for success. This is an age of hustle.

Production and Consumption of Oranges and Lemons.

THE interesting statistics concerning the production and consumption of oranges and lemons, translated from a recent publication of the Ministry of Agriculture, Industry, and Commerce of Italy, are taken from a report of United States Consul Bartleman, of Cadiz, Spain.

France.—The greater quantity of the oranges and lemons consumed in France are imported from Spain. Bordeaux imported during 1900 203,108 pounds from Italy, 161,770 pounds from Spain, and 11,000 pounds from Algeria. Lyons imported 176,000 pounds from Italy and 110,000 pounds from Spain. Marseilles imported 4,220,000 pounds from Algeria, 3,018,700 pounds from Spain, and 2,015,400 pounds from Italy. Paris, during the first three months of 1901, imported from Spain 36,494,900 pounds, from Algeria 3,392,600 pounds, and from Italy 2,731,400 pounds.

Germany.—Germany imports more and more each year, Hamburg being the centre of distribution not only for the Empire but for Denmark, Sweden, Norway, and Russia. From July 1, 1900, to June 30, 1901, Hamburg imported 800,000 boxes from Italy, 280,000 boxes from Spain, and 5,000 boxes from Syria. (The Spanish boxes contain twice as many oranges and lemons as the Italian and Syrian.) In 1900 Berlin received 102,850 pounds from Italy and 34,207 pounds from Spain. The principal towns in Germany, where there is great demand for this fruit, are Cologne, Dresden, Frankfort, Kiel, Leipzig, Mannheim, Stettin, Munich, Nuremberg, and Stuttgart, which in 1900 imported 25,715 tons from Italy and 8,552 tons from Spain.

Great Britain.—The greater part of the oranges consumed in England come from Spain and the lemons from Italy. Cardiff receives about 50,000 boxes of oranges and 8,000 boxes of lemons from different countries and double the quantity could be consumed. Glasgow receives about 245,000 boxes of oranges from Spain, 26,000 boxes from Italy, 12,000 boxes from Palestine, 2,000 boxes from California, and 1,000 boxes from Jamaica and Florida; in addition to which it receives some 50,000 boxes of lemons from Italy. Liverpool receives 866,910 boxes of oranges from Spain and 26,422 boxes from Italy, as well as about 285,000 boxes of lemons from Italy. London received during the first six months of 1900 (place of origin not stated) 1,448,050 boxes of oranges and for a like period in 1901 1,415,277 boxes of oranges and 239,103 boxes of lemons.

Greece.—Greece exported in 1898 oranges and lemons to the value of $44,901; in 1899, to the value of $68,647.60.

THE ROCHESTER LAMP CO. OF CANADA,
24 FRONT ST. WEST, - - TORONTO, ONT.

Roumania. — Roumania receives large quantities of oranges and lemons, the normal imports amounting annually to about 5,600 tons, mainly from Turkey and Italy.

Russia.—The principal supply of Russia comes from Italy, lemons ranking first. The same holds good for Finland, which in 1900 imported oranges to the value of only $7,057, but imported lemons to the value of $67,955. At Batum there arrived from Sicily during the year 1901, 18,627 boxes, of which lemons constituted 60 per cent. Helsingfors received, in transit for Germany, during the same year 158.4 tons of oranges and 29.7 tons of lemons. Moscow receives nearly all its fruit from Italy. Odessa receives annually 385 tons from Italy, 220 tons from Turkey, and 5.5 tons from Greece. Revel, Riga, Libeau, and St. Petersburg also receive large quantities by sea, or in transit, via Odessa, Taganrog, Trieste, Hamburg, etc. The imports of oranges into all Russia in 1901 amounted to 26,841 tons and the imports of lemons to 25,580 tons.

Servia.—Servia receives its fruit almost wholly from Italy. Of a total import of 179 tons, however, only 18.6 tons are consumed in the country, the rest being re-exported.

Sweden and Norway.—In 1899 Christiania received 3,858 tons of oranges and lemons, one-third of which came from Italy. During the same year Stockholm received 3,082 tons of oranges, valued at $262,804, of which 890 tons, valued at $75,890, came direct from Italy, and lemons, valued at $4,277, also from Italy.

Switzerland. — Switzerland imports oranges and lemons annually to the amount of 2,678 tons, chiefly from Italy and Spain.

Turkey.—Turkey produces a great quantity of oranges and mandarines; nevertheless it imports lemons from Italy, Syria, and Tripoli. The same may be said of Smyrna, Trebizond, Saloniki, Monastir, etc.

South Africa.—Cape Colony imports these fruits from the Canary Islands, Madeira, and Natal, and some from Italy.

Egypt.—Egypt imports chiefly from Turkey and Italy in great quantities.

Argentine Republic. — The Argentine Republic is reducing its importations, owing to the increase of the home production and that of Paraguay. In 1898 Italy sent thereto 113,000 boxes of oranges and 26,863 boxes of lemons; in 1899, 433,000 boxes of oranges and 19,876 boxes of lemons; in 1900, 1,038,000 boxes of oranges and 13,484 boxes of lemons. Spain and Brazil sent small quantities. Other South American republics do not import this fruit, while some export in small lots.

Canada.—Canada receives its oranges and lemons from Jamaica, California, Florida, and Italy.

Australia.—Australia receives about 12,000 boxes of oranges and 28,000 boxes of lemons. All come from Italy.

United States.—In 1900 Chicago received from Italy 45,900 boxes of oranges and 2,150,000 boxes of lemons; from California, 8,000,000 boxes of oranges and 800,000 boxes of lemons; from Jamaica, 800,000 boxes of oranges; and from Florida, 1,000,000 boxes of oranges. The receipt of oranges at New York in 1901 was as follows: From Italy, 2,934 tons, valued at $113,915; from Mexico, 3,900 tons, valued at $136,926; from the British West Indies, 16,925 tons, valued at $444,044; from Japan, 186 tons, valued at $7,751; and lemons from Italy, 72,335 tons, valued at $3,412,308; lemons from Canada, in transit; 1,101 tons, valued at $98,030.

As the production in the United States (California and Florida) increases each year, in a very short time the United States will have to look for a foreign market for its enormous production.

SUGAR BEET PULP AND MOLASSES AS CATTLE FOOD.

AN interesting outgrowth of the beet sugar industry is the utilization of the pulp from which the sugar has been extracted and the waste molasses left in the process of making the sugar, for the purpose of feeding cattle. The pulp of course has been used locally around the factories as fodder, but the device of drying it and, mixed with molasses, pressing into small compass for shipment throughout the country will greatly increase the area within which it may be available. The Dresden Sugar Co, has recently installed a fine plant for using these residues to prepare what is known as Improved Molasses Cattle Food. The process of manufacture is simple. The pulp is simply pressed so as to expel surplus moisture, and is then run into kilns or cylinders where it is subjected to a high degree of heat while being constantly agitated. During this process the waste molasses from the sugar factory is mixed with the pulp, and thus the nutritive ratio increased to a little more than that of plain pulp. The finished article comes out in the form of flakes, the water content being reduced to about 5 per cent. of the whole. Thus the dried pulp as a food is much richer in nutritive elements, pound per pound, than ordinary pressed pulp. The drying process also makes it possible to preserve the pulp a long while and ship it long distances at a minimum expense.

As yet we have made but little progress in Canada in the production of dried pulp. Directly its utility becomes common property among the farmers it may be expected to become one of our staple articles of commerce. To-day in Germany, France and Russia dried pulp is sold in the feed stores the same as bran and oil-cake in our own country, and almost ever stock-owner is a consumer of pulp.

In coming into competition with foreign-fed meats such as mutton and beef, and especially that from England and Scotland, Canadian feeders realize that in order to place Canadian meats, butter and cheese on the tables of foreigners they must not only produce quantity at a low cost, but quality as well. It was the discovery of this fact that led our intelligent successful feeders to investigate the cause contributing the fine quality and flavor of English and Scotch beef and mutton.

It was found that England and Scotland fed along with their dry forage and grain considerable succulent feed, such as turnips, mangel wurzels, sugar beets and rape. Agricultural experiments were immediately begun of using rations composed of ordinary dry feeds and succulent matter. The result of their efforts has been a great modification in the whole system of feeding for meat-production. A food-ration is now recommended containing, along with such concentrated feed as cereals and dry forage, a good supply of succulent foods as essential to excellence in a steak, chop or roast.

The preparation of sugar beet pulp known as "Improved Molasses Cattle Food" offers to the feeder of stock just such a succulent food for stock rations.

Sugar beet pulp is said to be valuable not solely on account of the nutrients it contains, though in this respect it is directly comparable with coarse fodders. Its further value results rather from its aid to digestion and the general healthful tone it gives to the animal. Practically as much grain and other forage is fed in a ration, whether pulp is fed or not. The gain is not accomplished in the saving of grain in a daily ration but in the rapidity with which the animal takes on flesh and gains in weight, thus cutting down the total requirement.

A SUCCESSFUL BUSINESS.

That the plan of interesting the trade, and thus securing a large number of active workers is a success, has been proved in the case of E. W. Gillett Co., Ltd., who are the makers of Royal Yeast, Gillett's Lye, Magic Baking Powder, etc. Ever since the formation of the company the dividends have been gradually increased until stockholders are now receiving at the rate of 10 per cent.

JONAS'

are genuine.

A man cannot always be judged by the clothes he wears. You wouldn't care to deal with a man simply because he dresses extravagantly. There are extracts put up in handsomely-labelled bottles—well dressed—but, oh dear, the contents are of a quality that is in objectionable contrast to the appearance of the bottle. It's the bottle containing the pure, strong, rich, genuine flavoring extract that the careful housekeeper seeks. She doesn't buy the attractively-dressed bottle.

JONAS' FLAVORING EXTRACTS

are the kind that can be depended upon. Their unequalled purity, strength, richness are the leading factors about them. The progressive grocer does not consider his stock complete without Jonas' Extracts. They are reliable goods for reliable grocers. An Artistic Store Plan.

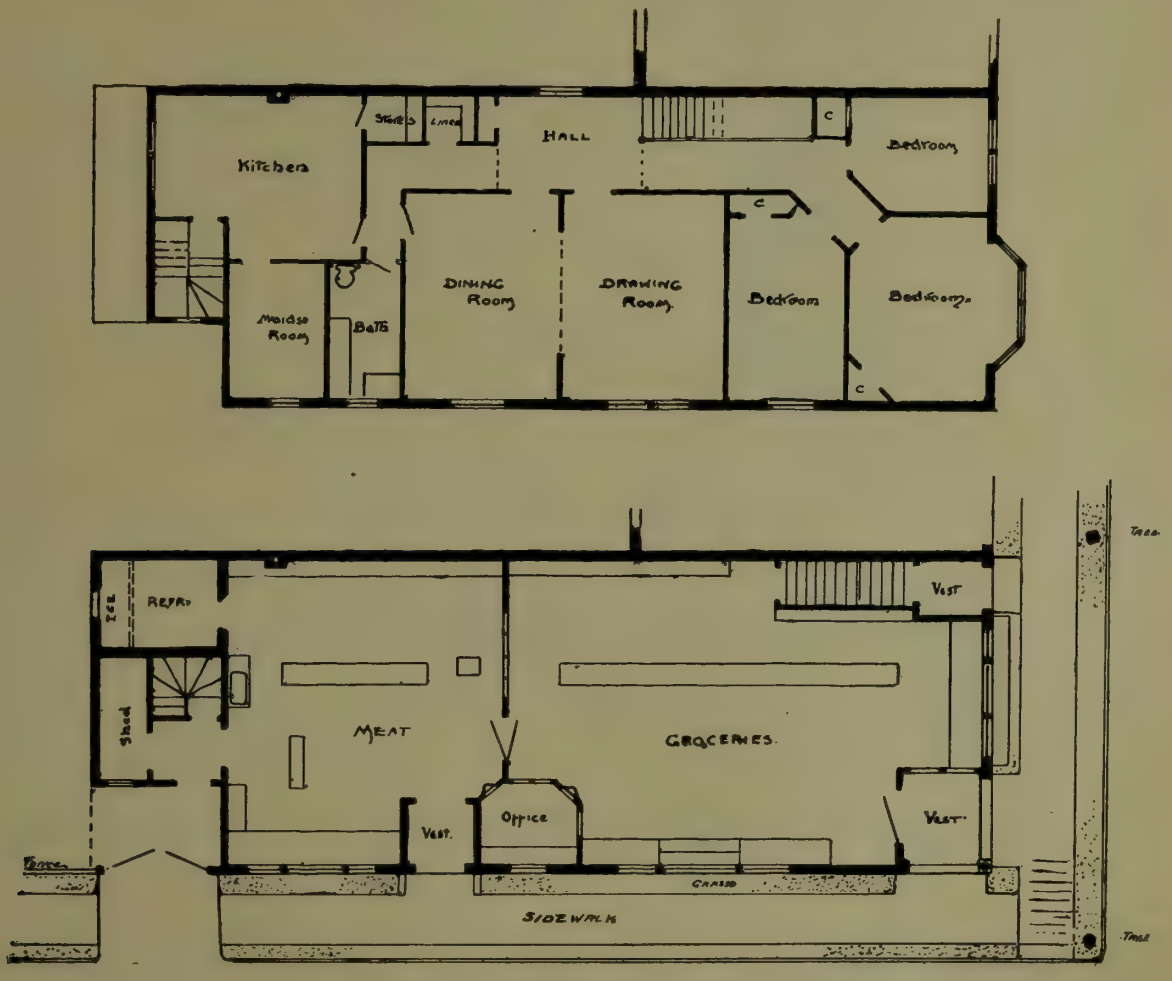
THE average town is too apt to show by the appearance of its business section that the only consideration attended to, in the construction of the buildings, is the convenience of the interior. The exterior effect is of such small value that the entire block or town suffers a defacement that, with little attention, might have been turned into an ornament. The exterior is not even considered as a subsidiary matter, but is often almost entirely ignored, and a suitable interior satisfies all demands.

This lack of taste has reached such lengths that the majority of merchants estimate the value of an artistic exterior by deducting it from the interior, feeling that every addition to the appearance of the former must mean a loss to the latter. Unfortunately this class has had its ideas strengthened by the work of a few architects whose sole aim is to advertise themselves in the more evident way, with the result that the convenience inside has been sacrificed. Constructed in this fashion, there is impressed upon the mind of the observer who intends building, the idea that the merits of interior and exterior accompany each other in inverse ratio.

So strong has this feeling become that the architect of to-day oftentimes finds it policy to plan a plain, stiff exterior, to convince his client of the value of the interior. His artistic tastes, which must be strong in every successful architect, are handicapped by the plainly spoken or implied ideas of the merchant who is building, that convenience and art are forever antagonistic in the store building.

Another idea, which is almost as great folly, is that the artistic building is much more expensive. This may be caused by a poor appreciation of the word "artistic." Such an adjective applied to a building does not necessarily mean that there must be numberless corners and projections, ornamental brick or stonework, and fancy-shaped windows and doors, but rather there must be displayed a true grasp of proportion, in many cases combined with enough variety (proportion, surroundings, and use all being considered) to relieve the monotony of a perfectly plain elevation.

The accompanying plans show the side elevation and the two interior floors of a corner grocery store with butcher shop attached. Plain as the exterior is when viewed closely, it does not require an artist to note that there is a taste displayed which would radically change the outline of the average town view, and while fully recognizing the value of interior arrangements, caters also to a taste which tends more to enjoyment than an exclusive attention to business. The store floor is carefully planned and takes advantage of the street on two sides; the living floor is much more conveniently laid out than the usual store residence.



Interior Plan of a Corner Grocery.

These plans were designed by Mr. J. Rawson Gardiner, Temple Building, Montreal, an architect whose aim has always been "to prove the inaccuracy of the assertion that artistic exteriors mean inconvenient interiors, and considerable unnecessary expense." The "corner grocery" together with its historic character, has a situation guaranteeing a gratifying business, providing building and management are good, and Mr. Gardiner has undertaken successfully to supply the suitable building.

RICE CULTURE IN TEXAS.

MR. SHAW T. NISHIMURA, representative of the Central Tea Trading Agency of Japan, in Montreal, has just returned from a journey through the United States. Mr. Nishimura's trip was made in the interests of Japan teas, and while away he visited the leading centres in the Eastern, Middle and Southern States. His report to "The Grocer" is a most interesting one, comprising as it does an account of the situation of the trade in Japan teas in the United States, also the condition of the new venture in Texas and Louisiana, in the cultivation of rice. It was partly with a view of looking more closely into the matter of Japan rice culture in Texas that the trip was undertaken, and during his tour he visited Galveston, Austin, New Orleans and other southern cities. Mr. Nishimura had for many years studied the question of rice culture in America, and particularly of those districts in the south peculiarly adapted by soil and climate for the cultivation of rice, and his trip was made with a view of occularly substantiating the reports received. That he is satisfied with his investigation may be assumed from the fact that he purchased some 3,000 acres of rice lands, which he is laying out and cultivating. During his visit south Mr. Nishimura had the pleasure of meeting the Consul-General of Japan, Mr. S. Uchida, New York, who also had been in Texas looking after this industry. Mr. Uchida is quoted as saying in an interview, by The Times-Democrat, New Orleans, that it was his intention to bring out from Japan a class of men with a thorough knowledge of the cultivation of rice. These rice farmers, while not exactly men of means, have still sufficient capital to purchase large tracts of land in the rice belt of Louisiana and Texas at the prices that are quoted for such lands, and they would bring to work a thorough knowledge of rice culture. Experiments now being conducted by Japanese farmers in the rice country of Texas will largely determine the success or failure of the Japanese immigration movement to that section. The cheapness of rice lands in Texas will prove a strong inducement to the location of Japanese rice farmers in that State. Rice land in Japan is worth from $300 to $600 per acre, and few farmers cultivate over two or three acres. For these sums they could purchase in the United States fifty or sixty times as much rice land as they own in Japan. There are certain features in connection with the American method of rice cultivation that would have to be studied, but as the Japanese are ready and apt students, it would only take two or three years for them to be able to compete successfully with other rice growers now located there.

Mr. Nishimura is convinced that the prospects for the cultivation of rice in Texas are of the brightest, and if operated by experienced Japanese rice farmers, a very profitable business will be developed in the near future. His personal venture, at least, speaks of his confidence in rice culture in the Lone Star State.

Besides the business portion of his three weeks' trip, Mr. Nishimura combined a fair share of pleasure, and, altogether, his holiday trip was a most enjoyable and interesting one.

WAREHOUSE IMPROVEMENTS.

White & Co., the wholesale fruit people on Front St., Toronto, have recently effected some improvements in their premises which add greatly to the appearance of their warehouse. The new offices are very convenient and commodious and the new arrangement gives the firm much larger storage capacity. The growth of the business during the past twelve years has been very marked, and has much exceeded the anticipations of Mr. White, who says that the output this year will again show a very large increase. Mr. Despard, the general manager, is a hard worker and deserves much credit for his active and progressive enterprise.

Side Elevation of a Corner Grocery.

In Cuba cabbages frequently weigh as much as 20 pounds. All vegetables do well. Radishes may be eaten from 14 to 18 days after sowing, lettuce in five weeks after sowing, while corn produces three crops a year. Sweet potatoes are perpetual.

Cured and Packed
Where Caught!

"Thistle" Brand Canned Fish.

One reason why the "Thistle" Brand of Canned Haddies, Kippered Herrings, etc., retain the rich, delicate flavor of the freshly-caught fish is because they are cured and packed right at the water side where they are caught.

There is no dirt, no slime in the "Thistle" Brand to spoil the natural flavor. There are no "odds and ends" thrown in in a hurry. The "Thistle" Brand contains nothing but carefully-selected fish—only the best will do for the "Thistle" Brand!

The cost per tin, or can, to clean, cure and pack the "Thistle" Brand is without doubt greater than the cost involved in marketing any other Brand in the country, yet the high quality has been steadily maintained from year to year even in the face of strong competition. The "Thistle" Brand competes on quality and not on price. It is the Standard Brand of Canned Fish!

Highest Quality Always.

ARTHUR P. TIPPET & CO.,

A MOST COMPLETE ESTABLISHMENT.

IT was the writer's privilege last week to pay a visit to the vinegar, pickle and jam works of The Ozo Co., Limited, Montreal, and, accustomed as he was to tours of inspection among the different factories throughout the land, what he saw was a revelation, not only as to the modern arrangement of the plant and machinery, but also the thorough manner in which the products of this company are turned out. There is an air of brightness and cleanliness throughout the entire works that impresses one indelibly with the idea of safety and healthfulness in the products of the firm. The Ozo Co., Limited, of which Mr. John Carsley is the president and manager, comprises the vinegar works of M. Lefebvre, Brosseau & Co.'s vinegar and pickle works and the original Ozo Co., Limited.

Plant of The Ozo Co., Limited, Montreal.

The combined factories are situated on Mount Royal avenue, corner Drolet street, and cover an area of 200 ft. on Mount Royal avenue and 600 ft. on Drolet street. Besides the main factory and works, there is a large storage warehouse on the west side of Drolet street extending over 150 ft.

Under the guidance of Mr. Carsley your representative was shown through the establishment and the various departments and machinery and plant explained. On the main floor, back of the large and airy general and private offices, is located the shipping room, 125 x 40 ft., with every convenience for careful handling of goods. Behind the shipping room is the large pickling department containing 55 immense vats, each holding 18 tons of pickle. Though every vat was filled, Mr. Carsley stated that more than half of the number were now in their second filling, the first "putting down" having been sold.

A visit was then paid to the large, airy basement running the entire length of the main building, this basement being used as a pickle-cutting, bottling and labelling room. Some 30 girls were busy preparing and packing the pickles. The arrangements here for prompt handling and clean work are most striking, it being the object of the company to preserve in every respect the idea and fact of absolute cleanliness.

Taking the elevator to the third floor, the boiling room was reached. This large flat contains eight large copper kettles for preparing jams and jellies. These large jacket kettles are of the latest and most approved pattern, and are capable of turning out many tons of jams a day. There are also several immense coolers, necessary in the preparation of these goods.

On the next, the fourth floor, is the spice department, and here are located the various sifting, grinding, packing, weighing and labelling machines. This spice department, the writer was informed, has developed in a most flattering manner, evidencing the fact that meritorious goods are bound to win the confidence of the trade.

The fifth floor is devoted to the packing of the "Ozo" brand package teas, and is arranged most completely for careful and expeditious handling and packing, tea-cutters, sifters and a large revolving mixer of a capacity of three tons of tea being noted. The bulk teas of The Ozo Co., Limited, and which trade is a large and constantly growing one, are located in a large warehouse in the business section of the city. This is done with the idea of saving shipping and transfer charges and convenience in prompt shipment by boat or rail.

The sixth floor is used as a storage room for barrels, cases, boxes, labels and other requisites to the business.

On returning to the ground floor Mr. Carsley took the writer to the vinegar factory, immediately to the rear of the large main building. Here there are 100 generators, producing, under the management of expert vinegar manufacturers, the excellent grades of vinegars used by the firm in the preparation of their products and supplied to the trade of Canada. These 100 generators contained each 150 to 180 gallons of vinegar, besides which there were in bond five tanks, each containing 20,000 gallons, or nearly 300,000 gallons of vinegar.

Back of the vinegar factory is the large storage yard for empty barrels and kegs, and the cooperage.

The Ozo Co., Limited, manufacture their own light and power, using the latest acetylene gas machines for illuminating purposes.

A feature in the production of high-class goods mentioned by Mr. Carsley is that all their supplies for pickling purposes, such as cucumbers, cauliflowers, onions, etc., are grown especially for The Ozo Co., special arrangements having been made with farmers for careful and select cultivation, and only the best products being accepted.

The fallacious idea, and one that has been a great injustice to the pickling vinegar and jam manufacturers of Montreal and Quebec, and one that certain manufacturers of similar goods in other parts of Canada have not been any too keen to contradict, is that the quality of goods produced in this province is inferior to those of the West. This erroneous idea must be dispelled, and should the idea still exist in the minds of a certain section of the trade, a visit to the works of The Ozo Co., Limited, would convince the most critical that nothing better, cleaner or healthier can be made in Canada. It is with a great deal of gratification that The Ozo Co., Limited, can point to their record and the high quality of the goods turned out by them. As an evidence of the wide-spread popularity of the company's products, it need only be said that while the writer was inspecting the premises, eleven solid carloads of pickles and other products were shipped to Winnipeg. On the writer's remarking to Mr. Carsley on this large shipment, he was informed that the entire capacity of the factory "was sold up to December 1st."

Certainly a most convincing argument of prosperity and popularity. As regards local trade and trade throughout the Province of Quebec, the old saying that "a prophet is not without honor save in his own country," does not apply to The Ozo Co., Limited, and its products, for here, where they are best known, their friends are most numerous and loyal.

This modern establishment is most certainly a credit to Montreal, and one of its leading industries. Under the management of Mr. John Carsley, The Ozo Co. should enjoy a prosperous future.

Contributors are requested to send news only, not puffs of goods they handle, or the arrival of standard goods that everyone has in stock, or that they are offering goods at close figures, or that they have had an unusually large sale this season.

The arrival is announced of new quintal codfish, No. 1 split herrings and new mackerel in half barrels and kitts by Balfour & Co., Hamilton.

The attention of the trade is called to the ad. in another section of this issue of Laporte, Martin & Cie., Montreal. The various lines advertised are controlled by them from Canada and the brands are of the highest.

The attention of the trade is called to the advertisement of Mr. Horace Haszard, Charlottetown, P.E.I., in this issue. The success that has attended the introduction to the trade in Prince Edward Island and the Maritime Provinces of "Brahmin" tea has spread throughout Canada and from coast to coast in the leading centres it has won a fine reputation for itself. Mr. Haszard is sole agent for Canada and the United States. The trade is requested to write for samples and prices.

A bargain in a 12-cents mixed biscuit, excellent in appearance and quality, is offered at 6½c. per pound by Joseph Grant, Ottawa. Write for sample barrel.

"Maple Leaf" granulated sugar, from new-crop beets, is now in store with The Eby, Blain Co.

Under the brands of "Diamond G" and "Atlas," W. H. Gillard & Co. are offering some exceptionally fine peels.

Laporte, Martin & Cie., Montreal, report arrival by steamer Escalona, just arrived, of a large assortment of new Malaga table raisins, all grades and size boxes—Valencia raisins, f.o.s. selected and 4-crown layers, best packs; Valencia shelled almonds, currants, fine Filiatras, in barrels, and ¼ cases; cleaned in ¼ cases, loose and 1-lb. packages; also fancy Vostizza currants. Merchants who have not as yet placed their orders will find values by communicating with above advertisers.

Joseph Grant, wholesale grocer, Ottawa, calls the attention of the trade to special values offered in red and pink salmon, 500 cases of each grade, good brands being in stock now.

The Eby, Blain Co. are offering exceptional values in new sultana raisins for bakers' and confectioners' trade.

A. F. MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., Ltd., have just been appointed sole selling agents for Bensdorp's Royal Dutch Cocoa in Ontario, Manitoba, Northwest Territories and British Columbia. They have a large consignment now on the way. Quotations for quantities may be had on application.

The quality of the choice Eleme figs now in stock by W. H. Gillard & Co. is said by that firm to be better than they have ever seen in previous years.

The Eby, Blain Co. are just in receipt of shipment of "Judge" brand salmon, in porcelain lined tins. This is one of the highest grades of sockeye salmon packed, and will be in great demand with high-class trade.

The attention of the grocery trade is called to advt. of Henri Jonas & Cie., Montreal, in this issue.

Laporte, Martin & Cie., Montreal, are offering a fine premium, an electric hand lamp, with 10 cases of their lines advertised in this issue. This is a most useful and valuable article for every store, it being absolutely safe, conveniently carried and always ready for use.

IMPROVED

MOLASSES CATTLE FOOD

As a feed for beef cattle, sheep, etc., it is unexcelled. It is a quick fattener, and in combination with a grain or hay ration it invariably converts old, lean animals into tender, juicy meat.

Its highest value, however, is for dairy purposes. As a food for milch cows it is the most profitable and effective article produced to-day. Gives equal or better results than beets, and is much less expensive.

Thoroughly evaporated so that it will keep in any climate. Packed in 100-lb. Sacks. Write for literature, prices, etc.

Because of the fact that sugar was originally made exclusively from the sugar cane, it is to-day generally supposed that all the best grades of sugar are still secured from this source.

On the contrary, whether or not you know, or care to believe it, 75% of the granulated sugar now made and used in Canada is of beet origin. You have sold tons of beet sugar unwittingly, and it has given such good satisfaction to your customers, that neither of you have recognized any difference.

This being so, how can you discriminate against beet sugar?

Against some brands, it may be, but not against "Imperial." To satisfy your doubts place the smallest order you like for "Imperial" brand Granulated Sugar. We leave the conclusions to you.

"Imperial" brand sugar consists of perfect crystals, even and of maximum strength. You will find it a profitable and satisfying brand to sell.

"SALADA" Ceylon Tea is winning favors everywhere, new branches and agencies are being constantly established to meet the growing demand.

To the observant one the reason is not far to seek, as "SALADA" is run by live, hustling, resourceful business men, who have always worked (and are still at it) with the fixed belief that "Quality," backed by a faithful adherence to every claim and offer made, is absolutely essential to a lasting success. Our past experience in this connection has only tended to strengthen these views.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Toronto, October 22, 1903.

GROCERIES.

THE good trade reported last week is keeping up. The country merchants are buying freely in most sections. Staples form the chief line of interest. Rice and tapioca, and dried fruits are being freely enquired for. Collections for the week are reported good and altogether the outlook is satisfactory. The interest in canned goods is maintained and from dependable sources it would seem that the canners are not looking forward to filling more than 80 per cent. of tomato orders, and less than that of corn. In coffees the demand is fair but at the firm prices buyers are not evincing much interest. Spices continue firm and unchanged. Syrups and molasses maintain the strength last reported, while a fair movement s to be noted. An advance in tapioca on the primal markets is announced, but has not yet been reflected locally. Teas are steady locally and the demand fair. Advices from the London market indicate a re-establishment of confidence and a more optimistic feeling than has lately prevailed. Japans and Ceylon greens are meeting an active demand. Dried fruits from the steamer Escalona are arriving on the local market and affecting the quotations, especially for raisins. Sugar remains fractionally unchanged locally. The tone is steady with but little new business. Dominos and cream have been withdrawn.

CANNED GOODS.

The attention of the trade is still centred on canned goods. Back orders are being delivered as fast as goods are received from the factories. From a reliable source it is learned that the canners do not expect to deliver more than 80 per cent. of the tomato orders. No further orders are being taken at any price. The proportion of corn expected to be delivered has not transpired. Any tomatoes changing hands at present are said to be going at $1.25. This, it is understood, has been paid by some houses to fill Northwest orders. No salmon is changing hands. A marked advance in asparagus is noted. We quote :

SUGAR.

There is little of particular interest to record this week, and the market may be called a waiting one. New York has been quiet and dull with only small business doing, and with little desire to operate on the part of either buyers or sellers. Quotations remain nominally unchanged on a basis of 3⅞c., duty paid New York, for 96 centrifugal, with usual difference for lower grades. Receipts for week have again been light, which has been encouraging to holders to maintain pretentions, but as refiners have had ample stocks for requirements, they have, in the main, stayed out of the market. Total stocks in all hands for week ending October 14 were 132,236 tons, or 18,705 tons less than preceding week ; meltings remain unchanged at 35,000 tons, while receipts were only 16,205 tons. Since January 1 the falling off in receipts, as compared with the previous year, has been 50,557 tons. For same period deliveries at United States four ports have fallen off about 92,000 tons. Cuban stocks for week under review are reduced by 8,000 tons. Combined stocks of European and American at latest uneven dates were 1,386,736 tons, being 41,846 tons less than same time last year. A cable received on the 17th inst. from Mr. Licht, of Magdeburg, the celebrated European statistician, estimates a total production for all Europe of 5,850,000 tons, which confirms previous estimates of independent parties, and is about the mean of bis two preliminary estimates. Weather is reported as favorable to crop work. Eighty-eight per cent. beet has declined fractionally for the week, and is now quoted 8s. 9d. basis, f.o.b. Hamburg, for October shipment. U. S. refined is reported steady and unchanged, with no special indications for the immediate future. The tone of the local market is steady with but little new business doing and there are no particular indications. The only change to note in the sugar list is a withdrawal of domino and cream sugar. Present quotations are as follows :

SPICES

Values are all very firm in spices with an upward tendency, but no actual change has transpired. Locally there is a fair trade reported. New York advices indicate a general firmness. No new developments have been reported from primal markets. We quote :

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The demand for syrups and molasses locally is good, with no change in prices. In New York molasses is held firmly with slightly improved movement. Syrups there are also strong. A fair volume of turn over is reported. We quote :

TEAS.

Teas are meeting with a very good demand locally. The market is steady and prices are firm. The demand for Ceylon greens is steadily improving, in a great measure due to the great scarcity of moderate priced good liquoring Japans. Last mail advices on China greens indicate that prices have eased off, but the advance in exchange has more than equalled the decline in price since the opening of the market. China blacks are featureless. Japans are strong and in poor supply. Latest London advices would indicate that the downward tendency in Indias, noticed recently, has been arrested and good class tippy Broken Pekoes have met an active enquiry, and a growing optimism is being disclosed. In Ceylons, the position of medium and fine leaf kinds has improved, and choicest Broken Orange Pekoes show a rise of ½d. to 1d. per lb. We quote:

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

Consignments via the steamer Escalona, which reached Montreal on October 16, arrived in Toronto the early part of this week. The Bellona is expected in about a month. Advices from C. Whittall & Co., Symrna, are to the effect that choice quality Sultana raisins are extremely scarce and are bringing prices out of all proportion to the lower grades. Practically 5-6 of the yield consists of low and medium qualities, suitable for "ordinary," "good," "fine," and to some extent "choice." The price of low grades has weakened, owing to the amount of rain damaged fruit offered, but there is no prospect of fine qualities declining. California prunes are dull. Some fine lines of peeled and unpeeled apricots and peaches are reported. California seeded muscatels have advanced ½c. and other grades ½c. Currants are quiet and unchanged. The first shipments of filberts have arrived this week. In the local market the arrival of new raisins has modified the quotations for old stock. We quote:

VEGETABLES.

The vegetable market is still brisk. Supplies are ample and the demand is good. Altogether a good season has been experienced. Onions are rather scarce and high, and complaint is still general of potato rot. Prices are firming up with the advance of the season, but not more than might be expected. We quote :

QUEBEC MARKETS.

Montreal, Oct. 22, 1903.

GROCERIES.

THE weekly review of the jobbing trade shows the general condition of business as fairly good, and, while in some quarters complaints of slow remittances from country merchants are reported, on the whole, a satisfactory state of affairs exists. The volume of business done was satisfactory. Sugars, the season being taken into account, are going out well; no change is prices is reported, though new York markets are strong, with beet advancing abroad. The report was received that French refiners are buying to hold, as the new beet crop was not improving. A few parcels of Austrian and Scotch sugars were received, but not in quantities to disturb local conditions. In teas, matters have been stirred up somewhat by the report of the withdrawal by the Ceylon Packers' Association of the 5c. per pound bounty granted for the improvement and culture of Ceylon green teas. This report has caused an unwonted activity in the trade, and brokers have booked large orders during the week, one having sold over 1,000 packages in an afternoon. Offers are also pouring in from the west, and cabling is kept up actively. This bounty, equal in Canadian currency to 1 2-3c. per pound, it is calculated, will enhance the value of Ceylon teas to that extent, consequently, jobbers and tea merchants are looking for supplies. One reason for the free buying prevailing at present is that the market is absolutely bare of these teas, buyers holding off all Summer and allowing their stocks to dwindle down. It is surmised, and is more than probable, that this withdrawal of the bounty will throw inquiries into Japans, particularly in this district. The high price of low and medium Japans, however, and the scarcity of same, leaves it a matter of keen competition, and Japans not being obtainable freely, will still leave an openinb for Ceylon greens even at the advance. Taking it all round, teas are an interesting feature this week. China blacks and greens are firm, with no weakening in primary markets. Indian blacks are reported distinctly stronger. Syrups are in good demand. Molasses is unchanged and business quiet; cold weather setting in will make inquiries more plentiful. The canned goods situation is unchanged from last week. Jobbers are receiving supplies for corn and tomatoes in good quantities now, and the hope, so long cherished, for full deliveries, seems about to be realized. That tomatoes are considered good value by outside canneries is evidenced by the report that several small canneries are holding out for $1.20. This is a speculative figure, based no doubt on the assumption of the Canadian Canners' Association's inability to make full deliveries, and the fact that some jobbers who had held off placing their orders with the association would be forced to buy. Coffee is looking up somewhat, and, as the statistical position is strong, the feeling is for an advance shortly. Local trade is quiet and barely affected by the rise in New York, and unless the advance runs very high, no disturbance of values will be noticed. Spices of all kinds continue strong; pepper and cloves principally so. The arrival of the Escalona on Saturday with first direct shipment of Mediterranean dried fruits has thrown a good deal of activity into Valencia and Malaga raisins, currants, figs, etc. Grenoble walnuts have advanced 10 fr. per 100 kilos, according to rumor. Shelled almonds also are quoted 3s. per cwt. higher. California fruits are quiet with a stronger feeling in apricots. In green fruits Canadian apple shipments have been the most interesting line, some 67,000 barrels having left this port during the week for abroad. Canadian grapes are in good demand, with light receipts and consequent firmer prices. Sweet potatoes are on the market and in good demand. Canadian onions are scarce; red varieties almost impossible to secure. Spanish onions, ex Escalona, which brought some 5,000 crates, were freely taken hold of. In fish, herrings continue scarce, also green cod. Prepared fish are higher. Manitoba fish are coming in in good quantities and when weather hardens will get considerable attention. Bulk oysters have been only in ordinary demand, the open, soft weather being a drawback to active buying. Rice and tapioca trade is quiet, the latter being reported advanced 1s. per cwt. In vegetables, prices generally are tending down, supplies coming in plentifully. The local bean market is a very uncertain quantity just at present; prices are easier now, but what the outcome will be it is difficult to predict. Eggs are in good demand and prices are firmer. It is thought that the supplies coming forward will not more than equal the demand. There is nothing new in the honey situation. The evaporated apple market is steadier this week and prices quoted are being well maintained. The hop situation is commented on below. The situation in butter and cheese is commented on under "Dairy Produce." There are no changes as yet in the price of flour, but some reductions are expected soon. Business in grain is quiet.

SUGAR

The market for sugar is steady with no change to report. New York advanced 5c. per 100 pounds last week, but Canadian refiners did not follow, and, as trade is quiet now, it is not anticipated that they will be forced to advance, unless New York rises again. New York raw sugar market is firm. Private cable advices via New York to hand report beet market advancing and new crop beets not improving, also that French refineries were buying to hold. Some foreign refined sugars have lately been received, but not in sufficiently heavy quantities to affect the market. We quote:

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Syrups continue in fair demand, prices being low. The quality of syrups has of late years been a matter to which manufacturers have paid a good deal of attention, with the result that consumers are preferring it to even the finer grades of New Orleans and Barbados molasses. The change in the direction of preference by the consumer may also be attributed to the fact that manufacturers have for some time past been putting this desirable and necessary article into more convenient packages lor the grocery trade to hand out to his customers, doing away with the clumsy, awkward, and more or less unclean barrels and half-barrels—a good movement, deserving of support by the trade. Molasses is unchanged, Barbados continuing firm. It is expected that as soon as the cold weather sets in a considerably larger trade will be done. We quote:

TEAS.

Some little life has been injected into the local tea trade by the report that the Ceylon Planters' Association of Colombo had decided to terminate the paying of the bonus of 5c. per pound for the export of green Ceylon teas on and after December 31 next. In consequence of this report some very active buying has been indulged in by the trade, and the cables have been kept warm transmitting offers and orders. One broker during last Friday and Saturday cabled orders for no less than 1,000 packages of green Ceylons, while others have cabled orders of good size. On every hand the feeling exists that the withdrawal of this bonus (equal in Canadian money to about 1 2-3c. per pound) will enhance the value of Ceylon greens to the amount of the bonus withdrawn, and buying is being more liberally indulged in. This action on the part of the Ceylon Planters' Association is said to be made on the plea that the bonus had been allowed primarily with a view of encouraging the planters in the production of green Ceylons to compete with the teas of Japan and to reimburse the members for their extra outlay in the way of requisite plant,, etc., for the preparation of these teas, and the time had arrived when the protection accorded should be withdrawn, as it had been demonstrated that the teas could be produced profitably without the bonus. In some quarters it is considered a trifle premature for withdrawing the bonus, and the fear is expressed that a reaction will take place in favor of Japan teas, particularly if the production of these latter teas can be increased. There is also a tendency to hold up the price of Indian greens, and some brokers are holding their samples for better figures. The hold that Ceylon greens have taken on the market, particularly in this district, is a strong one, and it is anticipated, as a consequence of the favor that they have met with, that even with the extra cost of the low-grade and medium greens, they will be able to hold their own in the market. What the effect will be on the United States markets, where they were just beginning to make themselves an interesting factor, can only be surmised. That it will have a tendency to restrict in certain quarters the demand for these Ceylon greens is admitted. As regards spot green Ceylons the market is bare, and inquiries are fairly pouring in from all parts of the country. In China blacks the market is reported as firm. The season is almost over for Paklings and there are no low-grades left in primary markets. China greens are steady and firm as a rock, and no weakening in China. Ceylon and Indian blacks are reported as advancing, and a distinctly stronger market is looked for. The low prices prevailing some weeks ago produced a demand so large that prices advanced rapidly. The statistical position is very strong. We quote:

COFFEE.

It looks as if coffee prices would have to advance. The statistical position is very strong. Cable advices received from Brazil on the 16th inst. say that crop movement will show a falling off. This will tend to affect local markets in a measure. Mild coffees are firm at the advance reported some three weeks ago. English advices to hand say market is bare of mild coffees and prices should rule higher until next March-April, when new crop comes in. Locally, trade is quiet, though a stronger feeling is manifested on part of roasters. We quote:

SPICES.

Spice market is strong locally sympathetically with New York. Pepper seems to obtain good attention, as also cloves. In pimento a strong feeling prevails, prices having steadily advanced since September 2 last from 7 to 8½c., last quotation from New York at hand to-day being 8¾c. Cloves continue strong both in London and New York. In black pepper, market locally seems to be well supplied, some large lots having been lately received. Cassia is firm, China being worth from 14 to 16c. Ginger is quiet. Nutmegs are firm and quoted all

RICE AND TAPIOCA.

Very little is doing in rice and prices are unchanged from last week's quotations. Tapioca is somewhat more interesting, primary markets having advanced 1s. per cwt., though even at this advance very little extra business is doing, as no great quantities are bought for stock. We quote :

CANNED GOODS.

In canned goods the situation of last week is unchanged, jobbers receiving into store their supplies of corn and tomatoes and are filling their orders, the majority of them in full, as the very satisfactory news from the Canners' Association last week gives hope of 100 per cent. deliveries being made to them. There are still some, however, who claim that only 80 per cent. will be made. It is reported that outside canning factories have made sales this week of 1,200 cases of corn at 72½c. and 1,000 cases of peas at 72½c. A few of the smaller outside packers are holding out for higher prices in tomatoes that are asked by the Canadian Canners' Association, one Quebecker asking as high as $1.20. This is presumably done in the anticipation that the association will be unable to fill contracts in full, but the impression is that this is merely a speculative figure and in no way indicates the state of the market. Trade in other lines is quiet. Salmon is holding up at firm prices quoted last week. Canadian sardines are strong and in some quarters are looked to as bound to go higher. We quote :

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

The arrival of the Escalona, which event occurred Saturday last, put some activity into the dried fruit trade. Some 2,000,000 pounds of currants are being unloaded and the trade will be supplied from now until the arrival of the Bellona now on the way from Mediterranean ports. Deliveries are being freely made of Valencia and Denia fruits. Market is steady and prices unchanged. The expected decline has not transpired to time of correcting. There is a firmer feeling in Grenoble walnuts and an advance of 10 francs per 100 kilos is rumored. In shelled almonds cables from Malaga indicate stiff market with 3s. per cwt. advance. Figs are being looked to with interest. In California fruits apricots maintain the interest at firm prices. We quote :

GREEN FRUITS.

Shipments of apples from the west have been lighter this week than last. The total shipments from Canada and the United States will be about 117,000 bbls. this week, not including shipments from Halifax. Out of this quantity about 67,000 bbls. are from this port. Market continues good in England showing fair returns to shippers. Lemons are very scarce and high in sympathy with New York and still higher figures are looked for during the next few weeks. Oranges about as last week and in very little demand. Canadian grapes are in good demand, but very light receipts are coming forward and as a consequence prices obtained are showing profitable returns to growers. California grapes are in fair demand at $2.10 to $2.50, according to quality. Sweet potatoes are selling from $2.75 to $3 per bbl. Canadian onions are very scarce. It is impossible to secure any red varieties in bbls. at less than $3.50 per bbl. Spanish onions ex Escalona are fetching 75 to 80c. per crate, according to quality. We quote :

FISH.

The general feeling in fish is quiet. Prices are unchanged this week. Sea fish, such as haddock, are high owing to heavy storms preventing fishing. Prepared fish must undoubtedly advance shortly owing to the scarcity of green cod. Dore are fairly plentiful and arriving from Manitoba in good condition, and meeting with ready sale. It is expected that as soon as the weather hardens trade will be better in all lines. Oysters have not been so freely bought and handled on account of the soft weather prevailing. We quote :

VEGETABLES.

The potato market is quiet and tendency is for slightly lower prices. Quite a number of cars are looking for offers. Track sales for carlots have been made at 55c. to 60c. As the crop in Quebec is large it is not anticipated that prices for tubers will rule high, unless export demand should be heavy. Sweet potatoes have lately made their appearance and to-day are selling at $2.75 to $3 per bbl. Canadian onions are extremely scarce and it is impossible to buy red varieties in bbls. at less than $3.50 per bbl. Stocks this year are very light. Some 5,000 cases Spanish onions arrived on the Escalona on Saturday, but this small quantity was all sold ahead and no more can be brought in by direct steamers via St. Lawrence route this year. HOW about your window display this week? Can I help you?

I saw a great window in Tilsingburg the other day. If it hadn't been Sunday I'd have hunted up Wilson & Bentley, the proprietors, for I know they must be wide-awake hustling merchants—the kind I like to do business with.

They had placed in the center a big anvil—a real one from the blacksmith's shop (the anvil is part of the "FORCE" trade mark, you know). Around it was a mighty well-grouped display of "FORCE" packages — on all sides, top and bottom, back and front.

Three different people stopped to look at it while I was passing—even if it was Sunday.

I'll wager that window sold a lot of "FORCE"—and I'll wager, too, that it brought some new customers to the store—and that "FORCE" made everyone, old or new, feel a little bit better than they did before—better toward themselves, toward that store, and I really believe toward

Yours truly,

Sunny Jim

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS.

This is the most uncertain item on the list at present, the trade generally being at a loss to know what will be the outcome of the present situation. Since our last report prices have been considerably easier and some deliveries have been made from the west at reduced prices. A leading Montreal broker tells us that prices asked by Western producers vary about 15c. per bushel. Just what will be the final outcome it is hard to predict, but as there is no doubt that the crop is small, it would seem likely that prices will soon settle on a strong basis. Jobbers' prices are nominally unchanged, but it is reported that some concessions may be obtained. We quote:

Choice prime, per bushel	2 00
" carlots	1 75
Ordinary (off grade), per bush	1 85
No. 1 hand-picked, very fine, carlots	2 10

EGGS.

The local market continues to improve. The arrivals of new-laids are selling readily at from 22 to 24c., straight stock 19 to 21c., No. 2, 15 to 17c. The demand continues very brisk and it is now thought that supplies will not be in excess of the demand. If this be the case, a good trade may be expected through the Fall and Winter months.

HONEY.

There is nothing new in the situation and nothing to add to our reports of the last few weeks. Offerings continue large, especially from the west, but buyers are not anxious to stock up very heavily. The Montreal market is also influenced to a great extent by the West India honey market. We quote the following unchanged prices:

Strained, white	0 07½	0 08
Clover and basswood	0 08	0 08½

MAPLE PRODUCTS.

The local market has been quiet during the last week and there are no changes to report. We quote:

New syrup, in wood, per lb	0 05½	0 06
New syrup, in large tins	0 70	0 75
Old "	0 55	0 60
Old " in wood	0 05½	0 06
Pure sugar, per lb	0 07	0 07½
Pure Beauce sugar, per lb	0 08	0 09

EVAPORATED APPLES.

There is a more settled feeling in the evaporated apple market this week, but whether it is temporary or permanent it is difficult to predict. Prices as given last week seem stationary. As stated in our last issue, large quantities of green fruit suitable for the evaporators are now being exported because of the low prices for evaporated fruit. It is thought that when this movement subsides there may be a further reduction in evaporated apples. The crop this year is so large that high prices cannot be expected. We quote:

New, in carlots	0 05½	0 06
New, in jobbing lots	0 06	0 06½

HOPS.

To our somewhat lengthy report of the general hop situation in our last issue, there is nothing special to add. Further English advices confirm what was said in our last issue concerning the shortage in the Old Land. The crops in Kent, Sussex and Surrey have now been gathered and according to The Kentish Observer, the yield in the majority of instances has been from two to three cwt. per acre short of the estimates formed before the picking. It is thought that when Government statistics are compiled it will be found that the aggregate quantity of hops grown is less than 400,000 cwt. The great gale about September 10 did great damage to the crop.

On the local market the situation is unchanged. Farmers continue to ask from 28 to 35c., which is higher than most dealers think the market will stand. There are few transactions.

POTATOES.

The local market is quiet. Dealers are buying at from 55 to 60c. per bag of 90 lb. and selling at 65 and 70c. The crop is large in this province and unless there is an export demand it is not expected that prices will be high this Winter. It is estimated that the American crop is thirty million bushels short of last year.

FLOUR AND GRAIN.

FLOUR.

There is very little activity on the local market. Flour is expected to decline, but as yet there have been no changes and we quote again the following unchanged prices:

GRAIN.

Business continues quiet, with little demand for export. Manitoba wheat continues too high to allow exporters to handle it. The bulk of it is still going to the millers. The movement of grain from the Northwest is still very slow. We quote:

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

Office of "The Canadian Grocer,"

St. John, N.B., Oct. 20, 1903.

BUSINESS in St. John continues good. We are looking forward to a particularly large Winter export business. There is much dissatisfaction over the withdrawal of some of the mail boats from St. John. While, without these, the number of steamers to call here will be larger than ever before, there is a feeling that as the mail boats receive a subsidy they should carry out the agreement and fulfil their contract, or, at least, in default, not receive the full subsidy. In markets there is little change. Cream of tartar is again turning higher after the somewhat lower prices quoted. Potatoes, which are a large product, are a good crop in both quality and quantity.

OILS.

In burning oil this is the season of large consumption. Prices are rather higher and the market firm. In lubricating oils, while prices do not change as quickly as burning, the tendency is as a rule the same. Linseed oil continues low and is quite easy and sales not large. Turpentine is still high and quite firm. In cod oil prices are rather higher. Supplies are very light. Quotations are:

peas while the feeling is firm there is not the same tendency to higher prices. In fruits the output has not been large, and all lines are firmly held. Blueberries are scarce. Salmon is firmly held at the advance and markets are very firm. Domestic sardines are a light pack. We quote:

GREEN FRUIT.

There is a fair business. Apples are the large sellers. Good reports continue to come from Nova Scotia. The apples received are fine and prices low. Gravensteins have the largest demand. In oranges Jamaica stock hold the market, with prices unchanged. Lemons have just a fair sale; the market continues quite firm. In small fruits Ontario grapes are quite plentiful. There is a good sale at good figures. Some nice Tokay are offered. Barrel grapes have a very light sale. Ontario peaches are still offered at quite firm prices. Pears are about done. Sweet potatoes are in light demand with prices rather easier. Cape Cod cranberries rule at full figures. We quote:

DRIED FRUIT.

This is a line of much interest. In general rather light stocks have been bought. Little California fruit will be seen, except a fair quantity of prunes. In all lines of fruits prices are firm, particularly in raisins. New Malaga, seeded and loose, are daily expected. New peels have been received; the price is rather higher than last year. Figs are here. New dates will show higher value by the time they arrive. Evaporated apples rule firm; sales so far have not been large.

Office of THE CANADIAN GROCER,
WINNIPEG, October 19.

TRADE in grocery and produce lines is steady, and though the rush for goods is not quite so strong as it was at the corresponding period of last year, every wholesale house will tell you they have about all they can handle. The delay in the getting out of the grain has, of course, kept other lines of trade back, and it is having some effect on collections, which are slower than they should be at this season. The high prices at which the crop is selling is giving the farmer a good return, and but for this there would have been some loss, as for the first time in many years Manitoba, or more properly speaking the Northwest in general, has what is known as a No. 2 crop, that is, the bulk of the crop threshed after the bad weather will grade 2 northern. It is a matter for congratulation, however, that a careful study of the grain inspection lists shows that the crop of the Canadian West is grading decidedly better than that of either Minnesota or Dakota. At this writing No. 2 northern wheat is selling for 8½c. over the price of No. 1 hard at this date last year. Manitoba No. 1 northern has sold at a premium over Duluth No. 1 northern since the season opened. The yield of grain on the whole is larger than was anticipated, and there are enormous yields of oats reported from many sections, more particularly in the Northwest Territories. One yield that was verified by a Government agent was 7,000 bushels from 75 acres, the oats weighing 50 lbs. to the bushel measure. These would sell at the man's own station for about 24c., so that the returns for that portion of his season's work could not be complained of. In grocery lines there are few changes to record, and demand is steady in all seasonable goods.

CANNED VEGETABLES.

Packers may be said to have withdrawn quotations from this market, as quotations on anything but contracted orders are practically prohibitive. New pack of tomatoes sell steadily at $3.50 for the 2-doz. case. There is no change of situation as to either corn or peas.

CANNED SALMON.

The situation is strong and prices are high. No. 1 sockeye is quoted at $6.25 and No. 2 at $5.75, for last year's goods, and red spring salmon at $5.50.

EVAPORATED AND DRIED FRUITS.

Valencia raisins of the new stock are selling at $2.40 to $2.65 for fine off-stalk, according to grade. The California fruit growers have advanced the price of cleaned currants ¼c, but the price here has not yet responded. The orders booked for Spanish seeded raisins have been cancelled, the company not being able to fill them for this season. This is rather a disappointment, owing to the high price of California fruit. Small prunes are very scarce, the crop being light—the prunes nearly all run to the large sizes. Prices at present for small prunes are all quoted on last year's stock, which is the only stock available at the moment; 100's and over are quoted at 3½; 120's to 140's, 3¾; 60's to 70's, the smallest size of new stock to hand, 7c; 50's to 60's, 7½, and 40's to 50's, 8¼.

Evaporated apples are in strong demand, but present indications seem to point to quite as high prices as last year.

GREEN FRUIT.

California oranges are about out of the market owing to the high prices. The stock at present on the market are Messinas, which sell at $6. The principal fruits moving at the present are apples and grapes. Grapes are quoted this week at 30c per basket, and this will be the lowest point of the season. Grapes have come forward in very good shape. Apples are $3.50 per barrel, and so far are coming forward in fair shape, but nothing to brag of. Bananas have advanced to $4 per bunch.

HONEY.

Honey is very plentiful, dealers declaring that not for years have they been so flooded with offers of stock. There has been a large amount offering from Manitoba, and simply countless offers from Ontario. There appears to have been a tremendous crop all over Canada. The Western market can only be considered as fair for honey, the demand growing a little each year, but not very rapidly.

FIBRE WARE.

The new list showing the reduction in fibre ware is now out. Fibre pails, $2.25 per doz.; No. 0 tubs, $14.70 per doz; No. 1, $12.80; No. 2, $10.90; No. 3, $9. Nests of 1, 2 and 3, $2.75 per nest.

FLOUR.

There is a good deal of interest in flour at the present time, owing to the large orders placed by Japan with California milling firms for flour. The Osaka exhibition has opened the eyes of Japan to the merits of Canadian flour, and there is prospect of greatly increased trade. It is known here that some of the big milling firms have been approached in the matter of large exporting orders for Japan, but just at present there is nothing for publication. The western millers have for some years been exporting to Japan, but the prospect of war would seem to indicate a possible immediate development of the trade.

The local prices have remained without change at $2.35 for patent, but if the price of wheat continues to advance there will likely be an advance in flour.

DAIRY PRODUCE.

Creameries are practically all closed with the exception of those in the city, and prices for creamery butter from this time on will be the jobber's price to the retailer, which is 20c. to 22c. per lb, according to size of package.

Dairy butter continues to arrive in small quantities and there are no really large stocks in store; in fact, it is not often that butter has been so well cleaned up early in the season. The indications point to high prices this Winter. At present jobbers quote 18 to 18½c. for fresh tubs.

Cheese—Prices are very firm, being 13½ to 14c. for Manitoba and 14 to 14½c. for Ontario.

Eggs—Jobbers quote, 25c. per doz. for strictly fresh selected stock; 23c. doz. for freshly candled stock, and 22c. for pickled or glycerined stock.

CURED MEATS.

Market is active and firm for all lines of cured meats, and prices are as follows: Hams, sugar cured, 15½c.; bacon bellies, 13c.; breakfast bacon, backs, 12½c.; shoulders, 9c.; spiced roll, 11¾c.; dry salt long clear, 11¾c.; smoked long clear, 12c.; dry salt shoulders, 9½c.; boneless backs, 12c.; pure lard, in 20-lb. pails, $2; 40-lb. pails, $5.20; 3-lb. tins in cases, $6.60; 5-lb. tins, $6.55; 10-lb. tins, $6.45; compound lard in 20-lb. pails, $1.75; barrel pork, heavy mess, $20.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, B.C., Oct. 17, 1903.

ADVICES received at the head offices of The White Pass & Yukon Co., here from White Horse this week announce that between October 6 and 9 there had been 600 tons of Dawson freight moved from that port down the Yukon. At the latter date there still lay at the warehouses of the company at the head of navigation over 2,500 tons of merchandise, mainly consisting of provisions, fodder for the great number of horses in the Yukon and a small proportion of Winter dry goods.

At the time of the report the water in the Yukon was 48 inches above minimum low water, but continued freezing on the upper waters was rapidly reducing the flow so that an early cessation was then expected. No subsequent report by wire has been received this week, though it was confidently anticipated that the closing of navigation would be complete this week. The fact that such great quantities of food supplies still remain to be forwarded may have a very serious effect on the market quotations of certain staple lines in the northern camp during the Winter season. The White Pass Co. has already sent in 75 head of horses for the Winter stage route operated during the Winter. Only small quantities of freight are transported by team during the Winter owing to the very high cost, made almost prohibitive by the price of horse keep in the north, especially in the Winter months. Small shipments of fresh Christmas goods are sent in, mostly fruits, fresh eggs, dressed poultry and similar lines, all in the nature of luxuries.

New season's raisins from California are beginning to arrive, a carload having been received by one wholesale house this week. It is a peculiar feature of the raisin situation here, or rather in California, from whence practically all the supplies for this market come, that with a very heavy yield and increased total production this year the market is opening high and strong, with every likelihood of going higher.

The explanation offered is that The California Raisin Growers' Association, a strong combination, last year found their entire production sold up very early. This year, with increased output, the demand is also very materially increased so that to guard against the same result, and also to make the most of the strong position they find themselves in, the California Raisin Growers' Association is putting up the price to a stiff figure to begin with.

Thus, while supplies are plentiful and more able to meet the demand than last year the prices paid are over 1c. higher for opening quotations than last year's crop commanded. Another factor is that large contracts were made by many wine houses in California with the vineyardists for fresh grapes, so that a large portion of the crop which might have been turned into raisins never reached the driers, but was sold direct to the wine presses.

The British Columbia wholesalers are able to handle the California raisins much lower than they would the eastern article, and with the exception of Smyrna sultanas the quantity of eastern raisins imported to this market is very limited. Of course, fine layers and fancy cluster stock is all from the east, that being a specialty the California packers have not yet attained success in. Indeed the Valencias they put up are not at all the equal of the eastern fruit.

The quotations by the wholesale trade here to the retail trade open at from 10¼ to 10½c. per 1-lb. carton, fancy. Other grades follow.

New California figs are also among the arrivals noted in the market this week. They are high in price too, though as in the raisins, the crop in California is large this year. The California output of all lines of dried fruits is very extensive, the shorter haul from that state to the states of the west and middle west giving an advantage over eastern stocks which have first to be shipped into the country, paying duty, and then to stand a longer rail haul.

Figs produced in California show a distinct improvement this year. The packers are apparently gaining in experience and improving their methods of handling them. It is but a few years since the fig industry began to assume proportions in California products, but the advance and expansion has since been very rapid. All lines are put up, and both black and white cooking varieties are shipped. The layers in cartons and boxes are very good in comparison with eastern growth. Where the shipments of cooking varieties come from the east in mats, the California shippers pack them in boxes similar to other dried fruits.

While there is not yet much movement in new season's dried fruits from California the shipments received so far are at advanced prices over last season's opening quotations. Apricots are this year especially high. In evaporated apples the quotations so far received show that the eastern or Ontario fruit is likely to supply this market this year to the exclusion of the California, which is the reverse of last year's quotations.

So far as quotations from the east have been received, it is expected that it will be possible for the wholesale houses to lay their stocks down here from Ontario, freight added, at 6½c., which will enable them to undersell present California quotations, and from the position of the market it is likely that California prices will go still higher.

In canned goods the situation is still unchanged. There are now considerable quantities on order and a good deal of stock moving, some here and more to arrive. It is stated that the big combine has not been able to keep its lines all open. Quotations are still withdrawn on tomatoes and beans, and other orders have not been filled, but left open pending close of the pack.

NEW HOUSE FOR CALGARY.

E. Nicholson, wholesale commission merchant and broker, Winnipeg, is establishing a branch of his business in Calgary to supply the Western and British Columbia jobbing trade. The branch will be opened on the first of the year.

OTTAWA TRADE GOSSIP.

OTTAWA, October 21.

BUSINESS among retailers has been very good. All the leading stores report a good Fall trade, while the wholesalers are extra busy. A sure sign of good times has been the advance in price of almost all lines of groceries. Speaking with a prominent wholesaler to-day, he said: "Almost anybody is a good buyer on a rising market. While we all think we are good buyers, the best buyer is usually the man who buys as he requires; but the fortunate man this year is the big buyer—who took chances in the first place." He instanced salmon, raisins, molasses, canned goods. Almost all staple lines except sugars are high and firm in price. Sugars are as last week, $4.12 for granulated in bags, $4.17 in barrels; yellows, $3 47 and $3.52. Canned goods are very firm, although weather conditions last week made prospects brighter; they are still firm this week.

Molasses is now worth 43 to 45c., and likely to go higher.

Shelled nuts are being picked up briskly this week by retailers for future requirements. Shelled almonds are worth 25c.; shelled walnuts, 27½ to 30c.

At the Fruit Exchange receipts of grapes have been larger and prices have eased off, Concords selling at 20 to 22c., Niagaras 18½ to 20½c., Rogers 22 to 28c.

At the Ottawa Cheese Board on Friday last prices of cheese advanced ½c. above the previous week, and an unusually large number of sales were made. As high as 11 3-16c. and 11¼c. in a couple of instances was paid. About 500 boxes were not sold, with the hope that a better figure would be realized. About 1,900 boxes were boarded.

An advance is looked for in the price of brooms.

The butter market is very firm at present. Good dairy is hard to get and creamery is in good demand. Prices are: For creamery in blocks, 23c.; creamery in bulk, 21c.; choice dairy, 19c.; good dairy, 18c.; round lots, 16 to 17½c.

NOTES.

P. D. Herbert, of Bank street, has removed into his new store in the old O'Connor block. The store is fitted up with the latest modern fittings, and is a great credit to Bank street. All success to Mr. Herbert in his new venture.

The F. J. Castle Co. are receiving many enquiries for their new breakfast food "Wee MacGregor," which they hope to soon have on the market. Mr. Castle says it takes longer than one thinks to get a new thing started, but they want to give it a good start when it appears, hence some necessary delay.

G. W. Shouldis is chairman and manager, H. C. Ellis secretary, of the party leaving for New York on the 27th. It is likely they will style themselves the "Canuck Tourists."

H. N. Bate & Sons are doing such a trade this year that they have been compelled to enlarge their already long warehouse by adding three additional storeys which are almost completed.

Messrs. Provost & Allard are delivering canned tomatoes to the trade this week. They report having a great many orders on hand.

Mr. Sterling, of T. A. Lytle & Co., Toronto, is in this city looking alter Fall orders, as is also Archie Rankin, representing S. H. & A. S. Ewing & Sons, Montreal.

A CUSTOMER FOR THIRTY-EIGHT REARS

Messrs. Balfour & Co., Hamilton, had a call last week from one of their very oldest customers in the person of John Waddell, of Harriston, who has dealt with this firm continuously for thirty-eight years, and has always paid one hundred cents on the dollar. While Mr. Waddell is one of the oldest customers of Messrs. Balfour & Co., he is also one of the oldest subscribers of THE CANADIAN GROCER.

The retail merchants of Fort William, Ontario, have organized an association. W. F. Hogarth is president, John King vice-president and J. Edgar Rutledge, P.O. Box 175, is secretary-treasurer.

Cocoa-Its Growth and Manufacture.

A Cocoa Estate in Trinidad.

By a Trinidad Planter.

THE cocoa tree (theobroma cacao) is a native of Central and South America, and species of it are said to have been found growing wild in one or two of the West Indian Islands. When left to itself the tree will reach a height of twenty or thirty feet. It sends out small flowers in bunches, and from each bunch a pod is formed.

The plant is grown from seeds which germinate readily, and are sown in beds or bamboo pots in nurseries. When the little plants are about a foot high they are planted out in the fields at distances of from ten to eighteen feet each way. The young plants are shaded by the banana (musa sapientum), plantain (musa paradisiaca), cassava (manihot utilissima), and other quick growing plants and by the immortelle or "cocoa mother" (erythrina umbrosa), seldom by any other trees, when they are big.

The trees begin to bear at the age of three years, but are not in full bearing until from seven to ten years. During this time they need much care.

The crops are gathered at two different times, Easter and Christmas.

The pods are cut from the trees with a cocoa knife, which has a chisel on the top and a crescent-shaped blade on the side, the latter sharpened on the under edge. After being cut off the tree the pods are broken, under the trees, by negroes and indians, and the beans taken out and brought to the sweating house.

The beans are sweated, or fermented, by placing them in an air-tight room or in boxes and leaving them for three days. Then they are turned and left for another three days, after which they are sunned; for one or two hours for the first day, increasing the length of time in the sun each day, until they are properly dried. When they are dried they are sometimes washed and sometimes clayed, which makes them bring a better price.

Gathering and Breaking Cocoa Pods.

On most estates barbecues are used. These are simply large trays and roofs with rollers on lines, the roof being rolled off for sunning and on again at night.

When the beans are dried they are put into bags and sent to the English markets, where they are sold to the makers of the different brands of cocoa and chocolate.

There is great fun to be had on cocoa estates by hunting agoutis. These little animals do much damage to the pods borne near the ground and to fruit. Deer and 'possums also do damage and afford a certain amount of sport.

Each estate is in charge of a manager, who is assisted by one or two overseers, according to the size of the plantation. The number of laborers varies from 80 to 200, and it is to these people that we are indebted for our much relished chocolate.

The Manufacture of Cocoa.

After the cocoa beans leave the plantation they have still to undergo a series of rigorous ordeals before finding their way into consumption as delicious breakfast cocoa or one of the many toothsome chocolate confections.

The first process through which the bean must pass in its manufacture is that of roasting. The beans are placed in a revolving cylinder over a furnace and are thoroughly roasted in a manner quite similar to the method employed in roasting coffee. In fact a coffee roaster is quite suitable for roasting cocoa.

The beans come out of the roaster dry and crisp and ready for the second operation. In this they are fed into a mill which cracks the bean into coarse pieces called nibs, while at the same time the light thin enveloping hull is blown off by a rapidly revolving fan.

The cocoa nibs, of a dull brownish color, reduced to about the size of field peas and from every appearance dry as dust, are now ready for the triple grinding mill. In passing through this mill they are subjected to great pressure and the oils in which cocoa is extremely rich are liberated. So great is the proportion of oil in the cocoa that the dry nibs which enter the upper orifice of the mill flow quite freely from the lower as a chocolate-colored oily liquid.

At this stage is prepared the cocoa butter of commerce. The chocolate colored oily liquid above referred to is put in a press and gradually subjected to great pressure. A clear oil exudes from the press which on cooling is known as cocoa butter.

The residue, a hard, dry cake from which the excessive oil has been removed, is now ready to be converted into breakfast cocoa. To this end it is passed through a mill consisting of a series of rolls and reduced to a fine flour. When this flour has been bolted, on adding the sugar to the cocoa the mixture is passed through a series of rolling mills which reduce the sugar to the finest powder and thoroughly incorporates it with the cocoa.

When the cocoa butter is added, together with any flavoring materials desired, and the whole again given a thorough mixing and grinding in a system of melangers, the chocolate is ready either to be moulded into cakes or be used as coverings for creams. On being placed in the moulds the chocolate is sent to a cooling room to set and from thence to the packing room where it is done up in tin foil and packed in cases for shipment.

Cocoa and chocolate are steadily growing in use in Canada. In the last fiscal year our importations of unroasted cocoa were, from

	Quantity. lbs.	Value. $
Great Britain	172 571	26,789
United States	594,709	83,548
British West Indies	439 895	54 670
Other Countries	94 117	16,244
	1,301,292	181,251

At the same time our importations of cocoa paste, chocolate paste and other preparations of cocoa were from

	Quantity. lb.	Value. $
Great Britain	900,036	168,758
United States	736,301	173 210
Other Countries	134 582	29,121
	1,770,919	371,089

A large part included in this latter table, however, is cocoa butter and partially manufactured cocoa which is worked up in Canada. Our own manufacturers therefore supply about half our consumption of cocoa and chocolate.

Canadian manufacturers, of whom The Cowan Cocoa Co., of Toronto, and Martin & Co., Halifax, are the largest, get their beans from a wide range of territory, including Jamaica, Trinidad, Ceylon, Venezuela and West Africa. By far the greatest part, however, comes from the West Indies, either directly via Halifax or through New York.

Compared with the people of Great Britain Canadians are not large consumers of cocoa, but doubtless this delicious and healthful beverage will become more and more popular with us in the future.

PERSONAL MENTION.

A visitor to the Montreal trade this week is Mr. Ed. Sterling, "Ted,"—known from Newfoundland to Victoria as a hard man to beat as a salesman. "Teddy" is out for Lytle, the pickle, jam and catsup man, of Toronto, and the only complaint that he has to make is that his house can't turn out the goods fast enough—for him—for "you know we have the quality. By the way, I see 'The Grocer' all over and I am always on the look out for it." Mr. Sterling is on his way to the Maritime Provinces.

Messrs. D. Bremner and C. W. Gregory, representatives of Snowdon, Forbes & Co., Montreal, manufacturers of "Bee" starch, in Western and Eastern Ontario, were visiting that city this week. Both report successful trips and flattering testimonials as to the quality and popularity of their goods.

Mr. Tyas, Canadian representative of John Dwight & Co., New York—Dwight's "Cow Brand" Soda—is a visitor to the Montreal jobbing trade this week.

Macleay, Duff & Co., distillers, 41 Renfrew street, Glasgow, have despatched their representative, Mr. H. Newkamp, to Canada to assist their agents in thoroughly establishing and developing the business throughout the Dominion. He will also visit the United States, Japan, China, etc. This firm's whiskies have been very successful in Australia, and they now intend to push their trade where agents have been but recently appointed or where as yet the firm is unrepresented. Mr. B. O. Beland, 26 Lemoine street, Montreal, is their Canadian agent. Mr. Newkamp also represents the firms, United Vineyards Proprietary Co., cognac, and Theophile Roederer & Co., champagne.

H. W. Nigh, of Springfield, Elgin County, has disposed of his grocery and confectionery business to John Drury.

Mr. W. H. Halford, representing S. H. Ewing & Sons, Montreal, representatives of Jardine, Mathewson & Co., and Mr. Lowdon, of the New York branch of this latter firm, are making a trip through the West in the interests of Japan and China green teas. Toronto, Hamilton, London, Brantford and Ottawa will be taken in on the trip.

APPLE EXPORT REPORT.

The following comparative summary of the quantity of apples exported from American ports for the week and season ending October 17 has been given out by Mr. Fred Barker, apple exporter, Church street, Toronto:

Apples exported week ending October 17, 1903:

LIVERPOOL MARKETS.

The following cable has been received by Mr. Barker from Liverpool in regard to the apple market of Tuesday, 20th inst.:

"Good demand: Baldwins, 12s. 6d. to 19s.; Greenings, 14s. to 17s.; Kings, 17s. to 22s. 6d.; Snows arriving in large quantities, 10s. 6d. to 15s."

In regard to these quotations it must always be remembered that they refer to apples arriving in first-class condition. Lower grades are generally from 4 to 6s. off these prices.

W. P. Downey, 26 St. Peter street, Montreal, reports arrival into store of very fine imported citron, lemon and orange peels, in 7-lb. boxes, also drained peels in 10-lb. drums—Roedenbeck & Wahl's—at most attractive prices.

Canadian Trade Openings in The Orient

Interesting Letter from a Canadian Business Man on a trip to Japan and China.

THE following very interesting letter, written by an old subscriber to "The Canadian Grocer," now on a business trip to China and Japan, was not intended for publication, but we take the liberty of using it without permission. It contains so much good matter for Canadian business men, that we think Mr. Tufts will forgive the liberty we take.

As a result of Mr. Tufts' suggestion "The Canadian Grocer" has taken steps to increase still further its circulation among probable buyers of Canadian goods in China and Japan:

Shanghai Club,
Shanghai, Sept. 19, 1903.

Colonel J. B. MacLean,
"The Canadian Grocer,"

Dear Sir:—Having spent the last eight months or so in Japan and China in the interests of Canadian products and manufacturers, it has occurred to me that one factor of value to our exporters would be an export issue of your paper for distribution in China and Japan.

From press comments in Japan you know how favorably our exhibit there impressed the people of that empire.

FOLLOW UP OSAKA.

Don't you think the expenditure of the Canadian Government should be followed up with an aggressive selling or advertising effort?

During the Osaka Exhibition I persistently worked the wholesale trade in the interests of Canadian manufacturers and millers, whom I represented, with very satisfactory results in such lines as our good people at home are "right" on for Oriental export business. Since the close of the Osaka Exhibition I've been visiting the chief cities and seaports in China, and believe we have here another excellent field for export trade.

Of course not every line of Canadian manufactures will sell in Japan or China, but we have many things each country will buy, and those lines require two things persistently undertaken, viz.: proper representation and adequate advertising. Local representation by European firms may be obtained in these countries through the medium of advertising in such representative trade papers as yours.

WHY NOT CANADA?

England, Germany and the United States obtain many orders for goods which Canada could as well, or in some instances better, supply if her manufactures were known to the personnel of the import houses here. Only yesterday an English trade paper (The Commercial Intelligence of London) arrived in the office of a large local import house, with whose manager I had been spending a week, off and on, trying to put in a certain Canadian line. I had done all I could apparently to close the deal but it still hung in the balance. Having an opportunity to glance at the trade papers received that morning by the manager my eye caught a head line with Canada in it. I read it with interest; it was a repetition of some of my arguments for the line in question, written by a correspondent in the far East for the London trade paper, who had been at the Osaka Exhibition last May. I pointed out the article to the manager, who asked me if I knew the writer. I replied that the article not being signed and in a paper I had never seen before, I could not say whether or no, but his information exactly confirmed my representations, even to figures. The manager went to the "topside" (upstairs) office, where he evidently conferred with his "taipan" (principal) and returning said, "Mr. Tufts, that deal has been put through; the Chinese firm will take one-half, and our firm one-half; the former would do nothing without us, and we feel sure it's all right. I'll wire your firm a credit of $14,000 gold at once, and you may cable 'we accept.'"

A further article on Canadian butter, in the same trade paper (for you may be sure I read through the batch) assisted me in completing a contract for $13,000 gold of choice creamery in tins. The articles in question I am having reproduced in a local paper for the benefit of my customers and Canadian products.

VALUE OF THE TRADE PAPER.

A salesman may "talk up" his wares ever so eloquently, make his "points" with the shrewdness of a criminal lawyer, and yet not get a verdict in his favor without the corroborative testimony of an article in a trade paper. Firms here subscribe for trade journals for the sake of the information they contain, not to wrap up parcels in, nor to fill a wire basket with.

Canada has the goods, her manufacturers have the information and you have the medium of circulation.

Its up to whom?

I'll help you all I can when I get home. But don't wait for me; there's cholera, plague, uncleaned ice-chests on the steamers, typhoons and seasickness to be dodged. If I had not been brought up on oatmeal porridge in Ontario my constitution couldn't stand it.

COLD STORAGE PROSPECTS.

There is another point I believe might interest Canadians. We have no adequate cold storage as yet on C.P.R. steamers for fresh butter, fruits and cheese. The cheese, as yet, goes largely to European trade and that's a bagatelle, because jar cheese is very expensive in comparison, so we are, in a great measure, handicapped in above lines, but the C.P.R. know a thing or two through Messrs. D. E. Brown at Hong Kong and Mr. Payne at Yokohama, and there will be "something doing" before long. But what's the matter with the nurserymen in Canada? If we can't get fresh fruit in here for a while we can send them the trees and the bushes and make a little on the business. They certainly have the soil and the climate in northern China. At Chefoo, China, the late Rev. Nevis brought in a lot of fruit trees some years ago. His wife has a magnificent orchard and a very nice revenue from it now. If you don't know how to touch the market here, start a "mail order" business with the missionaries; they are good people, and keen on making a little money. Goodness knows they need it when they live in this country. When I was up at Canton a few days ago a German missionary and his little family going up the river in a house-boat were attacked by twenty pirates. No lives were lost, but nearly all were wounded, and the plucky missionary with one shotgun saved his little ones and wife. His boatman went down at the first shot.

In Japan we estimated a fresh apple from Canada would cost about 15 sen, or 7½ gold cents, which is too much to expect the Japanese to pay. It gives fruit a golden taste, to be sure. But the country will grow our fruits very well. I'm advised, though, in a few years the fruit will deteriorate in size and quality.

ICE PLANTS AND MILCH COWS.

Small ice-making plants and portable sawmill machinery will be all right in China. At the European hotels in China you would think ice came in envelopes from London, Eng., if you tried to get any. It's monopolized, and so is distilled water. One man in Hong Kong who has been there 20 years told me he had not tasted fresh water for 10 years. But then I believe he takes Scotch and soda. A dairyman in Hong Kong wanted milch cows from me the other day. I told him I was "just out" but would have a carload shortly if he was interested. Of course he'll get them, from Canada too, after this, though I had to write to my partner about it. I heard he had a bigger demand for cream than he could supply with his 300 head of cattle, so I recommended white milk cows for the cream. I remembered my old aunt at

Fall and Winter Trade-What are you doing about it?

—just letting it take care of itself, or are you getting busy and telling grocers where to find what they want, and showing them that they want what you have?

Others are doing this in all sorts of ways—principally through advertising in THE CANADIAN GROCER. This is certainly the best and quickest—also the surest—way to reach all of the grocers and general storekeepers throughout the Dominion.

Here you have a large audience made up entirely of all the grocers worth while in Canada, who are constantly on the lookout for opportunities to buy to better advantage. They look through THE GROCER every week for the opportunities, and GROCER advertisers benefit.

Our Department of Advertising Service helps advertisers in THE GROCER to get the greatest possible results out of their expenditure by rendering expert assistance in the preparation of effective advertising copy. This service is rendered free of charge to those who desire it.

The Canadian Grocer,

232 McGill St., MONTREAL.

10 Front St. East, TORONTO.

St. Marys told me white cows gave the cream and the red ones the milk. He bought from me five cars of Canadian bran and barley as a starter; for having broken the Chinese dairymen with his sterilizing process and delightfully clean stables, which are cement paved and washed and scrubbed twice daily, he was afraid to buy "cow-chow" locally, having twice lost his stock by the introduction of something in the bran he bought there from "wiley John."

COMMISSIONER'S REPORT.

Manufacturers interested in Japan export trade will find valuable information in Mr. Wm. Burns' commissioner's report re Osaka Exhibition, issued by the Canadian Department of Agriculture. 'I haven't seen it, but I know personally the men who compiled it. We were all "home-sick" together. Mr. Burns in his zeal for Canadian products caused three thousand cases of stomach-ache in as many school children, with his distribution of fresh buns and jam, bread and maple syrup, red apples and buttered cakes, which the little kimono-clad kids had never tasted before. But the commissioner is a large hearted man, and a bachelor, so he didn't know it was loaded.

Properly speaking, my business is the tea trade, as you know, but I won't start on that, for you are too far away to call me off, as my customers used to do, by asking me to dinner. I'll tell some of them later where they can get the finest kind of blending material for their package teas.

THINGS WE CAN SELL.

There are many things we can sell over here, and many more we can buy. The old China is opening up. Railways are building and foreign firms pushing European lines aggressively. American products too are well represented. But the best country in the world, in your mind and mine, is very busy elsewhere.

We have a grand immigration policy, a "No. 1" Minister of Agriculture, and a good bunch of bright, brainy travelling men in Canada, but it's grieved me extremely that I've not recommended a certificate of membership for a "new man on the road" this trip. For the simple reason I haven't seen another Canadian traveller in the Orient, except insurance men, but then the association doesn't admit them, unless they have a side line of cigars. But I'm proud of the insurance men, they are "winners."

The Sun Life and the Manufacturers Life Insurance companies are doing a fine business both in Japan and China. I know it, both because the foreign (English) firms tell me so, and I see their agents each with two pushers behind their jinrickshaws in Japan; 1 chair coolies in Hong Kong, and here in the model settlement they have their own carriages; two ponies, two liveried-pig-tailed mafoos, one to drive, the other to brush off the flies, and they lend me their outfits sometimes, which indicates prosperity, for a pony landau costs ten Mexican dollars a day.

FLOUR FOR CHINA.

I trust the Hon. Mr. Fisher, Minister af Agriculture, will see well to send over a bakers' demonstration to China. I've been in nearly all the important seaports and some of the interior cities, and I know the difficulties of introducing the best of goods here. John Chinaman says, "No savee new fashion thing, old fashion alle same maskee." Practical demonstrations of our flour, etc., are needed if we are to get a foreign market for our high grade and high priced products.

The best salesmen know the value of an introduction to a merchant, by one whom the merchant has confidence in. Through your trade journals inform the foreign importer of our wares, make him well acquainted with Canada, her big firms and their honorable, business policy, let them know we have a live Government, anxious to exploit the products she is encouraging British immigrants to come and grow.

It is not how large a price we can get for our wares but how cheaply we can sell them that should govern export trade seekers. By largely producing we can sell in competition with the world.

CHINA'S POSSIBILITIES

China is possibly the cheap price country of the world. The factories of the world fill ships with some of nearly everything human skill can devise for China. Every year is more needed. If you don't think so look at the map of Asia, of which as yet trade has been confined to only a few hundred miles back of her seaboard. I've seen fire extinguishers and a brand of coal oil advertised in English and Chinese on the roof of a five-storey pagoda 400 years old and the residence of an emperor at one time. These articles were selling in Canton too. They were not Canadian products. Before I left that "sky-scraper" there were a few Canadian lines advertised there. I don't sell them all, but that doesn't matter, some lad now going to school in Toronto may see his goods advertised when he comes over here on his first trip and be thankful for the introduction and "good words" of a stranger he has never seen, when he "makes a sale." I remember the English trade paper writer in my prayers.

Yours with best wishes,

ANDREW R. TUFTS.

Cured and Packed
Where Caught!

"Thistle" Brand Canned Fish.

One reason why the "Thistle" Brand of Canned Haddies, Kippered Herrings, etc., retain the rich, delicate flavor of the freshly-caught fish is because they are cured and packed right at the water side where they are caught.

There is no dirt, no slime in the "Thistle" Brand to spoil the natural flavor. There are no "odds and ends" thrown in in a hurry. The "Thistle" Brand contains nothing but carefully-selected fish—only the best will do for the "Thistle" Brand!

The cost per tin, or can, to clean, cure and pack the "Thistle" Brand is without doubt greater than the cost involved in marketing any other Brand in the country, yet the high quality has been steadily maintained from year to year even in the face of strong competition. The "Thistle" Brand competes on quality and not on price. It is the Standard Brand of Canned Fish!

Highest Quality Always.

AND NOT OVER YOUR BULK GOODS?

Why do some merchants employ a cashier, buy a Cash Register and a Safe to protect their cash, and then refuse to guard the bins and barrels that hold this money in another form? Just realize this. Your bulk goods were cash yesterday, and will be to-morrow. Your success depends on the difference between these two amounts, and you need protection right at this point. LIPTON'S TEAS have without doubt to-day THE LARGEST SALE IN THE WORLD. They are the only teas in Canada and the United States that are sold in HERMETICALLY-SEALED, AIRTIGHT CANS. This insures the tea retaining its excellent flavor and the delicious aroma with which they have so long been associated. This is the only hygienic and healthful way of packing tea and is far superior to teas packed in lead packages.

LIPTON'S TEAS are the only teas in Canada that are shipped by the seller DIRECT FROM THE GARDENS, which means there is more profit in it for the grocer. No up to-date grocer can be without them to-day.

Subjects Discussed at Ottawa

Written for The Canadian Grocer by a Member of Parliament

SINCE our last report from Ottawa there has been no lack of interesting matter before the House and the country. We have heard discussions of more or less merit on the general policy of granting railway subsidies, on the decision of the Alaskan Boundary Tribunal, on the fast Atlantic service,—all matters of large importance to Canada,—and on the sending out of campaign literature in large quantities under the frank of certain members of the House, by which it is alleged the Conservative members have blocked the corridors of Parliament with mail-bags, the last a matter purely political in the party sense, a cause of considerable irritation to the extreme party men, but of absolutely no importance to the Dominion at large.

Probably no matter is of greater interest to the commerce of Canada than this same fast line across the Atlantic, and, as this is a trade paper, it will not be unfitting to discuss the matter shortly.

The debate was brought on by a motion of Mr. Borden, worded as follows: "This House affirms its belief that great advantages would result to Canada as well as to the Mother Country from the establishment of a fast steamship service between the two countries, and expresses its regret that no effective steps have been taken for that purpose by the present administration."

Of course, the sting from the party standpoint lay in the tail, which made the motion one of non-confidence. With the assertion that a fast line would be a great advantage to both countries, there was no fault found, but naturally the question arose how much would the advantage be worth? or how much would the Government be justified in offering by way of subsidy to produce the desired result? Mr. Borden brought out some interesting and surprising facts. He noted that away back in 1840 the Unicorn made the voyage from Liverpool to Halifax in 16 days, which was complained of as being three or four days too long. In other words the time for the voyage some 63 years ago was normally about 12 days, and the Mongolian, the first weekly boat to arrive in Halifax this season, took something over 11 days to cross. This means that while the time to New York has practically been cut in two since 1840, the time to Halifax is very little bettered. Naturally this is a very unsatisfactory state of affairs for any progressive Canadian to contemplate. Mr. Borden asserted that had the Government when it came into power in 1896 accepted the tender of the Allans made to the Government of Sir Charles Tupper but a few months before, and still open, the problem would have been solved, and by this time an immense development in passenger and freight traffic through Canadian channels would have taken place. As it was, the new Liberal Government refused the tender of the Allan Line to do the work on a yearly subsidy of $750,000, and made a bargain with Tate, Peterson & Co. for $500,000 per year, which bargain was never carried out, though the making of it was heralded by the Liberal leaders as a wonderful achievement, and an example of what thrifty business methods could accomplish.

Now the Allans want $1,500,000 for a suitable fast service, whereas had the Government accepted their original offer the matter would have been satisfactorily closed out for half that sum. Mr. Borden said emphatically that in his opinion we could well afford to pay $750,000 or $800,000, or even more for a suitable fast service across the Atlantic.

In replying, Sir Wilfrid claimed that the Allan offer of 1896 was so hedged about with provisoes and conditions that it was not a satisfactory one, even had the price been considerably lower than it was. He stated further that of the seven years which the leader of the Opposition claimed had been passed in idleness, so far as accomplishing this end was concerned, three had been years during which the Boer War had so upset the shipping resources of the Empire that no arrangement could possibly have been reached, that the first year or two after the rejection of the Allan offer was passed in the full expectation that Tate, Peterson & Co. would carry out their bargain, and that the remaining two years unaccounted for had witnessed efforts on the part of the Government to make a fair bargain towards the desired end. He charged the Leader of the Opposition with making constant attacks on the Government for large expenditure, and then charging them with spending too little in this particular matter. He agreed with Mr. Borden as to the importance of the service, but thought a yearly subsidy of $1,500,000 rather more than Canada could afford to pay for the benefits which would accrue.

Both speeches were interesting and business-like, but they soon sank into insignificance before the fervid oratory of the man from Colchester, Mr. Gourlay. We have on previous occasion, quoted this gentleman at length, and called the attention of our readers to his extremely odd personality. No one can read or hear his speeches, replete with good literary and historical references, couched in most excellent English, and brim-full of originality, without being convinced that he is a man of no ordinary ability and attainments, and at the same time one is filled with regret that so much which is really admirable should be marred by an extravagance of statement that utterly destroys all that might otherwise be so useful, and leaves his hearers wondering what manner of man is this. Mr. Gourlay is essentially a "Big Canada" man. He has no patience for the fellow who spends his time on the little affairs of the country, and never loses an occasion to score him unmercifully. It is not surprising, then, that the fast Atlantic service took firm hold of his imagination and generated even greater than ordinary enthusiasm. "What has expense got to do with such a truly national work as this?" asks Mr. Gourlay. "This House spends too much time in discussing a $5,000 expenditure on some wharf or other, spends weeks in discussing binder twine, and such like parish politics, but here we have a great Canadian matter upon which we can properly spend time in discussion and money in expenditure. We must have a service not equally fast with the best from New York, but faster by a knot or two an hour. We must take from that great city the traffic which it has attracted to itself, and this we can only do by going it one better." He proceeds, "Let us spend $5,000,000 if necessary. Why, you are giving subsidies to railways, half of which no doubt will be stolen. I have no doubt that enough will be stolen out of railway subsidies given this year to give $5,000,000 to a fast Atlantic service. I have no interest in this mean economy. The people do not mind expending money. All we ask is for you to keep it out of the hands of the boodlers. If it is spent honestly let it pour out in a stream." Further on Mr. Gourlay warmly asserted that the man who would try to introduce politics into such a question as this would want his mother-in-law's funeral conducted on political lines. "I want to see this country great," said the Colchester representative, "I do not want to go down to the grave with this country little greater than it was when it came from the Indians."

There can be no doubt but that the Alaskan Award has held the centre of the stage here for the past few days. Nothing so rouses national sentiment as a question in which the proprietorship of territory is in question, and since there is a general feeling among Canadians that we have suffered much in boundary matters with the United States in time past, that our easy access to one seaboard was taken ruthlessly from us, feeling has been at high tension awaiting the decision of the arbitrators in London.

With the purport of that award we shall have nothing to say, space forbids, and besides every daily paper is going exhaustively into the matter, but our readers will be interested to learn something of the sentiments of their representatives here. No names, of course, will be mentioned. It is the gossip, using that word in rather a serious sense, that we propose to retail.

So far, then, the feeling may fairly be summed up as one of very great dissatisfaction, dissatisfaction manifesting itself in straight talk of Canadian independence on the part of a few of the more fiery, but generally confined to more moderate comment. What the members seem to go on most is their acquaintance with the characters of Jette and Aylesworth. Both are considered not only very eminent jurists, but men of extreme modera tion, and their openly expressed annoyance at the result has produced a profound impression here.

There are still a few very moderate gentlemen who maintain that Lord Alverstone is a man of too great integrity to deliberately sacrifice our rights, but frankness compels the writer to admit that his apologists are few in number and not very prominent in the political world here.

It is said too, that the complications in the far East, where Japan and Russia are all but at one another's throats, and where England might be involved in case of actual hostilities not only because of her alliance with Japan, but also because she could not well permit Russia to close the door in large sections of the Chinese Empire, have made it politically necessary for Britain to retain the friendship of the United States, even at the cost of sacrificing Canadian territory. This is certainly not a very pleasant view-point from the Canadian side. But after all has not Canada more to gain from the open door in the East than has even Britain herself? What is fifty years in the life of a nation? And yet it is pretty safe to say that in that time Canada, a Pacific coast country, will be doing far more trade in the East than will Britain herself. We feel that even with Britain and Japan in alliance, Russia might be able to tighten and extend her hold on the Chinese Empire, and if she once gets possession she will so entrench herself that no combination of powers would undertake to turn her out. But given the United States standing with Britain and Japan, and even the Bear would think twice before taking another mouthful of tempting territory. We want the trade of the East. We are much nearer than the United States to its great centres, but we must have access to it, we must not be shut out by the impassible tariff walls of some great power. We have lost, let us admit for the sake of argument at least, a small amount of our vast territory. Let us prepare to get back more than an equivalent by outdoing our American neighbors in capturing the trade of the Orient. With our Northwest filled with settlers, with railway and steamship facilities of the best, there is no reason why the future of this enormous to-be-developed commerce should not be ours in larger measure than will be that of any other country. Let us cease repining. A dangerous incident is closed, let us like true men gird up our loins for the magnificent struggle for commercial supremacy in which the future seems to hold out to us a fair chance of victory.

Railway subsidies have been voted in generous measure for some days past. This is a subject that always rouses plenty of talk and little of voting. Sundry gentlemen always announce themselves as opposed to the granting of any subsidy to a line to be constructed through a well-settled country already fairly well served with a road, and then these same gentlemen sit quietly by while the voting to which they have objected goes through. There is much to be said both for and against these subsidies, but this is not the place to say it. In a nut-shell we might almost say that those who have already got plenty of railway facilities are strongly opposed to the granting of further subsidies for railway construction, while those who have no accommodation cry out for them. After all, communities are pretty much like individuals, and selfishness largely dictates a man's political propaganda.

According to Prof. Langworthy's article on "Fish as Food," the total weight of the annual catch in American waters, both salt and fresh, is 1,696,000,000 pounds, representing a money value of $47,180,000. This does not include the thousands of pounds of fish that are caught annually by sportsmen, as those statistics are not available.

CONSUMPTION OF TEA IN CANADA.

The publication in a recent issue of THE GROCER of the excess of imports over exports of tea for the fiscal year ending June 30th, 1903, as 16,760,287 lbs., has drawn attention to a remarkable fact in the tea situation. While the consumption of tea has by no means decreased in Canada, the importations last year were abnormally low and the exports unusually large.

For the preceding five years our importation of tea was as follows:

For the fiscal year ending				June 30th, 1898....	19,954,562 lbs.
"	"	"	"	30th, 1899....	25,055,607 "
"	"	"	"	30th, 1900....	25,069,002 "
"	"	"	"	30th, 1901	23,044,314 "
"	"	"	"	30th, 1902....	19,530,655 "

The fact is that for the last year the trade has been drawing on the stocks usually held. The uncertainty prevailing has led to hand-to-mouth dealing and stocks are now in most lines very light.

NOVEL PEANUT ROASTER.

A novel feature of a roasting plant recently started up in New York, for peanuts exclusively, is a cooling apparatus to operate on peanuts in the sack. The nuts are bagged from the roaster and then the bag is placed against a large suction opening. Several of these openings are connected with an exhaust fan, and there is a gate for each in the pipe above it. Air is drawn directly through the nuts in the bag, and they are cooled sufficiently while the operator is sewing up the mouth of the bag.

OLD FRIENDS ABROAD.

Mr. Jack Stuart, assistant secretary of The Firstbrook Box Co., who a short time ago returned from a trip through the Eastern States, was asked what he most appreciated on his trip. Young Stuart is a thorough Canadian and replied with spirit, "a Christie Biscuit Box seen in the window of a Milford, Connecticut, grocery store."

Hon. Geo. E. Foster narrates that on his recent trip to Mexico the first sight that met his gaze on looking out of his room window was the legend, "Use Walker's Canadian Club."

The latter experience recalls the fact that a well-known Canadian preacher, when taken ill in Cairo was gratified to learn that "Walker's Canadian Club" was on sale in that city.

and Cold Storage News.

Britain's Meat Bill.

THE London correspondent of The Pastoralists' Review is authority for the statement that the British people import—alive or dead—one-third of the beef consumed and two-fifths of the mutton. All beef consumed in Britain equals 1,081,000 tons, say 3,200,000 oxen, per annum. Mutton and lamb consumed equal 513,000 tons, say 21,250,000 animals, of which 322,000 tons (12,000,000 animals) represent the home-grown supply, and 191,000 tons (say 9,250,000 animals) the imported volume. Of the beef figures above, 761,000 tons (2,250,000 animals) are the home-grown supply, and 320,000 tons (950,000 animals) the imported quantity. Provincial stores are equal to the storage of 110,000 tons of meat in 50 towns. The consumption of meat in the country per day amounts to 3,000 tons of beef (9,000 oxen) and 1,100 tons of mutton (56,000 sheep and lambs).

Manufacture of Milk Extract.

A method has been patented in Germany for the manufacture of a milk extract closely resembling in taste and flavor the meat extracts. Practically fat-free skim milk is freed from the casein, filtered and nearly neutralized with alkali. Formaldehyde is added after evaporation, and the whole set aside in crystalizing dishes in a cool place. Crystalization being complete, the milk sugar is eliminated by centrifugation, the remaining liquid boiled and centrifugated a second time, adding more formaldehyde. The product is finally evaporated to the proper consistency, rendered slightly alkaline and filtered.

By another process the fat and sugar-free milk is evaporated until the extractive matter reaches 10 to 15 per cent. of the liquid, when chopped lean beef is added and the mixture allowed to digest for 12 hours at a moderate temperature. The liquid is separated, brought to a boil, clarified and evaporated in vacuo to the proper degree.

Food in the Transvaal.

The Transvaal Government is determined to prevent a rise in prices for food products by all means. Lieutenant-Governor Lawley, of the Colony, prevented but recently the consolidation of The Imperial Cold Storage Co. with The Transvaal Cold Storage Co. The Government, it is believed, will open branch stations in the Colony, where meat will be sold at retail in opposition to the above trusts, whose prices are outrageous compared with those for the raw material.

Siberian Pickled Beef.

A despatch from Berlin, according to Grocery, says that 10 tons of pickled beef have arrived in Berlin from Siberia, being the first consignment from German butchers who went there some time ago to establish slaughtering houses to supply the German trade. Advantageous arrangements are reported to have been made with the Russian Government regarding the transportation of the meat which is said to average in cost a fraction less than 2½d. a pound. It is expected that enormous quantities will be received when the plans are fully carried out.

Government Inspection of Cheese.

At the Ottawa Cheese Board last week, on motion of Messrs. Dwyer and Madden, a resolution was passed requesting the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association to assist in procuring a measure of Government inspection. The object is to have an officer at Montreal to classify the different qualities in grades as first, second or third. If such a plan were adopted it is urged that the producers would not be subject to unfair treatment by the buyers, who, under the present conditions, have full control of the inspection. For a long time sellers have complained that their cheese is bought for a certain figure in the factory and that the price is discounted at the Montreal port by a system of unfair inspection.

Food Value of Pie.

"Seasoning," savoriness, is the essential element in this New England favorite, says a writer in Good Housekeeping, and in studying the position of pie in the colonial diet, it must be borne in mind that beer and wine to wash the food down was not permitted in Puritan households and that the monotonous diet of plain corn and wheat bread and salted meat needed something to brighten it, and that something the housewife found in the evolution of pie. She was also wise in securing high food value. Pastry for pies, according to the cook book, is made by adding eight ounces of lard and butter to eight ounces of flour. This gives a food value of 2,900 calories, or of itself enough for a day's ration. One nine-inch home-made mince pie is quoted at 3,882 calories; one-quarter of this with the invariable accompaniment of cheese would make a good meal.

German Meat Importers.

Simon W. Hanauer, U.S. deputy consul at Frankfort, writes that since the new German meat inspection law has been in force the importation of foreign meat, sausages, and canned meat stuffs have decreased about one-third. This great reduction has, however, been compensated for by the increase of imported live animals for slaughtering purposes. During the first half of the present year 171,050 head of cattle, valued at 54,000,000 marks ($12,852,000), were imported by Germany. In the same period of the preceding year the number of foreign cattle imported was 148,391, valued at 41,[illegible]000 marks ($10,172,000). Should the new tariff law go into operation in its present shape of largely enhanced rates on imported meat and live stock, the importation of foreign beef cattle and hogs, as also of meat stuffs generally, will greatly diminish and meat consumption in Germany be seriously affected thereby; but the German stock raisers will profit by the higher prices which will rule for their protected meat products.

Finns Meet Siberian Competition.

In consequence of the great increase in the imports of Siberian butter into England the authorities in Finland are becoming alarmed that their trade there will be cut out, says London Grocery. To prevent this, and also to combat the Siberian trade, the Finns have decided to create a special maritime service of particularly swift vessels, sailing from Hango to England direct. Hango is the most southern port of Finland, and the steamers will not call on any Russian port en route. The result remains to be seen, but despite uncomplimentary remarks the Trans-Siberian Railway is a power to be reckoned with.

THE PROVISION MARKETS.

Toronto.

Provisions are firm generally. The demand is very good, especially for hams, and jobbers have not yet caught up with their orders. Long clear bacon is one of the products most enquired for. In lard there seems to be a rather wide range of prices. We quote:

Long clear bacon, per lb	$0 10	$0 10½

Hams and bacon are in splendid demand on the local market, and in spite of the decline on the English market, regular shipments of Canadian bacon, hams and pork continue to be made. We quote:

St. John, N.B.

In barrelled pork the quite low figures still rule. The market has been uncertain. The large line of grades now offered caused great difficulty in getting at the real value of the goods. Barrelled beef is unchanged; there is a steady sale. In smoked meats a more general demand is noted. While quite full prices are asked, the market is rather lower than last Fall. Lard continues extremely low; the sale is large. In fresh beef the market is well supplied at rather easier values. Lamb is in large supply and the price low. Mutton has a very small sale. Pork is coming in more freely and is rather lower. We quote:

Mess pork, per bbl	$18 00	$19 00
Clear pork "	18 00	21 00

BUTTER.

Creamery is in steady supply and meets a fairly good demand. Dairy prints are very scarce. Generally the tone of the market is firm with no quotable change from last week's prices. We quote:

	Per lb.
Creamery prints	0 21	0 22
" solids, fresh	0 20	0 21
Dairy rolls, large	....	....

CHEESE.

The market is off again at the boards and is reflected in the local prices. As a matter of fact the speculative element in the market at present has created an uneasiness and unsteadiness which is difficult to gauge. We quote:

	Per lb.
Cheese, large	0 11½	0 12
" twins	0 12	0 12½

Montreal.

BUTTER

The butter trade continues unchanged. The export demand is quiet, exporters finding it hard to get the importers to give the price which is being asked. This week's letters advise a quiet and unsatisfactory market. Locally the trade remains about the same, fresh made creamery selling from 21 to 22c. Summer and stored goods are quiet, 20 to 20½c. being the ruling price. There seems to be a little more inquiry for dairy butter at 16 to 17c. for selected tubs; ordinary bakers, 14 to 15c.

CHEESE.

The market is weak at present, and locally there is almost nothing doing. For the export trade also there has been little demand. The local market is well supplied with small 20-lb. cheese selling at 11½ to 12c. Strong cheese sells at 12 to 12½c.

St. John, N.B.

EGGS.

The sale is large, but supplies come to hand quite slowly, so that firm prices rule. The quality of the stock received this season has been better than usual. Shippers find it pays to be more careful.

Eggs, new laid, per doz	0 20	0 22
" case stock, per doz	0 17	0 18

BUTTER

While there is no change, for best quality there is a ready sale at rather better prices. Best butter is always in demand. Creamery stock is very little handled by the wholesale trade here.

Butter, creamery prints, per lb	0 21	0 22
" creamery solids (fresh made), per lb	0 20	0 21

CHEESE.

Prices are quite high and dealers find there are very few offering. For the local trade twins are required. The output throughout the province is just as large as expected. Quotations are:

IMPRESSIONS OF THE GREAT WEST

By W. L. E.

NOTHING in the Great West surprised me more than the appearance of many of the towns and cities. We stopped at 28 different places, if my memory serves me right, and while our view was, in most instances, necessarily somewhat cursory, I saw enough to convince me that the cities, towns and villages in the Great West are such as the inhabitants thereof may well be proud of. Taking them all round, city for city, town for town, and village for village, they in more than one respect gained by comparison with similar places in the older parts of Canada. The buildings in the business portions are, as a rule, larger, more substantial and more modern in appearance, and the streets are broader and better paved. In a word, there is a more prosperous air about the western than about the eastern towns. Of all the cities of the West, Winnipeg and Vancouver impressed me most favorably. I had heard and read a great deal about both and was possessed with great expectations, but the realization exceeded my anticipations. If Winnipeg is not before a great many years the greatest distributing centre in the Dominion, I shall be very much surprised. Winnipeg can only be a failure if the Great West is a failure. It has a population now of about 45,000 and relatively it is to-day the greatest business wholesale centre in Canada. When the present warehouses in the course of construction are completed, the "Prairie City" can, without exaggeration, boast that it has the largest and most imposing warehouses in the Dominion, not even excepting Montreal and Toronto, while cities of similar size in the East are not at all to be compared with Winnipeg in this respect. It is this that warrants me in saying that Winnipeg is to-day relatively the greatest wholesale centre in the Dominion. When, of course, it comes to the manufacturing industries, there are several cities in Eastern Canada of much smaller population which put Winnipeg completely in the shade, but the Province of Manitoba is by no means wanting in those natural resources which are the basis of manufacturing industries, while Winnipeg itself possesses magnificent water power. One natural product which Manitoba does not possess is hardwood, but of pulp-wood there is an unlimited supply and paper-making therefore is one of the possible industries of the "Prairie Province." One thing that should not be forgotten in considering the future of Winnipeg is the fact that the construction of a short canal would complete water communication with the Saskatchewan. A glance at the map will convey some idea of what this means. Edmonton, for example, which is a thousand or more miles away, would be placed in direct water communication with Winnipeg.

At Laggan Preparing to Start for Lake Louise.

The main source of the Old Man River, a subterranean outlet in the side of a mountain.

Vancouver is a marvel among the cities of the Great West. Seventeen years ago the little town was fire swept, only one building remaining. Fifteen years ago the spot on which now stands the handsome and modern Vancouver Hotel was a timber limit from which the extraordinary quantity of 320,000 feet to the acre was being cut. I have this on the word of Mr. Scott, one of the large mill owners at Vancouver. To-day Vancouver is as modern a looking city as one could desire. The streets are wide and are nearly all paved with asphalt, while the sidewalks on the principal streets are made of wide stone slabs. The buildings, as a rule, are of brick or stone. The wholesale houses are fine, spacious and well lighted, and would do credit to any business centre on this continent. One thing that impressed me particularly about the wholesale houses in Vancouver was that every precaution had been taken to ensure good light, consequently the interiors are unusually bright. The retail stores are fully in keeping with the wholesale houses. One thing which struck me in Vancouver, in fact in every other city and town in the West, was the exceedingly good class of articles carried in the stores. A lady who was a member of our party assured me that the quality was much superior to what was found in the average retail stores in the East. Everywhere in the West I heard that the people demanded a better class of goods than those in the East and were prepared to pay for them. This applies to both articles of food and wearing apparel. I can imagine I hear eastern merchants praying that the same condition of affairs might prevail with them. Perhaps if they work for that end as well as pray for it they may obtain the desideratum.

While at Vancouver I ran against a friend of mine, a commercial traveller, who was on his way east. "I am always glad when I get home," he said. "I have been over the road so many times and know the dangerous spots so well that I always feel nervous until I have passed them." I looked at my nervous, pessimistic friend with something akin to pity. There are certainly dangers on the road and one perhaps shudders a little when looking back upon the spider-like bridges and trestles, crossing yawning canyons and rapid flowing rivers, which stand ever ready to receive him should his train leave its narrow pathway. But fortune is kind to those who travel the 500 miles or more of railway that runs through the Rockies: not during the 18 years that the Canadian Pacific Railway has been in existence has the life of a single passenger been lost on the Rocky Mountain division of the system. This fact ought to drive out fear from the breasts of the most nervous individuals even should there not be enough of the poetic in them to create adoration and dissipate fear in all around they see. But the timorous need not have any fear. Every precaution is taken by the Canadian Pacific Railway to prevent accidents. Guards patrol every mile of the railway throughout the Rockies before a passenger train passes over it, and in the descent from Hector there are safety switches at intervals so that should anything go wrong with the brakes the train would run into a place of safety. Besides this, men are taken on at Hector whose special duty is to jump from the front of the train and watch that the brakes and couplings are working properly. Each of the men thus employed gets on at the last coach, runs through the train and again jumps off at the front, repeating the operation till the descent is made. While making this particular descent the train does not travel faster than three or four miles an hour, and there is ample opportunity for passengers as well as railway men to jump from the train and run alongside, if they so desire. Some of our passengers did take this opportunity of stretching their limbs. To cross the Rockies on the C. P.R. one is as free from accident as those who travel by electric street car in any of our cities; in fact, judging from records, it is safer.

Arrow Head—From our Steamer.

Among the towns in the West there are none more ambitious than Edmonton. And this is not without good cause. It is situated amidst one of the finest farming districts in the Great West. As we approached Edmonton the appearance of the country reminded me more of Ontario than anything else I had seen since we started on our journey. When we retired the night before we were bounding along over the treeless prairie; in the morning when we awoke we were leisurely travelling over the Calgary and Edmonton branch of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Many of the fields along the C. & E. were fenced; but what reminded me more of Ontario than anything else was the evidence of mixed farming and the clusters of trees which we saw growing here and there. Local authorities informed me that there was no part of the Great West so well adapted for mixed farming as that adjacent to the Calgary and Edmonton branch of the C.P.R. We saw it somewhat under unfavorable consitions on account of a heavy rain which was falling, but from what I saw I am quite prepared to believe the statement. The best of the land for mixed farming I was informed lay from the line of the railway to about 30 or 40 miles eastward. On our way up the C. & E. we had our first sight of a bucking broncho. It was highly entertaining for those who had never seen such an animal before. Several of our party, who professed to be good riders, were requested to try their hand and mount the broncho, but one and all declined. In fact there was only one out of a number of cowboys who were standing round the station who would undertake the task, and the one who did so was unfortunate enough to get his hand slightly injured. We took up a collection for him and went on our way rejoicing and free from any qualms of conscience. But it is not alone upon the excellent farming country which surrounds it that Edmonton depends for its future prosperity. The town is favorably situated on the Saskatchewan. On the map the river is described as the North Saskatchewan, but it is not safe to call the river by that name in the hearing of the good people of Edmonton. It is "The" Saskatchewan, and should one insert the word "North," he is quickly reminded of his error. The river at Edmonton is broad and deep and a couple of steamboats make the town their headquarters, and the river is navigable for a long distance and no doubt eventually steamers will leave Edmonton and tie up at the wharf in Winnipeg when the possible canal connection is made.

Coal in abundance is all around Edmonton, and the town itself is partly undermined by mining operations; in fact the mayor informed us that they had been compelled to stop mining under the town in order to prevent the danger of a the divisional point. At present Edmonton is already of great importance. At present it is the starting point for the Great North, and merchants in Winnipeg do a large business fitting out traders who go into the "Great Lone Land" for the purpose of gathering furs. These traders, in some instances, travel over 2,000 miles to the north and take three or four months making the journey. The new trans continental line being built by Mackenzie & Mann will make Edmonton the divisional point. As at present Edmonton is only connected with the Calgary and Edmonton at Strathcona, on the south side of the Saskatchewan, by a short railway four miles long, with one engine and one passenger car. This is a great disadvantage, but when the new railway comes in on the north bank of the river, Edmonton will be much more favorably situated. That this is expected is evident from the boom which is at present on in Edmonton, and land on the main street is held as high as $700 a foot. Between Strathcona and Edmonton a keen rivalry exists, and both graciously vied with each other in entertaining our party.

On the Lower Deck of the Kootenay Lake Steamer. Mr. P. McMichael doffing his hat.

Cable Address { Adscript, London. Adscript, Canada.

PREPARE FOR CHRISTMAS.

IN a very short time the Christmas trade will be on. The year has been a particularly good one. Crops have been bountiful. Employment has not been denied to man willing to work, and wages have generally been high. The amount of money in circulation is large. In fact, we have all the evidences of good times.

Such being the case, the Christmas trade should be exceptionally good this year. The average man who is not on the margin of subsistence is inclined to be generous with himself in the matter of luxuries about Christmas time, even if times have not been particularly good. In such a year as this the man of the house, or perhaps it would be more correct to say the mistress of the house, will doubtless be inclined to indulge to a greater extent than heretofore in those lines of goods known as fancy groceries.

Will it pay the grocer to stock these goods?

It all depends on his situation. Lines that would prove first-class sellers in a city grocery might prove quite unsalable in the country village. But, on the other hand, is not the village grocer perhaps a little too conservative? Is it not just possible that a small but judicious assortment of these goods would not only sell at a good margin of profit, but would create a reputation for being up-to-date of great value?

Of course, it may be said that these goods are never called for. Granted! Customers go or send to the city because they never thought of them in connection with the home store.

The matter is worthy of consideration. In a small place it would not be advisable to invest heavily, but two or three lines that have never been sold before, well displayed and well advertised, could not well be amiss.

CANADA'S NECESSITIES IN TRADE AFFAIRS.

IT is one of the penalties of partial success to be content, to sit down and reflect on past achievement rather than to take cognizance of what is yet to be done. We are ever ready to hear and applaud one who tickles our vanity with high sounding eloquence descriptive of our vast resources and the recent expansion of our national trade, and, filled with the lotus fruit of fulsome flattery, we are too apt to ignore our short-comings, and miss the greater opportunities which are only turned to account by strenuous exertion.

It is true that Canada has progressed wonderfully in the last 6 or 8 years, but this progress should only incite us to greater efforts in the future rather than lull us into a fatal self complacency.

"Forward" has been the watchword THE GROCER has again and again recommended as the motto for Canadian manufacturers. Only very recently we called attention to the necessity for a shaking up in our department of trade and commerce and a determined bid to secure a hold for our manufacturers on the markets of the world.

That the business world is thinking along these lines is conclusively shown by a couple of letters in the last issue of THE GROCER, the one from Mr. Andrew R. Tufts, of Vancouver, B.C., writing from Shanghai, China, and the other from Mr. J. D. Allan, of Toronto, who has but recently returned from his annual trip to Russia and northern Europe.

With the point brought up by Mr. Tufts, especially in regard to the Oriental market for our flour, we deal with in another department. Mr. Allan's article is a challenge to Canada to awake to the reality of her position and to make herself ready for the commercial contest which is every day becoming keener, and on which, in the next fifty years, will turn stakes of almost inestimable value.

In the course of his business Mr. Allan has had exceptional facilities for knowing at first hand what the countries of northern Europe, and especially that one we are pleased to call barbarous Russia, are doing in a commercial way.

Mr. Allan tells us that in the embarassment of our natural resources we are wasting what, in less favored countries, would be a competency by our neglect of economic and scientific methods in the utilization of our time and products, and by our failure to take vigorous action to capture the markets of the world we are being outgeneralled by nations much less richly endowed by nature.

It is not very flattering. It is not pleasant reading. But faithful are the wounds of a friend. It is doubtless true that we have become rather too self-satisfied of late. Mr. Allan is doing a most valuable work in rousing us from this condition, in stimulating a little self-examination, in directing attention to what is being done by our trade rivals, and in pointing out markets which, if not to-day of great immediate value, are pregnant with wonderful possibilities for the future.

Mr. Allan's article on Canada's Necessities in Trade Affairs is worthy of the most careful perusal. The questions which are raised are of vital importance and should be thoroughly threshed out. THE GROCER would be glad to see these matters discussed from every standpoint, and our columns are open for that purpose.

KNOWN AND UNKNOWN FIRMS.

THE lamented American humorist, Artemus Ward (J. F. Brown), used to narrate that on the first night of his arrival in England he was importuned by a man he met on the street to accompany him to a political meeting. Artemus declined, on the ground that he knew nothing of English politics. The Englishman said, "Who are you, anyway?" The humorist replied, "Artemus Ward, the great showman of America." His English friend said, "I assure you that I never heard of you or your show before," when Mr. Ward expressed his surprise that a man of such confessed ignorance should be entitled to a vote.

A feeling akin to this would doubtless imbue the minds of many non-advertising manufacturers should they visit the outlying towns and villages of the Dominion; but they would soon be compelled to recognize that a very large proportion of even the better class of trade were utterly in ignorance of their very existence. When some of our oldest business concerns are approached on the matter of advertising, they tell you "We have our travellers." Very true, but do they ever consider how they handicap their representatives?

The ranks of the country merchant are being constantly recruited from the schoolhouse and the farm, and settlers from the United States and Great Britain. Bradstreet's reports show that 18,000 new firms began business in Canada from September 1, 1902, to August 30, 1903. The impressions of a new beginner in mercantile life are generally formed from the papers of the trade to which, naturally, he looks for information.

Suppose a representative from an advertising and one from a non-advertising concern were to make a concurrent call on a merchant just commencing business, which one of the houses would commend itself to the buyer? Which one would receive the preference?

The recent excursion of the Manufacturers' Association to the Pacific Coast was a revelation to many of the benefit of advertising. Quite a number went with the idea of combining business with pleasure, and on their return excused their paucity of orders on account of their house being so little known in the West.

As against this, a gentleman very prominent in his own line of business, who did an immense trade in every section of the trip—booking one order of over $7,000 from one of the wealthiest corporations in Canada—told a representative of the paper in which he advertises that his success was largely due to his persistent advertising in the paper referred to, and that, without an exception, his advertisements in this particular paper were mentioned by every merchant upon whom he called.

Is it necessary to say that the people who do THE business of Canada are the people who use publicity? Consider the growing prosperity of the country, consider the great possibilities of its expanding trade, and seriously ask yourself the question, "Does it not pay to advertise?"

SHOULD RETAIN MR. CREELMAN.

THE announcement that we have lost Mr. Geo. C. Creelman, Superintendent of Farmers' Institutes for Ontario, will be heard with the deepest concern by all who have a proper appreciation of the agricultural interests of Ontario and Canada. Time and again we have lost our best men, men who have distinguished themselves as experts in various branches of agriculture, on account of the niggardly estimation we place on the value of their services, and now Mr. Creelman has been added to the list.

Mr. Creelman's salary is at present $2,200 per year. He has been offered $3,000 in a similar position in Texas, $3,000 and a residence to go to Mississippi, besides being one of several who have been offered the superintendency of agriculture for the Orange River Colony at a salary of $6,000.

It is understood that Mr. Creelman would have remained with us had his salary been increased to $3,000, but the Government could not meet his wishes, so, for a paltry $800, we are to lose a gentleman who has so distinguished himself as to be sought after by such distant states as Mississippi and Texas.

In yesterday's papers it was announced that Mr. Creelman had decided to accept the offer of the State of Mississippi, as the Government had not seen its way clear to raise his salary to the amount he was offered.

The Ontario Government should blush for shame. If Mr. Creelman is worth $3,000 a year to Texas or Mississippi, he is surely worth as much to Ontario, which in natural resources and agricultural interests can be equalled by no State in the American Union. We are a wealthy province. According to its own showing the Government of Ontario is in easy financial circumstances. Why this pinch-penny policy in providing for the salaries of the working officials of the important department of agriculture?

Thoroughly cognizant of all our conditions, and in touch with our farming community, Mr. Creelman is in a position to make himself even more useful than he has been in the past. With his ability and experience the value of the services he is capable of rendering to the agricultural interests of Ontario, and through Ontario to Canada, are incalculable, and in comparison with which the modest salary he receives is quite out of proportion.

The agricultural classes should insist that their interests should not be prejudiced by allowing old and trusted officials to be borne away to the United States for the matter of a few hundred or even a few thousand dollars.

The wail that we are losing so many of our best men to the States would be heard much less frequently did we not put such a niggardly value upon their services.

By all means, Mr. Creelman should be retained. It may not yet be too late for the business and agricultural interests to bring sufficient pressure upon the Government to prevail upon them to rescind their decision. The time has passed when we should submit tamely to the indignity of seeing such men bid over our heads by any country, let alone Mississippi or Texas.

The Export Apple Trade.

By Geo. H. Duck.

WHILE so much space is being devoted to enquiries and opinions, suggestions and arguments, concerning the further development of trade "within the Empire," it would seem apropos to call attention to that very important industry represented by the packers and shippers of Canadian apples for export. Before the manufacturers of this country contemplated a foreign market for their surplus product, before high tariffs were employed to foster these industries, so prosperous now, before the "Made in Canada" label had attracted the attention of foreign buyers, the enterprising apple-shipper had invaded the markets of Britain and had established the "Grown in Canada" product as the premier fruit.

Some idea of the importance of this industry, of the revenue derived by the community, and of the investment of capital involved, may be estimated from the statistics of the season of 1902-3 and of the present season to date. More than a million barrels of Canadian apples went to the British market last year and more than half of that quantity has already gone forward during the first six weeks of the present season. Figuring the price paid by the shippers for fruit "on the trees" at $1 per barrel and the cost of the package and packing at 75 cents per barrel, already the large sum of $875,000 has been distributed. Add to this freight charges for rail and ocean transportation and insurance premiums and the million dollar mark has been left far behind. All this, and more than two-thirds of the crop yet to move.

For the successful marketing of this large product many occupations are called upon to do their part and in the distribution of the purchase price and expenses many homes are interested. The grower cultivates to perfect his crop, the stave and heading mill, the nail factory and the cooperage shop to make the package, the skilled labor in picking and packing, the loaders, the stevedores, the handlers, together with the many others indirectly employed, all receiving a direct benefit from this enterprising speculation.

Compared with other lines as a speculation, this industry holds a position by itself. With only such meagre information at hand as the "general outlook" months in advance, orchards are bought, fruit packed and shipped, fortunes are invested in the outlay and all dependent for re-embursement and profit upon such returns as the shipments may bring, after weeks in transit by rail and ship and under conditions over which the shipper has no control. The best varieties most carefully packed are often ruined in the carrying, or forced upon a glutted market when destination is reached. Occasionally, indeed, transportation charges are not realized from the sales and the shipper is called upon for remittance to "cover balance." All this is ventured in the speculation of striking a good market with fruit in good condition. By instituting a department, the Government has accomplished great good and has rendered much assistance to the trade. The proper cultivation of the fruit and the regulations regarding the marking for marketing, has raised the standard of quality and better returns are realized. Transportation lines have improved their service, both in transit and equipment, but that great element of speculation is yet far from removed.

So far this industry has been attributed to Canada and this is true only in the most general acceptation. The provinces of Ontario and Nova Scotia only are the producers of export apples, and comparatively small areas of these. It will be appreciated then, of how great importance this business is to those immediately interested, while as a national feature it outclasses all others when compared on an acreage basis. Although dependent largely upon favorable seasons, we are secure in stating that the industry is growing quite in proportion to the enormous development of this country. The business is transacted each year on a more sound basis and consequently yields better returns. Let us not forget, then, that as a bond of imperial unity, the Canadian apple has been a leader and continues to do its share, while the credit for this rests with those who, by their persistent enterprise, have developed the trade in Canadian apples for export.

The action brought in the High Court of Justice by the proprietors of "Salada" tea for an injunction restraining the East India Tea and Coffee Company from infringing the well known trade mark, "Salada," has been settled by the defendant agreeing to discontinue the use of the word resembling "Salada."

HINTS TO BUYERS.

Contributors are requested to send news only, not puffs of goods they handle, or the arrival of standard goods that everyone has in stock, or that they are offering goods at close figures, or that they have had an unusually large sale this season.

The attention of the trade is called to the ad., in another section of this issue, of E. D. Marceau, Montreal. Excellent values in teas are offered.

A. F. MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co. report: Arriving, 200 cases Bensdorp's Royal Dutch Cocoa, per steamer "Alexandrian," from Antwerp.

The R. & J. H. Simpson Co., tea importers, Guelph, report the advice of a shipment of very fine Ceylon black and Ceylon green teas, in half-chests, per S.S. "Hindustan," to arrive in a few weeks, which will be offered to the trade at interesting prices.

A. F. MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co. are receiving their Fall shipments of Roquefort, Swiss, Edam, and other fancy imported cheese, and report extra fine makes.

The R. & J. H. Simpson Co., wholesale grocers, Guelph, have a snap to offer in selected Valencia raisins, to arrive about the middle or last of next month, brand and quality guaranteed.

The Eby, Blain Co. report very satisfactory results from their demonstrating of their "Gold Medal" coffee in the larger towns throughout Ontario.

L. Chaput, Fils & Cie, expect arrival shortly of 3,000 boxes and quarter-boxes of choice table raisins.

The Eby, Blain Co. are quoting skinless and boneless codfish in 100 lb. cases, at very low figures.

Williams Bros. & Co., Limited, pickles in 30 and 45 gal. bbls., are in stock with L. Chaput, Fils & Cie.

H. P. Eckardt & Co. report a good business doing in Heinz mince meat, put up in pails.

L. Chaput, Fils & Cie, have arriving on the "Bellona," choice Sultana raisins of different qualities in 1 lb. cartoons. Prices are very low this year.

A carload of Rowat's pickles, in assorted sizes, has just been received by The Eby, Blain Co.

A carload of choice Hallowee dates (500 boxes) is expected shortly by L. Chaput, Fils & Cie., for delivery about November 1. These goods are offered at interesting prices.

A consignment of Labrador herring arrived this week for H. P. Eckardt & Co.

"Keen Public Sense Rewards the Best"

12 Million Packets Sold Annually

We think we have proven beyond all question that the greatest lasting salesman in the world is "QUALITY." This is the unfailing convincer, the irresistible salesman; all subterfuges and inducements of whatever character must inevitably stand aside, make way and succumb to "QUALITY," providing always, naturally, and of course, that value is a close associate.

That we have made an immense success of "SALADA" is patent to all, and when we say "immense" we mean all that the word implies . . and this in the face of the keenest competition, charitable and otherwise.

If you don't already know, wouldn't you naturally conclude that "SALADA" Ceylon Teas must be other than ordinary values to sell as they do?

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

ONTARIO MARKETS.

GROCERIES.

Toronto, Oct. 29, 1903.

GENERAL trade is reported very good on the street, and a satisfactory feeling is prevalent throughout the trade. Canned goods still continue to hold the attention of the trade, who are still in the dark as to how much of their orders will be filled. Goods are being delivered slowly and are distributed without delay. The list quotations have not been changed, but no offers are being accepted for either corn or tomatoes. Coffee is distinctly stronger, and higher values are anticipated in the near future. Spices continue to maintain a strong position, especially in cloves. Corn syrup is meeting an active demand, and molasses is showing a fair movement at average prices, with the exception of Barbados, which is high. Tapioca is higher on the primal markets, but has not responded here as yet. Price is steady. Teas are somewhat firmer than a week ago, and manifest an advancing tendency. There is more inquiry of late for cheap Indian and Ceylon blacks. China greens are much better stocked than a year ago. The London market is reported strong. In dried fruits the interest is chiefly in the Mediterranean fruits which lately arrived on the Escalona and are reported excellent stock. Sultanas are also attracting attention from their good value as compared with Valencias. Sugar presents about the same situation as a week ago. New Berlin beet has, however, been placed on the market and is quoted at the same price as Acadia, with 1902 make 10c. lower.

CANNED GOODS.

The canned goods situation continues strong. The Canners' Consolidated still refuse to quote for delivery and opinion is divided as to the percentage that will eventually be delivered. The pack is now practically over, and definite information should soon be available. Deliveries have so far been very slow, and most houses are only filling back orders and not taking new ones. There is a feeling that the jobbers will at least be able to fill in full the orders already accepted. Prices remain nominally the same, but practically a price cannot be determined, as no goods are changing hands. We continue quotations as follows:

COFFEES.

The coffee market is very strong with the prospect for higher values in the near future. Cash Rios and Santos have advanced fully 1 to 1½c. in the last six weeks, and mild grades are beginning to feel the effects. The feeling locally is very firm and strong and greens are 1c. up. We quote:

SUGAR.

The market preserves the same nominal tone indicated in our last report. After going to press last week an easier feeling developed, with United States refiners holding off and showing no disposition to anticipate requirements, having on hand about four weeks supply on present basis of meltings. Since then the market has assumed a rather firmer tone, with sales of Demerara sugars on basis of 2 3-16c. cost and freight New York for 96 test, which is equal to duty paid price of 3⅞c., thus maintaining the market on this basis. As yet, however, refiners show little disposition to continue buying, for the reason given above, and are without particular inducement to do so, as the meltings for the week reduced stocks 5,000 tons, to, say, 30,000 tons. Reports of growing European beet crops have been variable, but a cable from Mr. Licht, dated Magdeburg, October 27, to Willett & Gray, New York, reads: "Weather is favorable for growing crop and very favorable for crop work." The factories' estimate for the all-Europe crop is 5,500,000 tons, or 350,000 tons less than Mr. Licht's latest estimate, and this has had an appreciable effect on price of 88 per cent., which for the week advanced 3d. per cwt., to 9s. f.o.b. Hamburg, and at close is quoted nominally at 8s. 11½d. for October shipment. The advance is partly attributed to squeezing of shorts. The American refined market is badly demoralized for the present, all agreement having gone to the winds, and relations between refiners and wholesalers are said to be badly strained. While this lasts net prices of refined show considerable variation, but it is thought that this cannot last long, owing to the small margin between raws and refined. Canadian markets preserve their nominal tone, with prices of eastern sugars unchanged and only moderate business doing. There has been some revision of prices of domestic beet sugars, as will be observed in the list below. New Berlin granulated is now listed at the same price as Acadia granulated, while 1902 make is quoted at 10c. less. The latest figures of Cuban crop just finishing indicates a total output of 980,000 tons against an actual outturn for 1902 crop of 850,181 tons. We quote:

SPICES.

Spices are moving freely locally at the advanced prices. Values are firm, and all the spices on the list, with the exception of ginger, are higher; that is, upon the primal markets, no change being quoted locally. Cloves are excited and much higher in Europe and Zanzibar. Reports from Zanzibar place the crop at 40,000 bales, against 112,000 last year, and quote 19½c. Pimento is firmer. Nutmegs are slowly being absorbed, and no fresh supplies appear to replenish the market. We quote:

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

There is a big demand for corn syrup, which is almost the only syrup on the market, there being but a very few canes. Molasses is meeting with fair trade. Values are about the same as 12 months ago, except as to Barbados, the price of which is very high. New York reports a limited demand in syrups

TEAS.

There is a distinctly firmer tone generally to the tea market this week locally and abroad. Inquiry is reported better for cheap Indian and Ceylon blacks. They have not been procurable at recent prices offered and in the words of one prominent tea dealer, buyers are awakening to the fact that the market has gone up to stay. Japans are high and firm, but in fairly good supply, with local jobbers. China greens are high but large assortments are reported where there were practically none last year. London advices state that the steadier tone noted last week in Indian was fully maintained, in some cases rising even higher. Buying was general, with good liquoring teas well competed for and common kinds firmer. A strong demand was reported for all kinds of Ceylon, with distinctly better tone especially for better descriptions. We quote:

tion is unchanged and indeed more interest is being manifested in goods arriving than in the markets. In Sultanas there is difficulty in securing fruit of quality, but the good value as compared with the high price of Valencias is stimulating a large demand. There is not much doing in California fruits. Apricots are almost too high to touch and this fact has checked sales of other California fruits. There seems to be scarcely any considerable demand for prunes, probably on account of the large apple crop. We quote:

GREEN FRUITS.

The tone of the market this last week has been dull. Basket fruits continue to come in, but the demand has fallen off. The season, which is now drawing to a close, has been of full length and has been generally satisfactory, a good big season, one commission man remarked. Basket fruits show the natural advance. Tokay grapes are down a half dollar and Almeria up the same amount. Limes are again on the market at $1.25 per case. We quote :

QUEBEC MARKETS.

GROCERIES.

Montreal, Oct. 29, 1903.

THE week's business is generally reported very satisfactory, the volume being large, but without any special features. The demand for sugar is easing off now that the preserving season is practically over, and country orders are now very small. Prices are steady at figures given in last issue. In teas there is nothing of special interest to note this week with the exception of the continued activity in Ceylon greens owing to the withdrawal of the bounty, to which extended reference was made in our last issue. Low-grade Congous are higher in the primary markets. In syrups and molasses trade during the week has been very fair; prices are unchanged. Reports from Brazil indicate a short crop of coffee for next season, as, owing to the long-continued drought, the flowering has not shown up well. Locally there is very little doing in coffee. The spice market continues to be very firm, but locally there are no changes to report. Cloves, pepper and ginger are the lines most likely to rise. There is little doing on the local market in rice and tapioca, and prices continue unchanged. In canned goods trade has been quite active. Jobbers are now able to send out tomatoes and corn sold some time ago and delayed until now because of non-delivery by the canners. Tomatoes are being anxiously sought after. In foreign dried fruits the feature this week has been the activity in Valencia and Malaga raisins and currants. A full cargo of Mediterranean fruits has arrived per ss. Escalona, and heavy deliveries have been made. It is expected that with the cool weather business in green fruits will improve, but trade has been quiet during the week. Lemons are scarce. There is nothing new to report in vegetables. Eggs are in good demand, and the market is strong. The bean situation is commented upon at length below. It is expected that lower prices will prevail. The evaporated apple market is uncertain. Some interesting changes in raw furs will be noted.

SUGAR.

Business is quiet this week, the demand having fallen off somewhat in comparison with last week's business. Prices are unchanged, and it is not anticipated that any will eventuate in the near future. Country orders are small, showing falling off now that the preserving season is over. We quote :

Reports from Brazil via New York state that owing to the long continued drought since last Spring the flowering has not shown up well, and indications are that 1904-5 will show a short crop. CANNED GOODS.

There has been quite a little business this week in canned goods of every description. Jobbers are sending out orders of tomatoes and corn that had been sold and which have lately been delivered by canners. Tomatoes, of course, are the most anxiously sought after. Salmon are held firm at $1.20 to $1.25 for fair brands, $1.30 to $1.40 for good

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

The feature in the past week in dried fruits has been the activity in Valencia and Malaga raisins and currants. The arrival of the ss. Escalona with a full cargo of Mediterranean fruits has made jobbers exceedingly busy, and some very heavy shipments and deliveries have been made. Dates have been offered and orders taken at very low prices. The market for nuts is steady. Figs are also interesting and in good demand. The first shipment of Comadra figs have arrived via Liverpool and Boston. We quote :

GREEN FRUITS.

Business during the past week has been very quiet. It is expected, however, that with the cold weather business will improve. Apples are coming in fairly freely, and good Winter stock is bringing $2.50 to $3.50. The English market keeps up strong and very fair prices are being realized. Lemons are scarce. We quote :

FISH.

Trade during the past week has been fair. Haddock is still on the scarce side, as it does not arrive very freely, but it is hoped that next week the arrivals will be heavier. Fresh halibut is scarce this week, owing, no doubt, to the stormy weather prevailing at the fishing districts. So far there has been no fresh halibut offering, and buyers will in all likelihood have to fall back on frozen fish this week. Fresh trout is out of season. Whitefish is scarce, the close season in Manitoba being responsible for this. There has been a good demand for prepared fish of all kinds, and now that the cold weather has set in, the demand will increase. Stocks of salt herring and green codfish are very light and much higher prices are looked for. We quote :

VEGETABLES.

Potatoes are coming in very fast, quite a few cars arriving daily, carload prices ranging from 55 to 57c. per bag of 90 pounds. Some Ontario dealers have been offering to ship potatoes, but dealers here say they are being well supplied from the province. Onions are firm and higher, reds selling in jobbing lots at $3.50, and yellow at $3.25. Spanish onions are fine and selling freely at 65 to 75c. per crate. We quote :

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

EGGS.

There is an active demand for all lines. The cold weather during the past week has had the effect of checking very considerably the local receipts of fresh-laid eggs. These are selling readily at from 23 to 25c.; straight candled stock, 20 to 22c.; market stock, 16 to 18c. Pickled eggs are meeting with ready sale at 18c.

BEANS.

The bean market is still very difficult to gauge, as it has been subject to daily fluctuations since our last issue. Local commission men are of opinion that the early reports of a short crop in the West were much exaggerated, for in no other way can they account for the fact that Canadian growers have been accepting lower prices than those obtaining in Michigan. At time of writing there is a stronger feeling for spot goods, owing to the cold wet weather having interfered with threshing operations, but goods for future delivery are lower. At the present time Canadian prices are still lower than Michigan prices, but the latter are coming down, while Canadian prices, although fluctuating daily, are still centreing about the same point. Canadian prices are usually governed by market conditions in the United States, and, as Michigan prices are now declining, the feeling locally is that a decline here is bound to come. It will be noted that the prices quoted below show a decline of 10c. all through. We quote :

No. 1 hand-picked, carlots	2 00
Choice prime, per bushel	1 90
" carlots	1 70
Ordinary (off grade), per bush	1 75

HONEY.

The offerings of honey during the last two weeks have been large with practically no demand here. During the early part of September producers were holding for much higher prices than the dealers felt like paying. At the present time producers are meeting the dealers in regard to prices, and the result has been a slight weakening. For comb honey there is an excellent demand from local dealers, but there is not much offering. We quote :

Strained, white	0 07½	0 08
Clover and basswood	0 08	0 08½
Buckwheat	0 07	0 07½
Comb honey		0 13

MAPLE PRODUCTS.

The market continues quiet and unchanged. We quote :

Old " in wood	0 05¾	0 06

EVAPORATED APPLES.

There is still an unsettled feeling and very conflicting opinions are current. It is said that higher prices are prevailing for export and that there are good prospects in foreign markets. In spite of these reports there are still large offerings on the local market at the low prices which have prevailed for some weeks back. New York buyers are still offering lower prices for November delivery than for October, and competent authorities continue to express the belief that high prices this season are not to be expected. We quote the following unchanged jobbers' prices to the trade :

New, in carlots	0 05½	0 06
New, in jobbing lots	0 06	0 06½

HOPS.

There is little to add to our long reports on the hop situation in our last two issues. The local market continues at a high level. Eastern Townships hops are selling in small quantities at 28c. delivered in Montreal. The quality is said to be good. Choice Canadian hops are quoted at 30 to 32c. and fair to good at 25 to 28c. Bohemian hops continue very scarce, and double last year's price is now being offered.

POTATOES.

Supplies from this province continue quite ample for the present demand, and although there are considerable offerings from Ontario, few of them are being accepted. Dealers are buying at from 55 to 57c. per bag and selling at 65 to 70c.

FLOUR AND GRAIN.

FLOUR.

There is still not much activity on the local market. Some mills are cutting from 15 to 20c. per barrel on Manitoba flours, but as yet there has been no general decline, and we again quote the following prices :

Manitoba patent		4 80
" first bakers'		4 50
" second bakers'	3 90	4 10

FEED.

A good demand and a steady market are reported this week to "The Grocer." We quote :

Ontario bran, in bulk	16 50 17 00
" shorts	19 00 20 00
Manitoba bran, in bags	18 00

CORNMEAL.

Prices are unchanged. We quote :

Gold dust, bags	1 80	1 90

Ordinary, bags	1 40	1 45

GRAIN.

A typographical error in our last issue made us quote No. 1 hard Manitoba at 83 instead of 93c. The local trade is not very active. Deliveries from Ontario are light, as farmers are fully occupied with their ploughing and are not taking their grain to market. Business in Manitoba wheat is confined principally to the millers. We quote :

No. 1 hard Manitoba		0 93
No. 1 Northern		0 80½

ROLLED OATS.

The demand this week has not been very brisk and merchants are taking only sufficient to supply their actual requirements. Prices quoted recently have been subject to some concessions. We quote this issue slightly reduced prices as follows :

Rolled oats, in bbls	3 75	3 80
" " in bags	1 80	1 83

BALED HAY.

Trade has been dull during the week. We quote :

No. 1 timothy	10 00 10 50
No. 2 timothy, choice	8 50 9 50
No. 2 timothy, ordinary	8 00 8 25
Clover, carlots	7 50 8 00

LOOSE HAY.

New hay is quoted at $7.50 to $8 per load of 100 bundles of 15 pounds each, and old hay $8 to $8.50.

ASHES.

There is so little business being done at present that it is impossible to quote prices with any degree of confidence in their correctness. In the meantime we give same prices as last issue :

First pots	5 85
Seconds	5 50
Pearls, per 100 lb	6 75 7 00

HIDES.

Opposition buyers have by their active competition raised prices considerably. No. 1 beef hides have been advanced ½c., and prices of lambskins have taken a further rise. The regular price is now 70c., but some opposition buyers are paying 75c. We quote :

No. 1 beef hides	0 09½
No. 2 "	0 08
No. 3 "	0 07
No. 1 buff sheepskins	0 77 0 79
Lambskins	0 70 0 75
No. 1 calfskins	0 11
No. 2 "	0 09

RAW FURS.

Next week we hope to give our readers the revised list of prices on the local market. A number of changes will then be noticed. Most Canadian furs are a little cheaper, but the drop has not been sufficient to affect the market very materially. With few exceptions last year's prices will be a safe guide. The greatest decline has been in bear skins. This is due to the fact that bear is not suitable for the present styles of manufactured garments, and a weak demand has lowered prices. Muskrat is considerably higher. Below we give a special report from C. M. Lampson & Co., New York, of their sale, which occurred a few days ago. The New York market will be followed more or less closely here :

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

Office of "The Canadian Grocer."
St. John, N.B., Oct. 26, 1903.

COLLECTIONS are being fairly well met. This is a season when money is always rather scarce, particularly in the grocery business. In the wholesale branch large amounts must be paid for seasonable goods which, as a rule, are spot cash. The wholesale trade are, therefore, the more affected when the retail trade do not meet their paper in full, the more as they have no such option. The higher prices of spices, particularly cloves, are a feature of the markets. Nutmegs are much firmer. In cream of tartar rather higher prices rule. St. John is preparing for a very large Winter port business. This is a matter of great importance to our laborers and to the provision trade.

OILS.

In burning oil the higher prices quoted last week are firmly held. Dealers, however, have largely contracted for their Winter supply. In lubricating oils values are unchanged, though cheaper grades are rather firmer. Linseed oils are low and for import very low prices are quoted. Turpentine continues high. In cod oil full prices rule. The supply received here has been light. Owing to the extreme prices all that was at all right has been refined into cod liver oil. We quote:

American Water White		0 21

SALT.

In Liverpool coarse salt the supply held in stock is not large and there will be no receipts till the Winter port steamers arrive toward the last of November. Prices are quite firm. In fine salt there is less demand. Stocks have been very light through the season, it being impossible to get supplies forward. We quote :

CANNED GOODS.

There is little of news. The high price of tomatoes and the light pack is a feature. In canned fish all prices are firm. Salmon are a light supply and new goods come to hand slowly. In domestic sardines prices are rather higher. The pack has been light. This is also true of haddies and kippered herring. Fruits are firm. Supplies are not large. Blueberries have been a small pack. We quote:

DRIED FRUIT.

The feature of the week has been the receipt of new Malaga seeded raisins. As it is a new line buyers were rather anxious. The trade are somewhat disappointed, for while in style of package and in flavor the goods are right, the appearance of the goods is not as attractive as was hoped. The extra full weight in the package is a pleasing feature and the fact that there is a wide difference in price in their favor compared with Californian is much appreciated. While California loose raisins are quoted rather lower, seeded are higher. New loose Malagas are daily expected. New figs and peel sell freely. Quality is good. New currants are soon expected. Prunes have a fair sale with prices unchanged. Dates rule at even prices. Onions are higher. We quote :

GREEN FRUIT.

Dealers are busy. In oranges, Jamaicas supply the market at firm prices. Lemons, while commanding quite full figures are rather easier. Apples, though quite plentiful, hold at full figures, the quality being good. In grapes, some Ontario stocks are still offered. California Tokays are particularly fine. Cranberries are high. The demand for sweet potatoes is light. We quote :

FISH.

In this line stocks continue scarce and prices tend higher. Haddies, which should be largely handled at this season, are in very light supply. The sale for pollock is limited. Dry codfish are higher. In pickled herring, eastern fish, of which large quantities used to come here, are not seen. Grand Manan and bay herring hold at full figures. Smoked have but a fair sale at the high prices asked. FLOUR, FEED AND MEAL.

Manitoba flour is rather lower. Ontario grades are unchanged from last week. Oats and oatmeal are firm. Feed is in fair supply. Beans are not freely offered. The price is a firm one. Barley and peas are firm. We quote :

NOTES.

Canadian onions in bags, shipped chiefly from Ontario points, are a new feature of the trade this season.

Buyers of "Red Rose" tea should remember this is the rush season. This year, however, through increased facilities, there will be little if any delay in shipping orders.

Our trade prefer maple syrup in bottles and to meet this demand The Imperial Syrup Co. have placed on the market a large bottle at a fair price.

Goodwillie's fruits are meeting with a large sale. Wholesalers are finding themselves oversold on some varieties.

Mr. Felix Taussig, of The Boston Molasses Co., passed through this city last week on his way to Halifax.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, B.C., Oct. 26, 1903.

THE Canadian Canners' Consolidated Companies, Limited, dies hard. To continue their advertised system of selling goods and giving a special discount to exclusive buyers, (who mark you, could not get a guarantee of all their requirements), the combine has just sent out to the wholesale trade the following affidavit to be filled out and sworn to. The merchants here are indignant. They felt when the first announcement of the highly original methods of the new combination was made public, that it was a proposition they as business men could not entertain. Now they are sure of it. None of them will sign the document and most of them consigned it to the waste paper basket at once. The form sent out is as follows :

From advices received from the White Pass people in the north it is learned that there is now lying at White Horse a quantity of merchandise variously estimated at 2,300 tons or thereabouts. Much of this is hay and feed, but a large proportion is merchandise, foodstuffs, ordered late, and it will have to be protected in warmed warehouses all Winter, owing to its semi-perishable character. All the freight of really perishable nature, such as eggs, fruit and vegetables, has been forwarded. The main reason why the great amount of freight is installed at White Horse is because of late ordering on the part of Dawson merchants. They held off too long in the hope that the great cargoes sent round by way of St. Michaels for transportation up the Yukon in river steamers would arrive When they found this hope was futile it was too late to get goods in before the final rush. Added to this the water in the upper Yukon was very low all the later part of the season, so that the steamers down river from White Horse to Dawson could only take small loads. Had it been possible to load the river steamers to their capacity, there would have been little left to hold over.

An interesting point in connection with this held-over merchandise is that of the insurance. It is held by some that the railway company is still responsible for the insurance of the goods, the same as in transit insurance is considered on all merchandise. On the other hand some, and of these are the transportation companies, claim that as the goods are delayed in the manner they are, and for the long period to elapse until the opening of navigation again, it constitutes a condition in which the shippers must step in and protect their consignments. In any case, both shippers and consignees are very much interested in the problem and it is occupying the attention of merchants, transportation men and insurance agents at the present moment. A large amount of insurance has been placed on these stocks during the past few days. Who will ultimately foot the bill, the transportation companies, shippers or consignees, is yet to be determined.

The Thanksgiving turkeys eaten by Vancouverites cost them something like 35c. per pound retail. There were a few eastern turkeys brought in from Smith's Falls, Ont., which sold retail at 30c., but the local turkeys, of which there was a limited quantity offering, brought 35c., as did also a small quantity brought in from Seattle. As the latter cost 23c. in Seattle and paid a 25 per cent duty, as well as freight and cold storage charges, the margin at 35c. retail was not great when divided between the retailer and the jobber.

Turkeys do not thrive very well so far in the humid climate of the coast districts, though it is quite likely that in time they will be successfully reared, when a study of the conditions is made. In some localities, especially up the Fraser River, the ranchers raise quite a few, and the quantity of moisture precipitated in a season is quite as much as on the coast. The principal source of supply for turkeys to this market has always been in the past the Smith's Falls market.

Steamer Queen, of the Pacific Coast S.S. Company's Vancouver-San Francisco service brought to port this week a large quantity of California goods, much of which was for shipment east, showing the extent to which the markets of eastern Canada and the Northwest are looking to the Pacific coast for supplies. For instance, one shipment was 1,135 cases dried fruits for shipment to Winnipeg. Another was 500 cases canned goods for Duluth, and similar shipments for Montreal are frequent. Other items of the cargo imported by Vancouver wholesale merchants were 675 cases dried fruits, 175 cases raisins, 25 cases evaporated apples, 60 cases figs, 30 cases chocolate, 40 cases canned goods, 30 cases salad oil, 300 boxes matches, 5 cases horse radish.

Canned goods from Eastern Canada are arriving freely for stocks, some orders being pretty nearly all delivered. In several lines, however, there is the usual shortage, and the market will have to look elsewhere early in the season for fresh supplies. Dried fruits in this province are not moving very rapidly at the present moment, there being still a fairly good supply of fresh fruits in the market.

Local British Columbia apples are dominating the market entirely this year so far. There have been few importations from Oregon, California or Washington, and of fancy apples there has never been such a display as this season. The supply of these better-looking grades is not from any one locality. Of course the upper country, beginning with Spence's Bridge and ending in the Okanagan, is sending down large quantities of superior fruit as usual, but from the lower mainland, Chilliwack and from Vancouver Island the sample of apples this year is very fine. The crop is not a very heavy one, however, and is not going to be nearly sufficient to keep the market supplied all through the season. At the present moment there is quite a supply of cheaper grades selling at very low prices compared with the fancier stock, but as soon as this cull class is done there is not a large supply of cooking grades in Winter stocks. There are some apples not yet ready to be picked, and they will in some cases stand a month yet before being gathered, but it will not add greatly to the total stock. Prices for fancy are away up to $1.75 and $2 per box in many instances.

There was a small lot of 25 barrels of Ontario apples on the market recently. It was rather odd to learn the way it came to be received. A shipment of canned goods was being made up at one of the Ontario canneries, and there was space left in the car. To fill it the lot of 25 barrels of apples was put in. They netted here $5.75 to the retailers. One grocer got four barrels of handsome Ontario snows which were included in the little shipment. He had no trouble selling them. They were a treat to old Ontario boys for sure.

Produce markets show but little change this week either in stocks or prices. The conditions are normal, supply being quite up to demand, and while no large stocks are being accumulated the prospects are that a fairly good quantity of butter is yet to be obtained in the Northwest and Manitoba. Since all northern shipments have ceased the demand is restricted more to local requirements. The supply of local fresh-made dairy and creamery from the Fraser Valley districts still continues good. The extremely fine weather, warm and bright, favors the continuance of production, as cattle are out grazing entirely yet, no feeding being necessary.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. T. M. Cuter, secretary of The Acadia Sugar Co., Halifax, is in Toronto on a business trip for a few days.

Mr. J. E. Macfarlane has accepted a position with The Dominion Packing Co., Charlottetown, P.E.I. Mr. Macfarlane, who is an experienced traveller, will represent his firm in New Brunswick and Quebec.

Mr. F. D. Cockburn, of The Pugsley, Dingman Soap Company, of Toronto, who has for so many years covered the territory from Ft. William to Quebec, and introduced "Comfort" Soap to the trade in this district, has been placed in charge of the new distributing depot opened up at 1676 Notre Dame street, Montreal. Mr. Cockburn will look after the jobbing trade in this city and Ottawa. His new quarters at the above address are large and commodious, being well fitted up and conveniently arranged for displaying the large assortment of premiums given away with "Comfort." Mr. Wm. Davies, of the Toronto staff, to whom credit is due for the tasteful and convenient arrangement of the new premises, and who has been in charge since last August, left for Toronto on Saturday to resume his post in the head office.

Mr. Walter L. Baker, representative of Enoch Morgan's Sons, New York, "Sapolio," was met on St. Paul street, Montreal, the other day. Mr. Baker is well known to the grocery jobbing trade, not only of Canada, but the United States as well, as his territory includes every city and town of importance in those countries. As an idea of the amount of travelling Mr. Baker does, it may be stated that in 1902 he never managed to get home to his family at all. During his absence he covered over 25,000 miles.

FREE TO GROCERS.

Two very fetching little brochures have just been issued by United Factories, Limited. One contains 9 illustrations and much useful information regarding Cane's Newmarket washboards. The other "Broom-ology," a very attractive folder, is Boeckh's "offer in black and white." All grocers who send their name and address to United Factories, Limited, will receive these free.

LIVERPOOL MARKETS.

The following cable from Liverpool was received Tuesday afternoon by Mr. Barker in regard to the apple market there on Tuesday, 27th inst.:

"Market active, prices very firm; Baldwins, 14s. 6d. to 17s.; Greenings, 14s. to 17s. 6d.; Spies, 14s. 6d. to 18s.; Russetts, 15s. to 21s.; Kings, 16s. 6d. to 21s. 6d."

These quotations refer to apples arriving in good condition.

INTERVIEW WITH A CEYLON TEA MAN.

AFTER an absence of some two years, Mr. R. Valentine Webster, of The Ceylon Co-Operative Tea Garden Co., was a visitor at the Toronto office of "The Canadian Grocer" last week. Mr. Webster, who is on his 15th tour of the globe, is en route to Ceylon via San Francisco and Australia, and expects to get back to London some time in February.

Mr. Webster, besides his interest in tea, is an enthusiastic military man. He served in the Cape D.M.T. during the South African War and later acted as financial advisor to Lord Milner in the matter of land settlement and repatriation of the distressed districts.

OPENINGS IN SOUTH AFRICA.

There are good openings in South Africa, Mr. Webster thought, for many Canadian products. All meat was being imported, as what cattle were left were needed for transport, oxen for that purpose selling at £22 per head. Wheat and other breadstuffs, lumber, paper, canned goods of all descriptions, including vegetables, were among the supplies which Canada might provide. South Africa also afforded a great field for farm implements.

Clothes, boots and shoes were also imported, the same class of goods being required as here in Canada. He was of the opinion that South Africa would prove a splendid regular market for many years to come. It was a mineral country rather than a farming one. They have not the soil, for one thing, and the labor difficulties further discourage any extensive attempts at agriculture.

EUROPE TAKING TO TEA.

In reply to questions bearing on the progress of Ceylon tea, Mr. Webster said that of late he had been attending more particularly to France and Switzerland. Up to 1899, the year of the Paris Exposition, very little tea was used in Europe. Now, following the English fashion, the five o'clock tea had become quite the thing, and was offered in the best houses where wine had formerly been used exclusively. All this had come about through the influence of the Paris Exposition. In the United States the afternoon tea idea had not become popular.

ST. LOUIS EXHIBITION OUTLOOK.

Mr. Webster had recently been at St. Louis and had gone over the exhibition grounds. They were magnificent, but he anticipated that St. Louis would have the distinction of having the most colossal failure financially in the history of exhibitions, this on account of the great heat during the Summer months and the distance of St. Louis from the more prosperous centres of population.

Ceylon was sending over a commissioner and an assistant. They would have a special court for their exhibition of tea, and the beverage would be served by 25 Singhalese.

India would have a court of her own. There had been a talk of a combined exhibition of Ceylon and India teas, but an agreement could not be reached. Mr. Bleteynden, who had been commissioner for Ceylon at the Chicago Exposition, would have charge of the India tea exhibit at St. Louis.

DEMAND FOR CEYLON GREENS.

At large, Ceylon teas were making satisfactory progress. Ceylon greens were making their way very well in this country. Black teas were a penny a pound more than last year, and in consequence times were very prosperous for the growers. The outlook was certainly firm for blacks. As for greens, they depended altogether on the output. He favored the securing of experts from Japan and China, so that Ceylon might turn out teas exactly similar to these countries. He was also in accord with what Mr. Larkin had said as to the desirability of imitating Formosa Oolongs. There were demands in certain parts of the world for teas of particular style and character and why should not the Ceylon people undertake to meet these demands? They would thus absorb a certain proportion of the tea crops and secure themselves against the possibility of producing more blacks than the requirements demanded.

An improvement which the ceylon tea people should make was in the package they put on the market. The matted packages of China and Japan were away ahead of the packages put on the market by Ceylon and India.

In his travels he found the demand for Ceylons increasing from day to day, and if the people were in a position to supply the particular styles demanded, he believed there would be much more exported to foreign countries.

Mr. Webster was the guest of Sir Thomas Lipton during the yacht races, and was with his party until the baronet sailed for home on the Cedric on October 9.

A NEW WHOLESALE WAREHOUSE.

THE Canadian grocery trade are following with considerable interest a new departure of one of the most prominent firms in the trade, Perkins, Ince & Co., Toronto, who have recently established a branch in the busy and progressive town of Peterborough.

With its central location and desirable shipping facilities the firm has selected a splendid point of distribution, and good results should accrue to the grocery trade of that locality in the shape of reduced freights and expedition in delivery.

The business of the branch will be conducted in the large building formerly occupied by The McAllister Milling Co., near the G.T.R. station, which is admirably adapted for the purpose.

The interior has been entirely remodelled to meet the requirements of the business and separate rooms have been devoted to each department.

An electric system has been installed throughout and the whole equipment of the warehouse is now of the most modern description.

The offices and sample rooms are handsomely furnished in natural wood, with hardwood polished floors, and have an extremely neat and business-like appearance.

Mr. John A. Cameron, who has for a number of years represented the Toronto firm in this section, will be manager of the business and Mr. T. D. Mulholland, for a long time prominently connected with the head office of the company in Toronto, will superintend the office affairs and reside in Peterborough.

The firm are highly satisfied with the volume of business already transacted, which has been in excess of their expectation, and, from the encouragement already received, have every reason to be sanguine as to the outlook.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, Oct. 26, 1903.

TRADE continues very active and the Fall movement of groceries is in excess of that of last year. Apple shipments at this port are very heavy, and the Dominion Atlantic Railway has had to secure additional rolling stock from other lines, in order to prevent a freight blockade at Valley points. The outlook all over the province is excellent with the exception of the western shore, where the shortage in the fisheries is beginning to be felt by traders. It is not the vessel owners who are affected, as these are in a position to stand the reverse, but the crews are not in so fortunate a position. Many of the men are indebted to local merchants for goods supplied their families during the Spring and Summer, and now that the catch has been a failure, have no money to pay these accounts, and, of course, merchants are indisposed to carry them over into next season. There is a good deal of railway construction work in progress, and those who do not go into the Winter fishery, will no doubt be able to fine employment that will enable them to pay cash for supplies for current requirements, but will not likely be able to wipe off the old scores. Traders in these sections, therefore, are without the considerable sums of money they expected to receive, with which to meet their own payments.

Flour continues steady, although some Ontario mills are reported to be filling orders below their quotations of two weeks ago. Others are still very firm in their ideas. There has been a general advance in retail prices in this city. Manitoba flours are firm and the price here would be much higher but for the fact that some jobber secured a large stock some time ago and has continued selling below the present mill prices. Cornmeal is easier, having declined 10c. Rolled oats are very firm at a slight advance. There is a firmer local feeling in beans than a week ago. Pork, beef and lard are all slightly easier than a week ago. Burning oils have advanced ½c.

Feeds of all kinds are firm and sales have been made at slightly higher quotations. Oats are expected to advance in view of the condition of the Ontario and Chicago markets. Several cargoes of P. E. Island produce are to arrive this week. As yet the only island produce offering has come by steamer and rail and quotations afford little criterion of what the market situation will be when supplies can be had in bulk ex vessel. The Nova Scotia potatoes have been taken by rot, and these are now about out of the market. In view of this, high prices are expected to rule for P. E. Island potatoes, and it is not likely any will be bought this season at the wharves under 35 or 40c.

At the moment, dairy produce is very firm. About ten days ago the cheese market weakened and factories accepted lower prices. This was followed by cable orders to dealers here, with the result that quotations advanced sharply to the former figure, and, just at the moment, there is quite a scramble to obtain possession of the September make. Butter is also firmer, and the best quality is none too plentiful. Eggs have further advanced and are jobbing here at 19 and 20c. for straight gathered stock.

Codfish has advanced 20c. per quintal all around. The Summer catch of Bank fish is now selling ex vessel at $5. There is a great scarcity of grocery grades of both cod and herring. Spring mackerel have advanced 50c. per barrel, and all lots offering are quickly bought up, chiefly for the American market.

* * *

Sugar is unchanged for the week, although the increased demand following the recent decline has subsided. Molasses keeps firm at the quotation ruling for the last two months. Pending the arrival at this port of the dried fruit steamer Bellona, there is nothing to report in dried fruits. Jobbing prices of No. 1 British Columbia salmon have been advanced 25c. per case, $5.50 now being asked. Canned beef and lunch tongue have been advanced 10c. per case.

CANADIAN TRADE WITH THE WEST INDIES.

A REPRESENTATIVE of "The Canadian Grocer" had the pleasure of an interview this week with Mr. J. Russell-Murray, representative in Canada of the Imperial Department of Agriculture for the British West Indies, at his office at No. 27 St. Sacrament street, Montreal. The Imperial Department of Agriculture for the British West Indies is under the control of Sir Samuel Morris, K.C., M.G., and Mr. Murray represented this department for several years in Trinidad. Owing to the importance of, and with the view of developing more fully, trade between Canada and the West Indies, and with the view of thoroughly studying the conditions of trade in Canada, Mr. Murray has been appointed to the Canadian branch. Mr. Murray will have the assistance of Mr. Alex. Wills, who has been for many years a merchant dealing particularly in West Indian products. The work laid out is a very comprehensive one, covering as it does the entire interest of the West India Islands, and ports of the Caribbean Sea, including as well, Cuba, Porto Rico, Barbadoes, Dominica, etc. Mr. Murray is convinced that one of the most important features in connection with the proper handling of business between the various British possessions in the South, and Canada, is the improvement in the steamship service, faster boats and more frequent sailings being necessary, as well as quicker rail connection between Toronto, Montreal and Halifax. As conducted at present the volume of trade passes through American channels via New York.

It is also the opinion of Mr. Murray that there should be established in the large cities of Canada permanent exhibitions of all West India products, the said exhibitions to be in charge of competent officials, so that clear, definite and positive information could be furnished enquirers. These exhibitions should be run on business principles, that is to say quotations should at all times be available and information furnished to inquirers as to where the various goods, and through which commercial channels same may be obtained.

In order to further disseminate information, Mr. Murray proposes to work up an interchange of British West India newspapers, which will be deposited on the tables of the Boards of Trade, as well as on the files of the prominent public libraries in Canada, and will also arrange to have the principal Canadian news and trade papers sent down to the various Chambers of Commerce and libraries throughout the West Indies.

These three features, namely: Improved steamship service, permanent exhibitions, and interchange of papers between the West Indies and Canada, Mr. Murray thinks are most important, and his efforts will be devoted to having them put through.

One of the features complained of by Mr. Murray and so reported, has reference to the landing in West India ports of Canadian flour, the same having been received in a very disappointing condition. It failed to keep well during the voyage with the result that there was very little enquiry for it. Shipments lately sent out have not paid costs. The fault, Mr. Murray claims, lies with the Canadian shippers who have sent out a great deal of flour made from Manitoba wheat, and this, experience has proved, will not stand the excessive heat of the tropics and arrives in a spoilt condition. It is his opinion that Ontario flour would better answer the purpose.

Mr. J. Russell Murray.
Representative Imperial Department of Agriculture for the British West Indies.

Regarding the trade in Barbadoes molasses, it may be said that there has been quite a lot of complaint made to the Barbadoes shippers by Canadian merchants on account of the bad condition of the molasses upon arrival in Canada. It is said the use of old puncheons is, in a measure, to blame for this and at the meeting of the shippers of molasses on the island it was decided to use new puncheons for each shipment instead of old ones as formerly. Canada is a large consumer of Barbadoes molasses, particularly throughout the Maritime Provinces, Quebec and Eastern Canada, and it is of vital importance that this trade should be handled in a proper manner.

Mr. Murray has set himself the task of endeavoring to remove the existing complaints and encouraging this industry. In the opinion of your representative, formed during the interview he had with Mr. Murray, if systematic work and energy, combined with a thorough knowledge of the conditions prevailing in the West Indies, count for anything in the realization of better trade between the two sections of the Empire interested, Mr. Murray and Mr. Wills will reap the thanks of merchants and shippers interested in this intercolonial trade. "The Canadian Grocer," as the leading trade journal of Canada, has for many years worked hard to interest Canadian manufacturers and shippers in trade with the West Indies, and is ready at all times to do all it can to encourage and develop this trade.

DRINK TEA AND BE STRONG.

Under the heading "Paradoxes of Diet," a writer in The St. James's Gazette says that the peoples that drink most tea and alcohol are the most dominant powers. Tea is the essential drink of progress. In a single century Australia has made itself, and the Australian beats the rest of the world by drinking seven and a half pounds of tea in twelve months. The Canadians manage six pounds, which is also the quantity that the home-bred John Bull requires to quench his thirst. The American has a preference for coffee which, added to his tea, makes him drink no less than the Britisher. On the other hand, Germany's national depression is distinctly due to her consumption of a mere two ounces of tea per head per annum. When the Russian backs up his one pound of tea with more meat he will go ahead, for if tea spells enterprise, beef means strength. Just to test this look at the opposite side. The Spaniards drink only half a pint of tea in a year. No wonder he is depressed and bankrupt.

A STARCH WINDOW.

John Robertson & Son, St. Catherine street, Montreal, who secured second prize in the late competition for window dressing, are this week showing a magnificent display of starch products, the entire window containing every form of starch, starch products, syrups, by-products, etc., turned out by The Edwardsburg Starch Co., Ltd. There are also a number of splendid table preparations such as puddings, cakes, jellies, etc., which demonstrate the uses to which the articles displayed can be put. Mr. Robertson's young window dresser is an artist, and this window excels, if anything, the one submitted in the recent competition. Mr. Sadler, of The Edwardsburg Starch Co., also assisted in the arrangement of this interesting display.

Window and Interior Displays

Timely Hints and Suggestions.

THIS window, decorated by Daniel McGeen for J. S. Henderson, must have attracted considerable attention on the streets of Kingston.

The main feature of the scheme is the reproduction of Fairbank's soap factory, built up of soap bars and containing 34 windows. Even the waterspouts are not forgotten. Around the building sand is strewn to imitate the streets, and drays are busy loading and unloading.

At one side was a young girl busy washing at a tub, with Fairbank's soap, and on the other side a couple of boys showing each other and the public the use of Copco soap for a shampoo. Live figures of any kind are always a great attraction.

Various notices are painted on cardboard and placed in different positions, such as "Fairbank's glycerine tar soap cleanses and heals," "Copco soap, pure, white and floating," "N.K. Fairbank Co. cottolene," etc., and on the window are the words, "Fairbank's products save $50, with a $50 bill completing the sentence.

All these things are excellent and would have been of the greatest interest and a good advertisement, but the general effect is somewhat marred by the stacking at the sides of various productions of the Fairbanks Co. The height of these stacks overtopped the part of the window that would attract attention, and thus detracted from their value. Fairbank's soaps and the fact that they were handled by Wm. Henderson would have been just as fully demonstrated by the use only of the factory and figures, and a much neater, more conspicuous window would have been the result. It is in the detail work that the most faults are apt to occur. Mr. McGeen certainly captured a good idea in the working out of the factory and the use o the children ; then the blank spaces would no doubt stand out so conspicuously as to seem to call for something to fill them, but it is very often the vacancies that bring out the occupied spots.

FOUR WAYS OF DISPLAYING BRUSHES.

By L. J. L., Toronto.

MERCHANTS are often at a loss for original ideas for the display of brushes of various kinds. It is well that at this season of the year such lines of this as have, in many cases, been placed away in some obscure corner or shelves, should be brought forth and made use of in store decoration and window display. There is little difficulty in showing to good advantage various lines of brushes, if the retailer or some of his clerks would start out to get ideas on the subject.

An excellent way to procure such ideas is to get pointers from any traveller selling these lines. The salesmen, in moving about from place to place, never fail to notice many of the best plans of displaying goods in their line, both in windows and in store interiors. The following methods of showing brushes in windows may be of interest to wide-awake storekeepers:

(a) Make a frame of wood to suit the window: cut poultry netting to size of frame; fasten netting on frame; paint frame and netting dull shade. Paint and varnish brushes can be placed between the meshes of wire without injury to them. If care and ingenuity is devoted to the work the brushes can be arranged to show to excellent advantage on such a frame.

(b) A simple but effective display of scrubbing brushes can be made by fastening small screw hooks to end of scrubbing, stove, shoe and whitewash brushes and by arranging them in designs. For instance, four strings of brushes can be connected from the four corners of the window to meet in the centre. With this could be shown a display of various house-cleaning goods.

(c) Take some wooden hoops from an ordinary barrel; wind around the hoops some turkey red cotton or other suitably colored material. Place screw hooks in the inside and attach brushes. Hang the hoops at a slight incline, so that the top or front brushes will not hide the back or lower ones. This can easily be changed, making inexpensive but excellent displays. They can be used inside the store as well as the window. It would be well to change the brushes frequently, so that they might not become shop-worn.

(d) Secure heads of barrels; join firmly together; cover with some colored material; lay on brushes, the large ones on the outer edges and the small ones at the centre; use black tape to tack firmly over brush handles to keep them in position. When completed you have two circles on a large wheel of brushes, which will look well when hung up in the window or near the brush and painters' supply shelves.

The writer would like to see opinions from retailers who have tried such displays and have watched closely the results. It would also be interesting to hear of other plans of displays by other travellers or retailers.

FLOUR AND CEREAL FOODS

We Must Follow Up Osaka.

THE GROCER has already drawn attention on more occasions than one to the necessity of following up the triumph won by our Canadian flour at the Osaka Exhibition by a vigorous selling campaign in the Orient. In this stand we are supported by a business man who is on the spot, who was present at the Osaka Exhibition and who is thoroughly conversant with the conditions prevailing and the difficulties to be overcome in capturing the market of the East for our Canadian foodstuffs. The letter of Mr. Andrew R. Tufts in the last issue of "The Grocer," should be carefully perused by every business man who has goods to sell which might find a market in the East.

The impression made by our flour was such as to be referred to in envious terms by the American consular reports. The superiority of our flour over the American product was thoroughly demonstrated to the Japs, who, as a nation, have shown themselves able to recognize a good thing as soon as your occidental.

What is necessary? Simply salesmen. The way has been opened by the exhibition. An opportunity of unexcelled promise is opened to the enterprising firm that goes after the business. Business in the East does not come unsolicited any more than in the West.

But what has been done? Mr. Tufts informs us that outside of insurance men he has not met a single "man of the road" from Canada.

What is the use of voting funds from the Dominion Treasury? What is the use of sending our Minister of Agriculture to the Island Kingdom of the East, if, after all, our Canadian business men are to sit apathetic and allow the interest aroused and the enthusiasm generated for Canadian flour to be dissipated, or, more likely, to be turned by clever American drummers to swell the volume of oriental trade which the United States is building up with notable rapidity?

We are accustomed to look across the Atlantic for our markets and to turn our backs upon the Asiatic millions who face our western borders. The Japanese and Chinese are, it is true, as yet small consumers per head, but they are surely, if slowly, learning to consume occidental products, and, in the next quarter century their trade will aggregate an enormous amount. Now is our chance to get a footing. Let us build up a market for our foodstuffs and other trade will follow. Trade induces trade, and the day may yet come when this Canada of ours is the highway of commerce between Europe and Eastern Asia.

In the meantime the important thing is to put our flour on the Japanese market, and if our manufacturers have not the connections or facilities for so doing, the Government should provide the machinery at once. In any event it would be disastrous to allow the present magnificent opportunity to escape our grasp.

An Opportunity for Oat Products.

REFERENCE was made in last week's "Grocer" to the fact that oats in the United States have turned out a light sample and that one of the large cereal companies of the United States was finding difficulty in securing first-class oats for its purposes.

This news should be suggestive to Canadian manufacturers of breakfast foods. Our Canadian oats are of a uniformly good sample, and the yield generally is high. Such being the case the time is opportune to push the sale of our oat products in the markets of the world.

Even ordinarily we produce oats that are unexcelled anywhere, and this year should be taken advantage of to impress the fact upon the consumer in lands which are unacquainted with it.

For many years the oat was the staple breakfast food. Of late, it may be remarked, other cereal breakfast foods have won an enormous popularity, but it may well be doubted that this has in any way affected the consumption of the old Scotch staple. In fact, the effect has been to increase the consumption of prepared oats.

The triumphant advertising campaign of cereal foods has introduced these wholesome foods into thousands of homes where heretofore they were unknown, and the aggregate consumption at present would have seemed incredible a few years ago.

American manufacturers have won their success by taking advantage of every opportunity to push their products in every market available. With more meritorious raw material, our success will be the greater if we put the same energy in extending our business as has characterized our American friends and rivals across the line.

Canada has too long been content to send her natural products abroad in the raw state. The problem of the future is to secure the profits of manufacture for ourselves by working up our own raw materials and exporting only in the finished state.

Breadstuffs in Trinidad.

Gordon, Grant & Co., of Port of Spain, Trinidad, in their Commercial Review of October 8, report the arrival during the preceding fortnight of the ss. Maraval and Piemonte with the usual full assortment of breadstuffs. These additional supplies coming on the already ample stocks at the present dull season weakened values generally, and, although most articles are offered at comparatively low rates, the demand for all American breadstuffs is light. All grades of flour are moving slowly. Bakers' quality is quoted at $6.25 to $6.40; No. 1 extra, $5.80 to $5.85; superfines, $4.30 to $4.50. Some 200 barrels of No. 2 Canadian extras, ex ss. Ocemo, sold at $4.60 to $4.80. Cornmeal is in supply and moving slowly at $4.25.

The preceding report from the same firm complained that Canadian flours had not kept well and were in consequence in slight demand.

Cleaning the Farmers' Wheat.

AT the last annual meeting of the Indiana Grain Dealers' Association C. W. Tuttle, a mill buyer, read a paper giving some of his experience in adopting machinery to clean wheat brought in by farmers.

We paid them, he said, for the cleaned wheat and gave them back the dirty screenings. Then the trouble began. We were called thieves and robbers and sometimes worse. It gave the shippers an opportunity to say to the farmer: "Don't take your wheat to the mills; they will clean it for you, while we will pay you for 'dirt' and all." This argument is still being used in many localities.

The question is, What do the shippers do with all this dirt? Must they not guess how much their wheat will be "blowed" in order to make it grade? The screenings are worth more to the farmer than to any other person, and more than the "account of sales" from your commission house allows the shipper.

Now, I desire to ask whether as shippers of wheat you are not the purchasing agents of millers? Some millers must grind the wheat, or most of it, that you ship. If this is true, then do not the conditions upon which wheat is bought affect us similarly? Why not eradicate the anxiety as to how your wheat is going to grade in the market? The installation of receiving separators in your elevators will relieve this anxiety and often hard feelings against your commission houses. Put in the separators; give the farmer back his screenings and you will have less trouble. The hard things your farmer friends say about you at the start will soon pass over, as has been the result in our case. Patience and a little reasoning will prove to them that they are in the wrong, and that the only right and the most satisfactory way to buy wheat, both for the buyer and for the seller, is to clean the wheat before you weigh it.

Show the farmer the dirty screenings and ask him if he wants flour made from that kind of stuff. He will invariably say, "No, sir." Then say to him that some mill must grind this wheat, and that the mill must clean it in order to have its flour equal to its neighbor's. The farmers will soon agree with you that the only right way to buy wheat is over a receiving separator.

Biscuit Factory in Barbados.

United States Consul Macallister, writing from Barbados under date of August 25, 1903, reports the establishment of a large biscuit factory at Barbados. It is expected to cut off the importation of biscuits from the United States, which amounts to about 3,842,360 pounds per annum, valued at from $120,000 to $125,000. Flour from the United States, at least to a certain extent, will take the place of the biscuits.

Macaroni Wheat.

ONE day recently macaroni wheat sold at 67 cents in Minneapolis when No. 2 Northern was bringing 82 cents. A number of Dakota and Minnesota farmers were induced to raise crops of macaroni wheat because of the large yield, and now they are kicking loudly against what they term the injustice of elevator men and millers in discriminating against it.

Macaroni wheat is flinty in composition and millers would have difficulty in handling it on ordinary machinery. The flour is very different from ordinary kinds and so far the market for it is very limited, and those who do buy expect to get it for less than the market price of standard grades.

There is undoubtedly a place for macaroni wheat in our commercial system, but that place has not been fixed as yet and probably will not be until the grain is taken up as a distinct product, such as barley or buckwheat, and handled on machines and sold in markets especially prepared for it.

Bean Dealers Unite.

A despatch from Ridgetown, the centre of the Western Ontario bean district, says that the bean dealers of that locality met there last week to form a joint stock company for dealing in beans. This action has originated on account of dealers not having made any money in the product during the past few years, owing to over speculation and false reports of prices in other towns, and no regulation price to the consumer. This new company proposes to make known its plans to the farmers, and to do business on as small a margin of profit as possible, and assure the farmer as high a price for his beans as the markets of the world will allow.

Charge for Grain Samples.

The Grand Trunk Railway has issued a circular to the effect that hereafter a charge of 40 cents per bag will be made for samples of grain obtained from the company's agents at Sarnia and North Bay.

The circular states that the practice of asking for samples of shipments of Manitoba and Northwest grain, consigned to North Bay and Sarnia, has been increasing, that this is a service which the railway is not called upon to perform, and therefore the above charge will be imposed. The grain men are also instructed to supply their own bags for samples desired.

Beans a Fair Average.

Mr. N. H. Stevens, of Chatham, is of the opinion that there will be sufficient beans for the Canadian trade this year despite the unfavorable conditions. Under a recent date he writes:

"The last ten days I have been over the bean-growing part of our country pretty well, and the beans are now all in the barns. The acreage was more than last year, but owing to the wet season last Spring many fields were destroyed by water, and the very wet Fall we have had the bean crop has been badly damaged, and a great many beans that have been put in the barns have not been thoroughly dry, which will make the threshing very late. If they are held until cold weather before threshing they will turn out hard and dry, but if threshed early the bean will be soft and will not look clean. I think, however, upon the whole that the crop of beans for 1903 will be about an average with the crop of 1902, so that we need not look for any cheap beans this year, and yet we will have enough to supply the Canadian trade."

Grain Rate Broken

Montreal steamship companies have been notified that the minimum grain rate agreement entered into a year ago with all Canadian, American and English steamship companies has been broken by the American lines running out of Boston. As the season of open navigation will close next month the breaking of the agreement will have little effect on the St. Lawrence, although disappointment is expressed that the Boston lines have found it advisable to take such action. The minimum rate agreement, which was made a year ago, placed the lowest rate at three cents a bushel, and the Boston companies have now started shipping at a two and a half cent rate. Vessels from Montreal secure three and three-eights to three and three-quarters a bushel at present.

Napoli Macaroni Co.

A new industry for Toronto and Canada is the manufacture of macaroni. The Napoli Macaroni Co. have recently secured premises and begun the manufacture of this Italian staple at the corner of Hayter and Teraulay streets, Toronto. Mr. Cecil Morris is the manager of the new company which is turning out plain and fancy macaroni, vermicelli, etc. The goods are put up in the ordinary bulk form and also in very handsomely got up pound packages.

Tailings.

The exports of American flour to Hongkong in 1892 were 457,690 barrels, and in 1902, 1,298,893 barrels, an increase of 941,203 barrels.

Toronto brewers are accused of bearing the barley market.

SUGAR BEETS PROFITABLE.

Mr. J. H. Barnes, of London, England, who is visiting Canada for the purpose of inquiring into the beet sugar industry and the prospects that Canada affords for the growing of beets on an extensive scale, said in the course of an interview recently: "The great difficulty that is met with by a sugar factory when first started is to get a full supply of beets, and to make the farmers understand that the cultivation of beets is a profitable venture, with little, if any, risk attached thereto. Germany is, of course, the home of the sugar beet industry, and there are some splendid concerns over there that turn out a fine quality of sugar. The main thing is to get the farmer to go in for beet cultivation. Beets will grow anywhere, and require very little attention."

BANANA INDUSTRY OF GUATEMALA.

THE production of bananas in Guatemala is a very profitable industry when carried on systematically and in an up-to-date manner, writes U. S. Consul-General Winslow from Guatemala City. The best soil for banana culture is in the eastern part of the Republic, in the provinces of Izabal and Zacapa, where about 75 per cent. of the soil is well adapted to the cultivation of bananas. This section of the country is in close connection with the United States via the United Fruit Company's Steamship Line, which makes regular weekly trips.

The soil is very productive and easily cultivated after being cleared and subdued. The average price received is 20 cents United States gold per bunch of five hands or more. What is known as a hand is the cluster of eight or ten bananas found attached to the stem close together. The more hands on a stem the higher the price, and bunches of less than five hands are not shipped. The clearing, planting and cultivating of a banana plantation the first year costs, on an average, about $20 per acre, but thereafter the cost is very light. After the sixth year the quality of the crop deteriorates, for the number of the small bananas increases. The crop is quite sure, and is only affected materially by the rains.

At present there is a large opening in this field, with very good shipping facilities to the port by the Guatemala Northern Railway. The capital required is not very great, and can be gotten out of the first two crops, with a good profit besides.

The principal drawback to this industry for a foreigner is the unhealthy climate. The banana country is low and hot. However, native help is cheap, costing from 5 to 7 cents gold per day, and usually plenty of it can be had.

This same soil readily produces rice, rubber, cocoa, oranges, and lemons, but the banana crop gives quicker returns than any of the others.

Bananas are often grown in connection with the growing of a rubber plantation, being planted between the small rubber trees, and five or six good crops can be harvested before the rubber plants get in the way.

TOMATO PASTE OR CHEESE.

The Philadelphia Record in a recent issue contained an article of interest to the progressive canner who is on the look out for the use of all by-products of his factory. It states :

"Now that the tomato canning season is nearing a close, an industry allied to it is starting up—the canning of the refuse from the tomatoes. There are three factories, beside the one here, that make 'Italian Paste,' or cheese, as it is called. The pulp and skins of tomatoes that have been canned are made into the paste. The mixing is done in a large trough similar to a mortar bed, stirred with hoes and shoveled into buckets and carried into the canning department.

"The cheese is principally shipped to Europe, but is gaining favor in New York, where a delicate soup is made from it."

While this description is not quite clear enough, and the methods used in making this "tomato cheese" are very crude, according to the description, nevertheless a new use is indicated for tomato pulp. However, the public would hardly take to an article produced in such fashion.

CANADIAN OYSTERS.

The London correspondent of The Toronto Telegram cables the following complaint of a London oyster dealer :

"I have been buying American oysters from a firm who deal very largely in oysters in Liverpool, and I asked them if they could not make arrangements to get over some Malpeque oysters from Quebec. I did not see why we should not have the fine large Canadian oysters here instead of the American. The enclosed letter is their reply. It just shows you how almost everything is sent from Canada. There is no doubt a large trade could be done in Canadian oysters if they would only take pains to select them or grade them."

The Liverpool firm referred to state in reply to this letter:—"We have had Malpeque oysters in years gone by, but they did not suit this market. We never could get the shippers to cull them into sizes, nor pack them properly." It is now up to the Canadian packer in this line of fish to explain why he won't cull as desired and pack properly.

MACARONI JOURNAL.

We are in receipt of the initial number of The Macaroni and Noodle Manufacturers' Journal, a monthly publication issued from Cleveland, O., in the interests of the macaroni and noodle industry of America. The new journal is a highly creditable production from a typographical point of view, and contains a great deal of very interesting matter including an illustrated description of a macaroni and noodle factory. The new paper has set itself a high standard in its first issue.

No Egyptian Cigarettes.

TOBACCO dealers are ready to indorse a conclusion arrived at some time ago by a certain celebrated showman. They have come to the opinion that the public likes to be humbugged. The cause for this opinion is found in the Egyptian cigarette.

The popularity of the Egyptian cigarette is enormous, and it is asserted that of the 500 varieties on the market 90 per cent. of them have as little connection with Egypt as a Pittsburg stogie. A tobacco seller, explaining this, said:

"In the first place, there is no such thing as Egyptian tobacco. The culture of the leaf is forbidden by law in that country. The reason of the prohibition involves a curious chapter in trade history. The best cigarette tobacco of the East is Turkish. Long ago it was found that Turkish tobacco going from Constantinople to Alexandria underwent a sweating which improved its flavor. This gave a prestige to the Egyptian cigarette made of Turkish tobacco, which brought wealth to the manufacturer and a heavy revenue to the State. In order to increase this revenue the Government at one time took measures to grow the leaf in the delta, but the weed proved inferior, and the cigarettes made from it fell flat on the market. The disfavor extended to the legitimate traffic. Manufacturers complained and the Government found a deficit in its returns. To make amends a law was passed forbidding tobacco culture, and ever since the Egyptian cigarette has been made of a fine grade of the Turkish leaf. The country exports a large number of cigarettes and a small quantity of tobacco, not enough, in fact, to make as many so-called 'Egyptians' as are smoked in twenty-four hours in the United States and Great Britain."

A Self-Feeding Pipe.

With some people a little tobacco goes a great way, especially with the boy just learning to smoke; but with others a constant refilling of the bowl is necessary in order to satisfy the craving or habit which has been formed, says The Louisville Courier-Journal.

It is safe to say that the aforesaid boy would have no use for the pipe recently invented by a German, Max F. Hahn. It has an enormous storage capacity, with an automatic feeding arrangement, which presents a fresh smoke as long as there is any unconsumed tobacco in the reservoir. The bowl itself may be made of any desired length, holding all the way from a few short smokes to a quarter or even half a pound, as the smoker may desire. To fill the reservoir it is only necessary to open the cover and push the weed into the opening, pressing the spring cap in the bottom of the chamber as the feeding goes on. The spring serves to feed the tobacco upwards again to the top of the pipe, where it is ignited through the perforted cover.

In drawing the smoke through the walls of the combustion chamber a forced draft is maintained, and as the tobacco is consumed the ashes are forced upwards by the spring and can be dislodged by jarring the pipe. When laid down the pipe soon goes out of its own accord, but is always ready for relighting as long as any tobacco remains.

Tobacco Culture in Rhodesia.

MR. GEORGE ODLUM, a native of Michigan, but now located in Rhodesia, South Africa, has been sent to America by the Rhodesian Government to gather information about the cultivation and the various types of tobacco in this country.

He says the Rhodesian Government are very much interested in the matter of making the cultivation of tobacco one of their leading agricultural industries, as the future for it and its manufacture is very promising. The colony of Rhodesia has an area of 750,000 square miles. The native population of Africa is 120,000,000, of which 10,000,000 are in British South Africa.

South Africa is growing rapidly in the march of progression, several of the towns having from 10,000 and upwards of white people, composed of English, Australians, Canadians and Americans. There is some tobacco grown by the natives, but it is rank and used by the negroes.

There was imported into British South Africa last year about 8,000,000 pounds of tobacco, mostly manufactured. The raw leaf tobacco was principally from South America, but it was not held in much favor, being rank, lacking aroma, and put up in a very crude manner.

The country, Mr. Odlum says, affords a bright future for the manufacturing of tobacco, as the natives take to the use of tobacco in all its forms of manufacture, and that the opportunities for a tobacco manufacturer, located in the Rhodesian colony, with the sending of goods to other colonies, affords a fine business opening for a tobacco manufacturer.—Cincinnati Western Tobacco Journal.

Turkish Tobacco Industry.

Turkish tobacco is more in favor than ever, and the contracts which have been made with the Regies as well as with private firms are very large ones. The Austro-Hungarian Regies bought 2,500,000 kilograms more this year than last. Servia and Roumania have also purchased a larger quantity. The American Tobacco Co. has bought a considerable quantity, and Italy has entered the ranks of the largest buyers. Turkish tobacco is the lightest and has the pleasantest perfume of all tobaccos. That is the reason, no doubt, why it is so much appreciated. At Constantinople, in the Pera quarter, there are tobacco shops at the corner of every street, and everyone smokes the cigarette. In the Galata quarter, long lines of silent men smoke the narghile with supreme gravity. On the other side of the Kadikeni Bridge and past the famous mosques of Kyrie-Gami and Saint Gonnes there are shops where one can procure all that is necessary for smoking, and also see everything being prepared for your use. Of the workpeople who are gathered together in the bazars, some are smoking, others working, others murmuring verses from the Koran. In one place cigar and cigarette holders are being made out of amber; in another the same things are made out of celluloid or wood, or pipes are being made. In the Turkish public offices the officials all have cigarettes between their lips.

Mr. M. Gould.

There are a great many readers of this department who will at once recognize in the accompanying cut the jovial features of Mr. M. Gould, eastern and Sault representative of Brener Bros., London. Mr. Gould, as is readily apparent from his picture, is of that jovial and affable disposition which makes for success on the road. That his picture does not belie his abilities there is his firm's word for it.

Mr. M. Gould, Cigar Traveller.

No Smoking in the White House.

The average congressman who goes bustling around from department to department, says an American exchange, is inclined to smoke where he listeth and knock the ashes from his cigar where he pleases, says the Washington correspondent of The Philadelphia Press. The practice is all right for the ante-rooms of Cabinet officers, but President Roosevelt thought it should not be carried into the White House reception room. So he gave orders to Arthur Simmons, the colored doorkeeper from North Carolina, to request gentlemen not to smoke. Arthur Simmons had a number of strenuous interviews in carrying out his instructions. Southern and Western congressmen were frequently moved to consign Arthur to a superheated climate for his pains. Arthur is one of the pillars of the church in colored circles, and he finally complained to Secretary Cortelyou that it pained him to hear gentlemen using such violent language. At his request the "No Smoking Allowed" sign has been posted in the reception room, and when gentlemen come in with lighted cigars Arthur merely looks meaningly toward the sign.

Whiffs.

He who has trade has an estate, and trade must be looked after just as carefully as the largest estate, and requires equally as competent management and executive ability, and constant and untiring efforts to please customers.

It is extremely unwise for the tobacconist to buy goods that he does not want or for which there is no call, simply because they are cheap, or the salesman is a sleek talker. Do not buy goods until you have repeated calls for them or are a good judge of quality, and find that you can please your customers and at the same time make a good profit on the lot. By following this plan closely there will be less dead stock on the shelves when inventory time comes around.

DEPARTMENT OF ADVERTISING SUGGESTION AND CRITICISM

Edited by
W. Arthur Lydiatt,
TORONTO.

NOTE—Herein are discussed the principles and practice of advertising. Subscribers are invited to send Mr. Lydiatt specimens of their newspaper and other advertising, for the purpose of review in this department. Address care of Department of Advertising THE CANADIAN GROCER.

A Business Man Doesn't Know His Business if He Doesn't Advertise it.

THE benefit a man may derive from good advertising can scarcely be over-estimated. This proposition, broad as it is, will probably pass unchallenged among those who have studied the subject carefully. But it does not tell the whole story.

If all advertising were good it would be sufficient to say that it is of incalculable benefit to business. The statement would be incapable of refutation, and most people would be willing to let it go at that.

Unfortunately, however, all advertising is not good advertising. There is, therefore, a possibility that an advertisement may be an injury rather than a benefit. This fact emphasizes the necessity of using care and judgment in the preparation of business announcements.

An advertisement that is carelessly and injudiciously constructed may produce an effect entirely different from what is intended or desired. It may create an impression by no means favorable to the advertiser.

The public are very likely to form an estimate of a merchant's character by reading his advertisements. If the statements contained in them do not ring true, the false notes are quickly detected. The opinion that a merchant is insincere or unreliable is frequently formed by the reading matter that he puts in print. His advertisement forms the criterion by which his character is judged by all who are not intimately acquainted with him. Impressions thus formed may make the public suspicious of him and his goods, or may keep them away from his store altogether.

It is evident, then, that a merchant should use the utmost care in the preparation of his advertising matter. If he attempts to mislead and deceive the public, the chances are, that, instead of attracting them to his store, he will arouse suspicion and distrust that will tend to keep them away. If he undertakes to injure a rival he may find that the missile he hurls will recoil upon himself. If he does not believe the statements he makes he cannot reasonably expect to inspire others with confidence in them.

If he tries to be funny he may only succeed in being coarse; and his bufoonery may give offence to some of his best customers. And, most important of all, if his advertisements do not contain the information the public want, he will have missed the chief aim of advertising, and will have no cause for surprise if the results prove unsatisfactory.

On the other hand, if he sets about the preparation of his advertisements with a determination to tell the public what they want to know, he will have taken the first step in the right direction. If he has full confidence in his goods and the fairness of his prices he will be in a position to inspire his readers with confidence, and be able to convince them that it is to their interest to trade with him.

If he can prepare an advertisement that will awaken the interest and arouse the curiosity of those who read it, he need not worry so much about its attractiveness. The best kind of attractiveness an advertisement can have is the kind that gives a personal interest in the matters on which it treats. Of course, the more attractively written it is, the better it will be; and to have it attractively printed will make it more likely to be read by those who are not customers. But, after all, the most important thing is the information it contains. If a merchant can prepare an announcement in which the public will take a lively personal interest, he will have a good advertisement in the best and fullest meaning of the word. And if he backs up his statements and promises to the letter, he may rest assured that each ad will prove of direct benefit to his business.

Advertising Deeds.

The following item, clipped out of a recent Hamilton advertisement, illustrates the ridiculousness of becoming profuse in describing the commoner articles of every-day use. The impression is prevalent in some quarters that every ad. must be a poetical, flighty description—such, for instance, as "The glorious sunlight and redolent air of the green country fields glistens through the pinky white pearly shells of these beautiful Brahma eggs; regular 15c. a dozen, special on Saturday at 12½c."

Notice the Hamilton specimen, now:

China Department

It would be worth your while to take a look through our collection of Fine China. We have a magnificent range gathered from all parts of Europe.

6-gallon Crocks, special	50c.
4-gallon Crocks, special	39c.
200 White Oyster Bowls, each	5c.
60 dozen Printed Cups and Saucers worth up to $1.00 dozen, Saturday, each	5c.
Decorated Milk Pitchers, each	15c.

If it is the practice to refer to the common china oyster bowls and cups and saucers as belonging to "a collection of fine imported china," one would hardly know what to expect if induced to visit the advertiser's store through his graphically descriptive advertisements. If he advertises a fine collection of paintings, we might expect to be referred to the paint department, or if a beautiful array of the season's fashionable dress fabrics were advertised, it might not be surprising to find that that array mentioned referred to prints and wrapperettes.

It is not always necessary to speak of goods in glowing terms, or to misrepresent them in any way, in order to make them sell. I recall an instance where a grocer advertised to sell some fruit that wasn't fresh at a bargain price. He said, as nearly as I can recall it: "We have several bushels of tomatoes that won't keep over Sunday, and we want you to call around for them to-morrow and secure them at a give-away price."

Don't talk about brass-headed tacks as a fine assortment of brass goods, nor in any other ridiculous way.

Tell just exactly what a thing is and what you want to sell it for, and if it's worth while, your announcement will usually find purchasers.

Solomon said in his haste: "ALL MEN ARE LIARS!" He didn't mean it. He was simply so mad with one man that he included all the rest.

Let us not fall into Solomon's mistake. We should take out of our experience the wisdom there is in it AND STOP RIGHT THERE!

Otherwise we are as stupid as the cat who sat down on a hot stove lid. She will never sit down on a hot stove lid again, and that shows good judgment. BUT SHE WILL NEVER SIT DOWN ON A COLD ONE, EITHER.

Now, some merchants have had hard experiences lately with coupon books that were represented to be absolutely correct in count and made up just as good as any other, but they were not, and you won't know what a perfect coupon book is until you have tried either Allison's Coupon Books or Allison's Coupon Pass Books. Both are good; one book suits some, while the other fills the bill with the rest of the merchants.

We are doing a lot of special engraving work now for merchants who use books in large quantities. Our books are carried in stock by jobbers. We will be glad to send you a free sample.

Cured and Packed
Where Caught!

"Thistle" Brand Canned Fish.

One reason why the "Thistle" Brand of Canned Haddies, Kippered Herrings, etc., retain the rich, delicate flavor of the freshly-caught fish is because they are cured and packed right at the water side where they are caught.

There is no dirt, no slime in the "Thistle" Brand to spoil the natural flavor. There are no "odds and ends" thrown in in a hurry. The "Thistle" Brand contains nothing but carefully-selected fish—only the best will do for the "Thistle" Brand!

The cost per tin, or can, to clean, cure and pack the "Thistle" Brand is without doubt greater than the cost involved in marketing any other Brand in the country, yet the high quality has been steadily maintained from year to year even in the face of strong competition. The "Thistle" Brand competes on quality and not on price. It is the Standard Brand of Canned Fish!

THE MANUFACTURERS AND THE GREAT WEST

A Symposium of Some of Their Impressions Gathered During Their Recent Trip to the Pacific Coast.

MOST of those who took part in the transcontinental excursion of The Canadian Manufacturers' Association saw for the first time the Great West. That they were greatly impressed with what they saw no one will question. There were about 170 in the party. All but about 40 of these were men, and men of business. While pleasure was not ignored, the primary object of the excursion was to afford the members of The Canadian Manufacturers' Association an opportunity of gathering some idea of the vastness and realness of the Great West, and of studying the trade situation in that part of the Dominion. With a view to ascertaining what the impressions were that the journey had made upon the excursionists, "The Grocer" addressed a circular letter to each member of the excursion, on his return home. The questions submitted were :

QUESTIONS SUBMITTED.

FIRST—What most impressed you from a business standpoint during your trip through the Great West to the Pacific Coast?

SECOND—What is your opinion in regard to the future of Manitoba and British Columbia as manufacturing centres?

THIRD—In what way can manufacturers of the east secure a larger share of the trade of the Great West, that now goes to the manufacturing firms in the United States?

FOURTH—How can business men in the east best assist the people of Manitoba, the Territories and British Columbia in developing the natural resources of their respective parts of the country?

All have not yet replied; but space forbids the publication in this issue of even all the answers that have come to hand.

Mr J. Hewton, Kingston Hosiery Co., Limited.

Question 1.—I was most impressed with the extent of the country, the great wheat fields, beautiful scenery, large deposits of coal and minerals, and the prosperous appearance of all the cities, towns and villages.

Question 2.—As regards the future of Manitoba and British Columbia, from a manufacturing standpoint, I think that after they get an addition to their population of say five millions or more, certain lines can be manufactured with advantage, but at the present time with their small population and the fact that a large number of people will be required for some time to develop the natural resources, labor will not be plentiful enough to do much in manufacturing, as they will have to compete with eastern manufacturers, who have a better supply of skilled labor.

Question 3.—I think that the eastern manufacturers have during the past been endeavoring to get as large a share of trade as possible and I see no better method than to put representatives in each centre who will be alert and look after the requirements of the country and keep their houses posted as to what is required to properly supply their wants. Also to see that freight rates are reasonable. There is no trouble for Canadian manufacturers to compete with the United States in all branches under fair conditions, but the tariff should be high enough to prevent United States manufacturers from making a dumping ground of this country and sending their surplus goods here after supplying their customers.

Question 4.—How can we best assist the people of Manitoba? This is a very important question and hard to answer in a direct manner. We can, however, do something by giving them our assistance in getting proper legislation and also in getting as favorable railroad rates as possible so as to enable them to market their products to the best advantage.

Secretary R. J Younge, of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association

While one could not fail to be impressed with the magnificent variety of scenery, and the immensity of the territory, the business man is struck most forcibly by two outstanding facts: First—The tremendous possibilities of the West as a producing and consuming market, and secondly, the buoyancy and optimism of the people which prevails everywhere, from Winnipeg to Victoria. One sees on every side incalculable resources, and finds an unswerving faith in those resources reflected in the spirit which dominates the people.

Undoubtedly Manitoba and British Columbia will become great manufacturing provinces. Their great distance from the producing centres of the east, and their rich supplies of water power and raw material of various kinds will hasten their progress in many lines of industry. Already about $18,000,000 capital is invested in manufacturing in these two provinces. In British Columbia more than 71,000 people, or 40 per cent. of the entire population, are to-day directly supported by and dependent on the manufacturing industries, while in Manitoba 48,000 out of the total of 255,000 are similarly situated. I think it may be estimated with safety that the proportion of the manufacturing interests in the mining province will largely increase within the next few years, and while this can scarcely be expected on the prairies, the farming districts of the West are already alive to the benefits of having factories at their doors, and the manufacturers of both Canada and the United States are awakening to appreciate the West as an important field for active operation.

To secure a larger portion of the western trade Canadian manufacturers must take a deeper interest in the West. They must visit the country personally, study its needs, send their best travellers, and, above all else, send the right goods at the right prices. Many of them are already working on these lines. Their success is certain, for the West is dominated by a hearty Canadian sentiment. No Canadian manufacturer can afford to neglect the western market. Cultivated, it will, in many lines, become his best market; neglected, the trade will undoubtedly fall into the hands of his far-sighted, keen competitor.

To build up the West, and cement the bonds of union, commercially and nationally, between East and West, every citizen of the Dominion should see and learn as much as possible of the great western provinces and territories. A trip through the country will not only elicit the admiration of all Canadians, but will induce the investment of capital, and the establishment of business ties. It is safely estimated that 150,000 people have settled in the Northwest during the present year. These are our own citizens. We should not only welcome them, but by a careful study of their difficulties and a willing assistance in solving them, they will be made to feel proud of their country and their fellow citizens. With our 3,000,000 square miles of territory, and our 5,000,000 population we must all recognize as Canadians, that—as a member of the recent touring party remarked—"Canada is too great, and the task committed to her people too stupendous, to allow her citizens to be disunited on any great national question."

Mr. Joseph Allen, British American Dyeing Co., Montreal.

In reply to your four questions regarding my impression of our Great Northwest, I would say to the first, from a business standpoint, I was astonished at the immense possibilities and certainty of expansion, and the alert business manner of the people, their true loyalty, and the unbending belief they show in their country.

Second: As a manufacturing centre: Our hurried journey through gave no time to look into the details for the necessities of a successful manufacturing centre. I certainly think they could manufacturemany things in Winnipeg to advantage.

British Columbia, I think, will have to wait for further developments.

In what way can manufacturers of the east secure a large share of the trade? Have good men resident there, as far as possible, where they can have a stock to reach the demands quickly.

How we can best assist the people of the West: First give them another transcontinental railway as quick as possible, assist them in any political grievance that they have, and show them by our sympathy and help that we are one people, Canadians.

Mr. E. D. Adams, Halifax, N.S.

First.—"What most impressed me from a business standpoint?"

I think that the universal hopefulness which seems to animate the people, made the greatest impression upon me. They are all optimists out there. As I heard somebody remark, "You cannot find a pessimist with a fine tooth comb." There seems to be something in the air which gets into one's blood. Then I was very much struck by the large scale upon which everything is done, and also with the high-class quality of the goods sold, even in the small towns.

No one could pass through those western provinces and territories to the Pacific coast without feeling satisfied that the business opportunities and possibilities are immense. I mean the term "business opportunities" to include the farmer, the mechanic, the miner and the professional man, as well as the trader and speculator.

The thought occurred to me that the time might come when it will be hard to find a market for all the wheat, but no one out there seems to be losing any sleep over that problem. Of course should this time ever arrive the farmers will have general farming to fall back upon.

As regards the relative merits of the principal cities visited, I think Winnipeg presents the greatest business possibilities. The opinion seems to be very general that it will eventually be "The" city of Canada. Personally, however, I think I would prefer to live in Vancouver or Victoria. Perhaps this is because they seem more like home to one who has lived all his life "down by the sea." Besides, the resources of the Pacific provinces are very great. Lumber, minerals, fisheries, shipping, etc., and, if all those fail, they still have farming and manufacturing left.

It seems hard to realize that the beautiful city of Vancouver has been built up in seventeen short years, and one can allow his imagination to run riot when fancying what it will be in fifty years from now.

Second.—"What is my opinion in regard to the future of Manitoba and British Columbia as manufacturing centres?"

I see no reason why they should not, in time, manufacture a very large portion of the goods required for their own consumption, and in some lines for export also. Coal is to be found conveniently situated in many parts of Manitoba and the Territories, while in British Columbia, coal and minerals abound.

Third.—"In what way can manufacturers of the east secure a larger share of the trade of the Great West that now goes to manufacturing firms in the United States?"

First, by carrying stocks of manufactured goods in the principal centres, and, where this is not practicable, by having local agents. Of course in the latter case the delay in getting delivery and high freight charges, especially for less than carload lots, will always be a drawback. Also by taking pains to produce the exact article that the people want.

Fourth.—"How can business men of the East best assist the people of Manitoba, the Territories and British Columbia in developing the natural resources of their respective parts of the country?"

I am afraid that I can give no very practical answer to this question. I suppose the investment of capital, and the sending out of competent energetic men will be found a means to that end; also by taking every opportunity to inculcate a national sentiment among our people.

And now, may I just say that while at present all roads seem to lead to the "West," will our people please remember that we also have some "good things" in the "East." By the "East" I do not mean Ontario and Quebec only, or chiefly, but away down in the Maritime Provinces.

HOW TO MAKE GOOD COFFEE.

COFFEES after they pass the fire and become roasted contain nothing injurious except what will be brought out by hard boiling more than five minutes, says Food and Drink.

All anyone in making coffee wishes to extract from the ground bean is the essential oil, which mingling with the boiling water produces the so-called coffee used at the table. By hard boiling you go farther and extract what you do not wish, the acid or alkaloid, which nature placed there to protect the germ from the ravages of insects during the process of reproduction. It is a well-known scientific fact that nature surrounds the germ of any seed with acids or alkaloids to protect it from insects or worms during the time which it is placed in the ground to reproduce or germinate again, and when by misuse you bring these down into your solution, you find the result bitter and unpalatable and condemn the coffee. Then also poor, aged cream will spoil any cup of coffee. The majority, in fact all, coffees are more or less acid, and combined with cream of course are very palatable, but let anyone who is under the impression that coffee is injurious to their system educate their taste to "cafe noir" or clear coffee, and they wi,l find it just what it is guaranteed to be, a light stimulant and decidedly not a detriment to any system, no matter how delicate. Combine the acid coffee with poor semi-sour cream and of course it curdles in the stomach and will produce harmful results. All grocers should provide themselves with special bags for their coffees with practical directions for making coffee and the care and cleaning of the utensils used, plainly printed on them.

A MILLION AND A HALF FROM APPLES.

Halifax advices place the average price netted by Nova Scotia orchardists this season at $3 per barrel, which will yield $1,500,000 to the apple growers of Nova Scotia, who are mainly located in Kings and Annapolis Counties.

THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE TINNED MEAT TRADE.

"THE quantity and quality of canned meats on the Canadian market at the present time is 'legion,'" said a prominent Toronto grocer and dealer in produce in a recent interview. "I can remember well when such toothsome preparations as potted chicken and jellied tongue were an unknown quantity in Toronto. That isn't so very far back, either. Forty years ago staple articles like canned and dried beef were still in their natural state—in other words, they were alive in the flesh.

"The only lines of canned goods on the market in the early fifties were prepared mushrooms, peas and sardines, which were imported from France to supply what was then the fancy trade in the larger cities of Canada. It was considerably later than this that salmon canneries began to do an extensive business in British Columbia, and canned salmon retailed at the alarming price of 50c. a tin. Canned vegetables are scarcely out of their teens: the daughters of Canadian pioneers ran their own canning factories.

"A few years ago we began to import canned soups and meats from England, and, until recently, the English article carried off the palm par excellence in Canada. Somehow or other English soups have gone out of fashion, perhaps because they were so expensive, and, further, had a big import duty tacked on. At any rate Canada and the United States now practically have this market to themselves. Canadian and American soups have taken on. We import yearly an enormous quantity of canned soup from New York, and at the same time are proud of the fact that we manufacture one or two brands at home which compare favorably with anything prepared in America or out of it.

"A fad that has already reached alarming proportions is for meat-pastes, popularly known as meat-loaves, viz., ham, veal, tongue, chicken, etc., to infinity, first introduced by Crosse & Blackwell, England, but now prepared all over the country.

"My own impression is that these meat-pastes everyone is buying are practically the same article as we used to sell under such plain, old-fashioned names as jellied tongue, etc. I have an idea that the popularity of this class of goods will be short-lived. It will simply be a repetition of the history of the bicycle. Everything conceivable has already been made up into meat-pastes and manufacturers will have to wait now for a new species of the animal creation to appear."

In answer to the question, "How do you select for your trade a particular line of meat-pastes from the galaxy of probably good, bad and indifferent lines submitted by a travelling man?" the answer came: "I generally let some one else do the introducing, and so avoid the risk of imposing an inferior article upon my customers.

"You ask me about displaying such-and-such a line of goods. In the up-to-date grocery store everything has its place: It simply happens because the demand is so great that tinned-meats occupy a prominent position on my shelves."

"Is there any truth in the assertion that Canada as a rule gets cull salmon from British Columbia while the picked article goes straight through for the export trade?"

"It may be true as an exception to the rule, but not otherwise. Canadian merchants not only supply the cheaper lines but also find a home market for large quantities of the choicest sock-eye salmon, prepared in such brands as the 'Horseshoe' and 'Clover Leaf' flats."

Loss of Weight in Eggs.

THE newly-laid egg is entirely filled with yolk and white enveloped by a fragile shell, remarks an exchange. It is at this moment that it possesses its highest alimentary qualities, but the calcareous shell is provided with pores, through which is soon established a cross circulation of water and microbes. The water leaves the albumen and passes to the exterior in the form of vapor, while legions of bacteria enter and fill the air chamber formed by evaporation. This causes the egg daily to lose, on an average, half a grain of its weight. We can assure ourselves of this by immersing it in a quart of water containing four ounces of salt. On the first day it will descend to the bottom; on the second it will not sink to so great a depth; on the third, it will remain near the surface; and, beginning with the fifth, it will project above the surface so much the more in proportion as it is older. Such behavior of the egg in salt water, may, up to a certain point, be used as a means of control. The loss of weight would not be of so much importance if it did not keep pace with the entrance of microbes.

Cattle Embargo Condemned.

At a conference of the Scottish Chambers of Agriculture recently, in Edinburgh, Mr. P. L. Gray moved—"That in the opinion of this conference it is desirable in the interests of agriculture and of the people in this country generally, as also in the interests of the loyal colony of Canada, that the Cattle Disease Act of 1896 should be so amended as to permit the importation of Canadian store cattle." That Act, he held, was passed under the belief, which was afterwards shown to be erroneous, that pleuro-pneumonia had been brought to this country by Canadian cattle. There were no cattle healtbier than Canadian, and he argued that the embargo was now maintained only to please the Irish and a few of the large breeders in this country at the expense of the feeders of stock and the people generally."

After some discussion the motion was carried by a large majority.

Demand for Canadian Butter.

An Associated Press despatch from London on Monday says the demand for Canadian butter shows no signs of diminishing, and there is a more active demand for saltless. The demand for cheese is only moderate. Owing to their large stocks, London buyers are endeavoring to fill their requirements at reduced figures.

Dairy Experts Meet.

Canadian dairy experts are in conference at Ottawa this week. Among the matters under discussion are the proposals to quote the price of cheese and butter in tenths of a cent rather than in halves, quarters, eighths and sixteenths, as at present; and to make a third grade to butter and cheese. At present there are but two, finest and under finest.

Watertown, N.Y., Oct. 31.—Cheese sales: Five thousand at 10¾c. for large and twins; 11c. for small single.

Cowansville, Oct. 31.—Thirty-seven factories offered 1,946 boxes of cheese. Nineteen creameries offered 786 boxes of butter. Cheese sold at 10⅜c. to 10½c.; butter at 21c. to 21½c.

THE PROVISION MARKETS.

Toronto.

Provision men still report that they are unable to keep up with orders for cured and smoked meats. Hams and long clears are especially in demand. Barrel pork on the other hand is not in active demand and shows a decline of from 50c. to $1 per barrel. Lard is dull and low in sympathy with the bottom prices in the United States, and the absence of export demands. We quote:

Long clear bacon, per lb	$ 0 10	$0 10½
Smoked breakfast bacon, per lb	0 14	0 15

The market for hog products has been rather dull during the week, but Canadian bacon and hams are in good demand on the English market. We quote:

Heavy Canadian short cut mess pork	$18 50	$20 00
Canadian short cut back pork	19 50	20 00
Canadian short cut clear pork	20 00	20 50

St. John, N.B.

This has been an unsatisfactory line. In barrelled pork there was quite a rapid advance, which at once changed to a falling market. This unsettled buyers. Beef has ruled more even; there has been a fair sale. Quite a quantity of domestic mess pork is now offered and preferred here. The very low price of lard is a surprise. This is another line in which holders have been disappointed. In fresh meats values are unchanged; there are ample supplies. Very little veal is offered. Mutton shows a very light sale. Pork continues rather easy, with supplies not large. Lamb is freely received. We quote:

Mess pork, per bbl	$17 00	$19 00

BUTTER.

The market for butter is featureless. There are very light stocks, light receipts and not much demand. The outcome is uncertain. For creamery alone is there any interest shown. Some of the Summer creameries have shut down and the Winter ones have not yet begun making. We quote:

	Per lb.
Creamery prints	0 22	0 23
" solids, fresh	0 21	0 21½

Under qualities	0 [illegible]	0 14

CHEESE.

The tone of the market is still easier this week, but holders are unwilling to deal on present basis and it is hard to buy cheese at figures offered. We quote:

	Per lb.
Cheese, large	0 11½	0 11¾
" twins	0 12	0 12½

Montreal.

BUTTER

The market continues firm in all lines. More attention is being given this week to dairies, which have advanced considerably. Fresh creamery is quoted at 21½ to 22c.; Summer goods, 20 to 20½c.; dairy, 17 to 18c.

CHEESE.

The market remains steady at the recent advance, 10⅜ to 10½c. being the ruling price on the boards. Locally the market remains firm, the trade as usual being confined principally to the 20-lb. Quebec cheese, fresh selling at 11½ to 12c.; Summer goods, 13c.

St. John, N.B.

BUTTER

In dairy butter there are ample supplies. Demand is quite good, but prices, except for really first-class stock, keep quite low. Creamery is in rather better demand, and full prices are asked. We quote:

Butter, creamery prints, per lb	0 22	0 24
" creamery solids (fresh made), per lb	0 20	0 22
" prints	0 18	0 20
" tubs	0 14	0 16
" tubs, selected, per lb	0 17	0 19

EGGS.

It is quite difficult to get stock. There is a rather better sale. Quality of stock offered is good. Prices tend rather higher and the market is firm. We quote:

Eggs, new laid, per doz	0 20	0 22
" case stock, per doz	0 18	0 19

CHEESE.

The market seems hardly as firm as last week. Prices are still high. Stock held in this province is not large. Twins for local market are rather scarce. We quote:

Cheese, per lb	0 12½	0 13

IMPRESSIONS OF THE GREAT WEST

Gathered During a Transcontinental Tour with the Canadian Manufacturers' Association.

By W. L. E.

IT seems impossible that one could visit Calgary without carrying away a favorable impression of it. Surrounded by the rolling prairie and the rushing Bow and Elbow rivers, with the snow-capped Rockies seemingly only a few hours walk to the west, Calgary, while not like a city upon a hill, is indeed prettily situated. The day before we had spent amid rain and mud, and Calgary looked doubly pleasing in the bright sunshine which was beaming upon her on the morning that our train steamed in from the north. "Calgary looks like a smiling maiden one would like to embrace," I remarked to a bachelor friend of mine. "That's so," he replied, "but I would rather embrace a smiling maiden." Calgary has excellent stone quarries in her vicinity and these have been well utilized in the erection of the business blocks which adorn the main streets. The interiors of the stores, as well as the exteriors, are attractive, and would not suffer by comparison with those in any city in Ontario or Quebec. Like all western towns, Calgary is ambitious and the members of our party were well supplied with literature to assure us of the great possibilities that are in store for the busy little place. The people of Calgary are people who act. At present they are possessed with the idea that their town is favorably situated as a wholesale point for distributing merchandise, and ways and means are being devised for making it so. One thing that interested us during our brief stay in Calgary was the number of Indians mounted on ponies that we saw on the streets of the town. We never saw as many Indians in one place during the whole of our journey. They were small in stature and lacking in intelligence, but they were always active in getting out of the way of the kodak fiend, "one of whom I am which."

When crossing the prairie, by train at any rate, one does not see the bleached bones of the buffalo that the guide book so vividly describes. But while the trans-continental traveller does not see bones, flesh or hides of the buffalo, there are not wanting evidences of the day when that lordly monarch roamed the prairie. These evidences are the buffalo trails and buffalo wallows, which are to be seen in every direction. These trails are pathways, not at most more than a foot wide and two or three inches deep. But though no buffalo has trod them for a score of years they were trod so well that time has not effaced them. And the traveller on the swiftly-moving train has no difficulty, after they have once been pointed out to him, in discerning them as they cross and recross each other like a huge piece of network over the prairie leading to and from water-ways. The wallows, the half-moon shape indentations which the buffalos had made in the prairie while in the act of rubbing off in the Spring their Winter garments, covered the prairie everywhere. To-day, where a couple of decades ago were to be seen herds of buffalo which for number could not be counted, are scattered herds of healthy-looking cattle, fattening themselves for the markets of Eastern Canada and Great Britain. Occasionally one finds an odd steer or so chewing its cud in the wallow which some industrious buffalo had formed in the prairie surface probably a generation or more ago. And thus is the old giving place to the new throughout the Great West. Many thousand cattle now reign where buffalo roamed, and by and by, as the Great West becomes more thickly populated, domestic cattle will exceed in number the wild buffalo that once held sway on the prairie, providing the Indian with his meat and a good deal of the material which contributed to the comforts of his home, such as it was. In some parts of the Great West, however, ranching has reached its limit. This is not due to any falling off in the possibilities of the country, but due to the fact that as the Northwest becomes more settled individual farms become more numerous and the agricultural industry is not confined to raising live stock. As one husky-looking man in McLeod remarked to a couple of us who were conversing with him: "You don't see much ranching after barb wire fences begin to be put up." Besides cattle, one when crossing the prairie frequently sees droves of horses, which temporarily stop feeding as the train approaches, and gallop off with tails elevated and mains flowing in the breezy prairie air. The horses which one sees grazing on the prairies are fine, substantial-looking animals as a rule, much more in fact than I had expected to see. Twice a year the cattle and horses which range the prairie are rounded up and branded; and the animal which hereafter bears his owner's peculiar mark is as safe as though he were cooped up in a narrow field in Eastern Canada.

Writing about Buffalos calls to my mind the fact that the buffalo is not exactly as extinct on the plain as a short time ago he was supposed to be. It has been learned within a comparatively recent period that away up north on the Lone Lands is a herd of about 350. While in Edmonton I met a trader from the far north who is well acquainted with this herd. At any rate he sees it at least once a year. "But," said he, in reply to a question of mine, "the number seems to keep about the same. The wolves kill the calves and that prevents the herd from multiplying as it otherwise no doubt would."

Mr. D. B. McRae, representing The Wilson-Lytle-Badgerow Vinegar Co., Limited, Toronto, is a visitor to the Montreal trade this week. Asked as to trade throughout his district, he reported that it was splendid.

Mr. D. W. Douglas, general eastern representative of E. W. Gillett & Co., Toronto, was in Montreal during the past week in the interests of his company. Mr. Douglas reported good sales and business prospects of the best.

Mr. T. S. Corrigan, of The Pure Gold Mfg. Co., is confined to his home in Toronto through an attack of typhoid, contracted during his recent trip to the Upper Lakes. Mr. Corrigan had just returned from a most successful trip when the symptoms of fever developed.

Mr. A. Suter, representing Crosfield, Lampard, Clark & Co., is at present making a tour of Northern New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania, visiting the larger cities, in order to further establish the business of his house for the sale of Ceylon teas.

Mr. Fred Godard, St. John, N.B., has been appointed agent for Chinese Starch for the City of St. John and the Province of New Brunswick. Mr. Godard's office is at 38 Water street, St. John, where all inquiries and orders will receive prompt attention.

A visitor to the Montreal offices of "The Canadian Grocer" this week was Mr. F. W. Hudson, president of The Canada Brokerage Co., Limited, 48 Wellington street east, Toronto. Mr. Hudson spent several days among the trade in Montreal in the interests of his company, whose business, he stated, was growing in a most satisfactory manner.

Mr. Geo. W. Baines, of The Preston Metallic Roofing Co., was in town this week looking after the growing interests of his firm. Mr. Baines, who represents his house throughout Ontario, Quebec and the Maritime Provinces, is a firm believer in the efficacy of advertising, and was kind enough to say that a large contract obtained by him in Sydney, C.B., was directly attributable to an advertisement his customer had seen in "The Canadian Grocer." Business must have been good with Mr. Baines, as when "The Grocer" saw him he was full of glowing accounts of good business.

Mr. W. Kearney, of J. & W. Kearney, tea merchants, Montreal, is on a visit to Plattsburg, N.Y., and other points in that district, combining pleasure with business.

A caller at the office of "The Grocer" in Montreal this week was Mr. C. M. Davis, of the late firm of Davis & McKenzie, Larose, Que. Mr. Davis is an old subscriber and friend of "The Grocer," and looks forward to its weekly appearance with pleasure—in fact, if it does not reach him regularly and promptly, he does not feel satisfied. Mr. Davis' good opinion of "The Grocer" is appreciated.

A JAPANESE DIPLOMA.

W. Boulter & Sons, canners, of Picton, Ont., have received from the authorities of the Osaka Exhibition in Japan a certificate or diploma in acknowledgment of their exhibit of canned goods at the above exhibition. The document is in the Japanese language and is accompanied by a translation in English.

A THRIFTY DRUGGIST.

The representative of a large toilet soap manufactory of Chicago narrates that on a recent visit to a town not a hundred miles from Owen Sound he sold a bill of soaps to a prominent druggist with the promise of a number of free samples for distribution among his customers. On going out of the door the druggist told him not to forget the latter, as he sold the larger cakes for 10c. and had no trouble in getting 5c. for the samples.

CHAT WITH A LARGE ENGLISH GROCER.

MR. GEO. DUDENEY, head of the large retail grocery and catering establishment of Dudeney & Johnston Limited, Bedford, England, was a caller at the Toronto office of THE CANADIAN GROCER last Friday. Like so many English business men Mr. Dudeney is taking a flying trip through Canada and the United States. He landed in Montreal on the 23rd of October, and from Toronto goes to Niagara Falls, Detroit, and Chicago and returns via New York.

Bedford is a city of 40,000 population, and Mr. Dudeney's firm have a system of eight stores. In the course of conversation he expressed himself as finding Canada away above his expectations. He was particularly struck with Eaton's departmental store in Toronto. He had been in the large stores in London and had never seen such a driving business elsewhere.

He did not think that our grocery stores, however, compared favorably with those of England, especially in the matter of window dressing and stock-keeping. In England this is an art. Assistants are trained up to it, and a first assistant is expected to be an expert window dresser. From what he had seen he thought English assistants were smarter than those in Canadian shops. They no longer had the apprentice system in England, but they generally took assistants for three years at a progressive wage. A lad started in to learn the grocery business, and for his first year got his board alone, the second year board and 5s. per week and the third year board and 10s. a week. A first-class assistant received as high as £3 per week. By their system the assistant received a very thorough training. He did not see how a man could learn much in one of our departmental stores, confined largely to one small department.

Mr. Dudeney had been in business for thirty years, and in that time had seen great changes. One of the most noticeable was the disappearance of the cutting system. They used to cut on sugar and make up on tea. That was now done away with, and every article sold on a profit. The Grocers' Association had done much to bring this about. Two years ago an association had been formed in Bedford, and by meeting together and talking matters over, an understanding had been reached not to sell any article under cost. Sugar was the first article to be put on a proper basis. They had written to the large London stores which had branches in Bedford, and all had agreed at once, and a more friendly feeling all round had subsequently been developed. A feature which was growing, but in his mind ought not to be encouraged, was the custom of manufacturers fixing the minimum price at which their goods might be sold.

In reply to a question as to Canadian produce in England, Mr. Dudeney replied that it did not come up to the standard of the Danish produce. Danish butter was always of uniform quality, and while the best Canadian was equal to the best Danish, ours was not uniform. A serious disadvantage under which Canadian butter labored was that it came in cold storage and deteriorated on being exposed. On the other hand, Danish butter shipped on Wednesday or Thursday would be in his store in Bedford Saturday morning. He believed that food given the cows had much to do with the quality of butter. In Denmark special attention was paid to this. Holdings were small; the cows were tethered, and were thus unable to browse on noxious weeds. They get no first-class butter from around Bedford. Farmers would not attend to proper feeding. Devon butter brought about the same price as Canadian.

Our bacon was not quite up to the Danish article. Here, as well as in the case of butter, he believed the secret lay in the feeding. At times our bacon brought the same money as Danish, but mostly not. Our bacon was rather too salty. Mild brands were in demand at present. The better classes used the Irish and Danish bacon, while ours was sold to the poorer people.

Our cheese had very much improved of late. A few years ago there were several grades of Canadian cheese. Lately, however, he had seen nothing but first-class Canadian cheese. Had there been other arriving he would certainly have known of it.

In carrying on his business Mr. Dudeney said that the cash system was adhered to as much as possible, but it was found impossible to make it an invariable rule. He believed in advertising, and used various means. The local papers were given a share, but besides this he issued quarterly illustrated price lists in booklet form, which he found very useful.

This is Mr. Dudeney's first trip to Canada, but he has been so pleased with what he has seen here that he promises himself a more extended visit later.

ENLARGED PREMISES.

The Bennett Mfg. Co., of Pickering, Ont., manufacturers of store fittings and shelf boxes, owing to the steady and rapid growth of their business have been compelled to seek larger quarters. They are now in a position to fill all orders.

TEA WEIGHING MACHINE.

The accompanying cut shows a new automatic weighing machine for tea, coffee, cereals and the like, just perfected in Paris, which represents the materialization of English ideas by French engineering and mechanical genius. In 1900, while in charge of the Ceylon tea exhibit at the Paris Exhibition, Mr. R. Valentine Webster conceived the idea of such a machine and turned over the commission to a French engineer whose efforts are embodied in the machine herewith represented.

Tea Weighing Machine.

Packages of one-quarter, one-half or one pound are made. The paper is taken off the roll to the right, cut the required length, folded into the bag and gummed. At the same time the tea is let down from the hopper above, weighed, dropped into the bag, shaken down, the package sealed and labeled, all at the rate of 10 a minute. The first machine is now working at 1 Rue Caumartin, Paris, and will be put on the market next year.

NOT A SUCCESS.

The Consolidated Grocers of America, organized in February last with a capital of a million and a half, and proposing to control the leading retail groceries of the United States, has not proved a financial success and will go out of business.

CONCERNING OUR OLIVES.

The Olives we pack are products of the most favored Olive gardens of the world, imported direct in original casks and bottled by ourselves. The high degree of excellence attained in our Olives is due to the selection of perfectly sound and ripe fruit, and to the process of preserving them. There are—as in all fruits—many varieties, but PREMIER Olives are, at the prices quoted, the highest attainable standard of excellence.

IMPORTANT EXPLANATORY NOTES.

These illustrations meagerly suggest our styles of packages. By no means do they do justice to the beautifully labeled and foil-capped originals. Below we quote table of prices remarkably low for the qualities offered. We also present below, for the convenience of our customers, who handle Bulk Olives, reproductions direct from the original fruit, showing exactly the size of the Olives we furnish. The figures under each size of Olive indicate the number of Olives to a kilo weight (2 1-5 lbs).

Best for You.

There will be no half-way satisfaction when you sell Windsor Salt. "It is best for you and your customer, too." And we use the word "best" in its deepest meaning —best by test!

Pure, white, dry, crystaline. The Salt that doesn't cake because every particle of moisture is dried out. Sifted, not ground. "Best for you" because there is no half-way satisfaction in selling it.

PERFECTION IN BUSINESS.

HEADS of firms often express their discouragement at the faculty for making mistakes which seems to reside in so many employes. "I have been all my life correcting mistakes," a veteran newspaper man used to say. "I have corrected millions of them in my day, but there are still fools left to keep up the supply." There is probably not a head of a firm now doing business who has not on occasion held the same conviction, with the probable addenda that he alone of all the world was singled out by an inscrutable Providence for affliction by a more than ordinarily exasperating and ubiquitous set of fools.

But he is, without doubt, no more right than the hot-headed patriarch, who said in his wrath that all men were liars. The wonder of it all is that there are not more mistakes. In this highly organized world of ours there is no one of us, not even in private life, who is not absolutely dependent for his daily bread, clothing, fuel and transportation upon countless numbers of his fellowmen, of whom he has not the slightest knowledge, who, in faithful observance of their daily tasks, act as wheels in this great mechanism of civilization, of which we are at once the parts and the product.

If the private individual is so dependent upon his fellow creatures, what can be said of the man in business? The larger the business the greater the number of men in whom he must repose a trust and upon whom he is, by that much, dependent. It is not to be expected that the employe will be more careful than his employer, and when human liability to err and grow slack is considered, it is not to be wondered that there should be mistakes.

But mistakes are costly. They must be rare indeed. In some departments they must not even be possible. What is the remedy? Eternal vigilance on the part of the employer. It is the price of leadership. It is the tribute exacted by success.

Our business men often deplore this necessity which chains them to the daily grind like galley slaves, and are wont, as has been suggested, to think themselves particularly unfortunate, but such is not the case.

In discussing this matter recently with a couple of gentlemen, directors of Peek, Frean & Co., of London, England, one of the largest and best equipped confectionery establishments in the world, it transpired that the same trouble was found in their factory. The constant attention of the directors—active directors—was found necessary to cope with the innumerable difficulties, great and small, which are constantly cropping up.

In England, workmen do not jump from place to place as they do here. The employes of Peek, Frean & Co. have been trained up from youth in the service of the firm, many of them sons of former employes. The plant of the company is thoroughly equipped and subject to an exact system; yet, despite all, the vigilance of the directors is taxed to keep everything running smoothly.

If, with all the advantages mentioned, the English firm is still unable to attain perfection in its employes, let not our Canadian employers despair at an occasional case of perverseness or stupidity. There always will be trouble until the millennium. The only thing to do is to keep a watchful eye and a resourceful mind to minimize its results.

APPEALS TO BUSINESS MEN.

A UNIQUE and encouraging feature of Mr. Chamberlain's campaign is the business basis he is giving to the discussion of the fiscal problem. Discarding abstract theories, he submits his proposition to business men as a pure matter of business, with no political mystery about it whatever. On one hand there is something to give, on the other something to get. The problem revolves itself into a simple matter of appraisement. Is the object to be gained a desirable one, and if so, is it more desirable than what it is proposed to exchange for it?

Mr. Chamberlain is addressing himself very assiduously to the business men, and his method should appeal to them with great force. The trouble with the ordinary free trader or protectionist is that he is an extremist. He has his little pet theory, and he sees things only in the light of that theory. As to the circumstances and conditions which may affect and modify the application of the abstract doctrine he is totally oblivious, and so renders useless or worse economic maxims because he does not have regard to their practical applicability. The consideration of these questions from a broad business standpoint will often cut the knot the politicians strive in vain to undo.

This turn of events is in line with the policy long advocated by this paper.

The brains and experience of business men should be called in to solve questions of this kind instead of leaving them to the tender mercies of professional politicians who are not infrequently quite incapable of appreciating the conditions which govern the matter at issue.

CANNED GOODS AT THE CAPE.

MR. J. G. JARDINE, writing from South Africa, under date of September 29, to the Department of Trade and Commerce, reports that canned goods, such as vegetables, fruits, jams, fish, meats, etc., are overstocked all over the country, and for a few months to come Canadian food exporters would be wise to use other markets, to prevent disappointment and perhaps loss. Good apples, however, that reach the Cape not later than Christmas should fetch fancy prices.

This report of Mr. Jardine is at once interesting to our canned goods and apple exporters and to our manufacturers in general as bringing up the question of what the Department of Trade and Commerce is doing, and might do, to develop our export trade, and assist in opening the markets of the world to our products. Mr. Jardine calls attention to the congestion of the market in certain lines and a good opening in others. This is what United States consular agents are doing all the world over. Daily bulletins are issued containing their reports on the commercial situation in every part of the world.

It is time that Canada had not only Mr. Jardine in South Africa, and a few agents in the British Islands, but also experienced and energetic business men in the industrial centres of all the countries of the world with which we might build up a trade, whose duty it should be to keep our manufacturers here in touch with the markets of their districts, and to use every effort to introduce Canadian products in the countries where they are stationed.

LOYALTY OF EMPLOYES.

THE relationship of employer and employe may be looked upon as one either of mutual rights or of mutual duties. The rights are in no danger of being left unasserted. The corresponding duties are not always so readily recognized.

The extent of these duties depends altogether upon the circumstances of the case. In the first place, it is always incumbent upon the employer to recognize the manhood of his employe, while the latter is bound, while he remains in the pay of his employer, to render him due and faithful service. This applies where the relationship is but the remotest cash nexus, where personality counts least, where mutual duties are the simplest.

When, however, the relationship is raised to a higher plane than this, when the employe is taken into the confidence of his employer and is made acquainted with the secrets of the business, a more complex set of duties arise. He has become in a sense a trustee for certain intents and purposes. To betray that confidence, to be false to that trust, is a most dishonorable action and one that should be discountenanced by all respectable men of business. An employe who left one firm to join another in the same line of business was thus enjoined by his new principal: "You know the secrets of the firm you are leaving. Keep them to yourself. I don't want you to tell them to me. And should you at any time leave here, I shall expect you to treat me in a similar manner."

Such is the proper spirit. An employe who seeks to gain favor with a new employer by betraying the confidence of a former one is but advancing a valid reason for being excluded from any future confidence on the part of his new employer. He has shown himself unworthy of it. A nimble tongue has run many a man's head off.

Business men are always anxious to get employes they can trust. The betrayal of one is not likely to win the confidence of another. There is an idea held by some people that one code of ethics applies to private life and another to business. "That is all very well but it is not business," is a maxim that has been made to gloze over no end of contemptible meanness. There is no such distinction. The fox in the business life is a cad in the social world; and the man who betrays a confidence placed in him by his employer is not likely to be any more true to his social obligations.

The employe who hopes to retain his self-respect, to say nothing of the respect of his fellows, will repay the compliment incident to a confidence by showing himself worthy of it.

BRING IN NEWFOUNDLAND.

NEWS comes from Newfoundland of the formation of a new political party, under the leadership of former Premier Sir William Whiteway and former Attorney-General Donald Morrison. The policy which will be propagated by the new party is that of union with Canada. It will oppose both the present Government and Opposition.

The inclusion of Newfoundland in Confederation is a policy on which, in Canada, business men and politicians of both political faiths have long been at one. It would at once round out our Dominion and facilitate trade with the big island in the Gulf. Here's success to the Confederation movement in Newfoundland.

THE LONG SESSION.

THE GROCER has been a persistent advocate of the policy of sending business men to Parliament. After all, the problems which have to be solved at Ottawa are but questions of business on a large scale, in the solution of which little help is to be expected from the member who, having failed at everything else, has turned professional politician. Who, if not the successful business man, should be called into council in such matters as deciding on a fiscal policy, or the construction of a transcontinental railway?

If, however, future sessions are to equal in length the one just concluded there will be great difficulty in inducing business men to accept parliamentary honors.

The Canadian Magazine in the current number calls attention to this fact and shrewdly urges that the session was designedly spun out by professional politicians for the express purpose of freezing out business men. The article in question is as follows:

It is becoming more and more evident that Canadian business men must lay aside their partisanship and study politics from the business standpoint only. The present long session at Ottawa was designed by professional politicans and grafters to scare business men out of Parliament. These wily individuals desire to keep the business men and independents at home so that the professionals will have entire control of the country's revenues. They know that there are few business men who can afford to spend eight months of the year in Ottawa and that a few eight-month sessions will drive the business men out of Parliament. The attempt should be frustrated. This can only be done by business men using their influence with the newspapers and the electors to frown down this contemptible trickery. The majority of the next House should be business men pledged to shorter sessions—business men of both Conservative and Liberal leanings. The battle must begin in the conventions. These will soon be held all over Canada, and now is the time to plan the reform. The professional politicians, men with no special calling, no visible means of support, should be beaten in the conventions. Only thus can the House of Commons be kept wholesome and efficient. It is a duty which lies upon every merchant and manufacturer in the country.

The suggestion that the politicians be checkmated in their game by returning business men on both sides of the House is quite in line with what we have long advocated and will meet with the approval of the thinking electorate.

RECIPROCITY PROPOSAL FROM JAMAICA.

THE question of reciprocity with Canada is one which is now agitating the minds of our friends and neighbors in Jamaica. THE GROCER is in receipt of a letter, published below, from S. H. Wheeldon, of Kingston, Jamaica, and although the proposal is made for reciprocity in cigars and flour only, it is reasonable to suppose that frank negotiations would discover other lines we might with mutual profit make subject to reciprocal tariff concessions.

This movement on the part of the Jamaicans should be met with prompt action by our Government with a view to extending our trade with our cousins in the West Indies. The letter is as follows :

Editor CANADIAN GROCER :—

I beg to enclose a cutting from to-day's issue of The Gleaner, which is the principal newspaper of Jamaica, on the subject of reciprocity in trade between Jamaica and Canada. In this article Jamaica cigars and Canadian flour are particularly mentioned. I am interested in Jamaica cigars, and have been deputed by the leading cigar manufacturers here to endeavor to secure a reduction of the duties in Canada, which at present are so excessive as to be practically prohibitive. On behalf of the cigar manufacturers here, I am urging the Jamaica Government to give preference to some prominent article of Canadian produce in return for Canadian preference to our Jamaica cigars. A duty of 8s. per barrel is levied here on flour, most of our flour being at present imported from the United States. An enormous amount of flour is regularly imported here. If, as a beginning, our Government here would give a preference, say, of 1s. per barrel to Canadian flour, and the Canadian Government would impose only a 10 per cent ad. valorem duty on Jamaica cigars, I think the arrangement would be mutually advantageous, as the remission of 1s. per barrel duty on your flour would transfer a great part of Jamaica's flour purchases to Canada, and our excellent Jamaica cigars would become available to Canadian smokers. The retention of 10 per cent. ad valorem duty on Jamaica cigars imported into the Dominion would be a reasonable protection to cigars manufactured in Canada, but would enable our Jamaica cigars to supplant those at present imported from Havana, Manilla, etc. The future of Canada depends primarily on her great wheat fields, and it is not good policy to attempt by excessive protection to stimulate industries like that of tobacco not naturally adapted to a cold country such as Canada.

S. H. WHEELDON.

The clipping from The Gleaner, which Mr. Wheeldon encloses, reads as follows :

We understand that an important proposal has been placed before the local Government looking to a reciprocity agreement between Canada and Jamaica, whereby the former would give preference to our manufactured tobacco, whilst we gave preference on our tariff to Canadian flour.

It is felt by some people that it would be a waste of money to subsidise steamship lines between Canada and Jamaica while each country maintains a prohibitive tariff against the products of the other. What is needed is something approaching to free trade between the two colonies. Take two representative articles—the flour of Canada and the cigars of Jamaica. A slight reduction of the import duty here on Canadian flour would, it has been pointed out, transfer much of our custom for this article to Canada. Canadian flour is of very superior quality, and there is absolutely no reason why it should not be extensively used in Jamaica. The cigars of Jamaica are among the best in the world. Compare the average Havanas with, for instance, the Golofina cigars manufactured by the Montpelier cigar factory in Jamaica, and the Jamaica cigar is found to be easily superior. But it is practically impossible to sell Jamaica cigars in Canada on account of the prohibitive import duty there.

Why should not an arrangement be made which would result in our selling cigars to Canada and Canada selling flour to us is the question one hears asked. Both countries would be benefitted, it is held. There are several million inhabitants in Canada, and if we secured this market for cigars there can be no doubt that the cigar industry in Jamaica would receive an immense impetus, to the benefit of trade here generally. On the other hand, a natural industry of Canada would be benefited, that of growing wheat. As for the present cigar industry of Canada, it is felt that hardly anybody here would object to Canada retaining a 10 per cent. ad valorem duty on cigars from Jamaica. An industry which cannot stand with a 10 per cent, protective duty is an unnatural and artificial one, which it is not good political economy to foster. What is really desirable is that each country should produce the articles it is naturally best adapted to produce, and for both to exchange with each other their surplus products.

APPLE EXPORT REPORT.

THE following comparative summary of the quantity of apples exported from Atlantic ports for the week and season ending October 31, has been given out by Mr. Fred. Barker, apple exporter, Church street, Toronto.

The following cable from Liverpool was received Monday afternoon by Mr. Barker in regard to the apple market there on Monday, 2nd inst. :

" Market very active; 28,500 bbls. selling; Baldwins, 14s. to 17s. 6d.; Greenings, 15s. 6d. to 18s.; Spies, 14s. 6d. to 18s. 6d.; Russets, 16s. to 20s. 6d."

The cable re the Wednesday market was as follows :

" Market active, prices rather higher; 33,500 bbls. selling; Baldwins, 14s. to 18s. 6d.; Greenings, 15s. to 19s.; Spies, 14s. to 19s.; Russets, 14s. to 20s.; Kings, 18s. 6d. to 25s."

GRAIN, HAY AND POTATOES.

M. G. Stagg & Co. have just opened offices in the Standard Stock Exchange building, Toronto, where they will carry on a business in grain, hay and potatoes. They are open to either buy or sell potatoes in car lots, as will be noticed by their advertisement on another page.

DISSOLVED PARTNERSHIP.

The firm of Brownlow, Husband & Co., fruit brokers, 32 Church St., Toronto, has been dissolved. Mr. Brownlow has been appointed local representative for the California Fruit Agency, known better as the Orange Trust. Mr. Husband has taken over the business of Brownlow, Husband & Co. and will continue as before.

WILL INCREASE ITS CAPITAL.

The Empire Tobacco Co., of Montreal, has been authorized to increase its capital from $300,000 to $600,000. This extension of the capital stock has been rendered necessary to carry out the operations of the company, which have extended greatly within the past year.

HINTS TO BUYERS.

Contributors are requested to send news only, not puffs of goods they handle, or the arrival of standard goods that everyone has in stock, or that they are offering goods at close figures, or that they have had an unusually large sale this season.

THE EBY, BLAIN CO. are offering four lines of English imported candies, done up in 7-lb. boxes, that will sell at sight for Christmas trade.

New "Commadre" figs, in tapnets, are in store with The Eby, Blain Co.

Hudon, Hebert & Cie., Montreal, report arrival into store of shipment of Gruyere cheese, which is claimed to be the best received here in years.

The Eby, Blain Co. are carrying a full line of "Bee" brand goods, including "Bee" starch, soda and borax, in packages.

Regarding Almeria grapes, White & Co. received shipments the past week of upwards of 1,000 barrels, a good many of them being of the famous Villalobos pack. They report quality excellent and prices moderate, and a brisk trade being done.

H. P. Eckardt & Co. report a good business doing in Heinz mince meat, put up in 18 lb. pails.

Buyers of high-grade canned goods should see samples of the Quaker Brand.

Upwards of 12 Million Packets Sold Annually

Very few realize what the word "million" means, it's so easy to talk about millions of this and that, but do you know that if you were offered 12 million one dollar bills to count them in three months' time, you couldn't do it. No, not if you counted at the rate of 90 a minute for 24 hours a day, without stopping to eat or sleep—still you couldn't do it; you would be a fit subject for a lunatic asylum before you had got half through

Therefore can you begin to even faintly realize what a stupendous demand there is for "SALADA" Ceylon Tea?

Can we tell you the reason why?

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

ONTARIO MARKETS.

GROCERIES.

Toronto, Nov. 5, 1903.

THE markets this week are without any particular feature. Trade continues good with a steady demand for all staples. Collections are fair and the general outlook is encouraging so far as can be discerned. The canned goods situation has shown no positive development but the feeling is easier and the impression prevails that full deliveries will be made. Coffee has been manifesting a further rising tendency but latest advices from New York indicate an easier tone. Spices all continue firm with the exception of ginger. Molasses and syrup are meeting a seasonable call, while a scarcity of sugar syrup is reported. Tapioca is still advancing, and teas show continued advances on the London market, while a much firmer position is held locally. In foreign fruits the interest is centred in the direct steamers, the cargo of the Escalona having been discharged and the Bellona, between Halifax and Montreal. Sultanas are higher and currants firmer. A steady trade is being done in Mediterranean fruits for the Christmas trade.

Sugar shows no quotable change since last week. A weakness in raws has developed in Europe and although having a sympathetic effect in the New York market has not affected quotations. There are no special indications and it is probable the market will hold steady for a time.

CANNED GOODS.

There is no particular change to note in the canned goods situation this week. Jobbers are slowly filling back orders as they are being supplied by the consolidation. Nothing definite has been given out as to the percentage of orders that will be filled, but there is an easier feeling on the street and most of the jobbers believe that they will get nearly all they have ordered. COFFEES

There has been an advancing tendency with a strong market and Rios higher in the early part of the week, but latest advices from New York indicate an easier turn both for actual supplies and contracts. The break was due to disappointing advices from Europe and a full movement of Santos crop. Locally there has been no further change than a checking of the advancing tendency. We quote :

SUGAR.

There is nothing of particular interest to report this week, the markets all over being very dull, with prices nominally as last reported, but with little business doing. Following Mr. Licht's cable reporting weather favorable for growing crop, Europe declined 2½d. per cwt. and has since declined a further 3d. per cwt., quotation for 88 per cent. f.o.b. Hamburg now being 8s. 6d. The weakness in Europe has had a sympathetic effect upon the tone of the New York market, without however influencing quotations and there have been no transactions to test the market. Centrifugals are still quoted at 3⅞ for basis 96 test and it is thought that these prices would still have to be paid should refiners come into the market as stocks have been reduced about 10,000 tons for the week, and refiners have on hand only three weeks' supplies. Receipts for week ending October 28 were 20,149 tons, with meltings maintained at former figure of 30,000 tons, leaving total stock 129,342 tons, of which 96,618 tons were with refiners and 32,724 tons with importers. Combined stocks of Europe and America at latest uneven dates were 1,240,342 tons as against 1,310,039 same time last year, the decrease being 69,697 tons. Estimated sugars afloat to the United States were only 170,000 tons as against 225,000 tons same time last year. Combined stocks of United States and Cuba show a decrease of 2,099 tons against last year. There are no special indications for the immediate future and it is likely that the market will hold steady for a time. The American refined sugar market continues in the same unsettled condition reported in our last. The demand has been greatly reduced which, of course, is only natural at this season and competition between refiners for business has resulted in various private cuts in prices. The difference between centrifugals and granulated is now reduced to .63c. per 100 lb.

The situation in Canada is without special feature. There are no changes in quotations to report and the demand is principally on a hand to mouth basis. We quote :

SPICES.

Spices continue very firm with a tendency toward higher prices. The pepper crop is said to be damaged by an insect pest and as a result has a firmer tone. Cloves are still firm and advancing. Indeed all the spices are strong with the exception of ginger, which is a little on the quiet. A fair volume of business is reported locally. We quote :

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

A seasonable demand is reported for these lines with a great scarcity of sugar syrups. Barbados continues high and firm. New Orleans reports limited receipts of molasses and the few lots sold brought full prices. New York has been dull, buyers waiting for new crop. The New York syrup market has been dull and featureless, offerings light and prices steady. We quote :

TEAS.

Tea still continues to advance in the London market. Latest advices report for Indian an advance of ¼d. per lb. for common, ½d. for medium, while good liquoring kinds continue to attract strong competition. Further strength is also announced for Ceylons up to 9d. per pound, an advance of ¼ to ½d. per pound being reported. In Chinas a fair business is reported with the market unchanged as to price.

Locally there is a firmer tone in consequence of the London advices. There is a strong demand for cheap Indian and Ceylon and some difficulty is found in meeting the demand at the prices offered. Japans are also meeting a fair demand. The principal call is for teas to retail at 25 cents. We quote:

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

The Bellona has touched at Halifax and unloaded part of her cargo, and has sailed for Montreal with the residue. Invoices were at hand the first of the week. A cable from Syrmna Saturday advises a distinctly firmer tone to the Sultana raisin market. The low price has resulted in very heavy buying with the above result. Almonds will be in stock so soon as the Bellona is unloaded. Walnuts will be shipped before the middle of this month via New York. California fruit is rather featureless, buyers being very cautious. At the present price of Valencias and the short crop, even compared with last year, it is thought by some of the trade that Valencias should go higher before next crop, unless there is a considerable falling off in the usual demand. Dates are somewhat stronger and Eleme figs show a slightly firmer tendency. We quote:

Latest information would indicate that the crop will not be so short as has been anticipated. The market shows no particular feeling, is easier perhaps if anything. The stock to hand shows a very good sample, although there is said to be considerable which will rank as under grades. We quote :

VEGETABLES.

Vegetables have been in good supply this week but the demand has not been so encouraging, probably owing to the number of pedlars on the streets. There are few changes of importance. QUEBEC MARKETS.

GROCERIES

Montreal, November 5, 1903.

JOBBERS report trade during the past week as very good, country orders being fairly large and plentiful. Collections also are reported satisfactory on the whole.

Sugars are fairly active and good business turned over. It is reported that some large lots of Russian sugars have been received ; going mostly, however, into the hands of manufacturers. Tea market is very satisfactory, some very large orders for Ceylon greens particularly having been sold, and these teas seem to hold the centre of the stage at the moment. China blacks are getting more attention and it is reported that some 40,000 packages were sold from New York for London account last week. Japans are steady and inquiries for low to medium grades are numerous, though stocks not plentiful. In molasses and syrups a good business is being done and with the cold weather at hand now the consumption of the former will be greater. Syrups are getting much more into popular favor and with Barbados molasses at present high prices the demand for syrups will increase. In canned goods the only feature noticeable is that the jobbers are getting full deliveries of tomatoes and corn. Salmon is scarcer and reports from the coast quote sockeye (Fraser river) at $5.65, and cohoes at $3.75 to $4 f.o.b. The improved tone of the New York market and the firmer prices ruling there are toning up the local market, though in some quarters the advances reported are looked upon as being too much of a speculative character to be healthy. Spices are firm all round, cloves again showing an advance. Pepper is looked to as going higher shortly. The green fruit trade has been very quiet, apples being the only interesting line, and prices are holding up strong, English inquiries tending to this end. Foreign dried fruits are interesting in respect to a decline of 1s. per cwt. reported in Valencias. An improvement is looked forward to in the currant situation. Dates continue to show up uninteresting to buyers in view of the low quotations for first tide via London. A further impedement to early buying is the announcement of a trade auction sale here for London account.

SUGAR.

Beets are reported to be 1½d. higher in London, though as prices in beets are continually fluctuating around about the same figure it has not an appreciable effect on the market here.

Some very large lots of Russian sugar have been turned over here lately, but as it has gone mostly into the hands of manufacturers the jobbing trade is not disturbed. We quote :

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The business in Barbados molasses is steady and the firm prices ruling lately are showing no weakening. The consumption of molasses from now on will be much heavier than during the milder weather. The reports in this column during the last few weeks to the effect that the scarcity of Barbados molasses and the high prices ruling was turning the trade more into syrups, is verified almost generally by the jobbing trade. TEAS.

The condition of the tea market during the past week has been most satisfactory, a general activity in all grades being observable, Ceylon greens apparently being the principal grades, some very large orders having been taken. China blacks received a little more attention locally and it is reported that London has been a buyer in New York last week to the extent of 40,000 packages. Japans, low and medium grades are in good demand, with stocks light and prices hard. We quote :

COFFEE.

Locally there has been a little more enquiry for coffee although there is no change in prices to report. Advices from prominent New York coffee houses report the market there as steadily improving, though there is much more of a speculative feature about it than is considered healthy. A consignment of 200 bags of Bucramanga coffee has been received by a dealer and same is held at prices ranging from 10¼ to 11¼. We quote :

SPICES.

Locally there is nothing to report this week except a strong feature in spices generally. Cloves have shown a little more advance while all their grades are firm. The latest mail advices from the East say that throughout the East Indies an insect was attacking and seriously damaging the pepper vines and this was taken as an explanation of the prospective small crop of pepper. NUTS.

Early buyers are congratulating themselves for having covered their requirements for Grenobles early in the season as a rumored advance of 10 frs. per 100 kilos has now been confirmed. The quality, which at one time promised to show shrivelled fruit, has since improved with the maturity of the nuts.

CANNED GOODS.

The feature this week in canned goods is a feeling of satisfaction prevailing among the jobbing trade owing to the deliveries of tomatoes and corn by the Canadian Canners' Consolidated, and this feeling will continue to be felt by the retail trade generally as well. Salmon is still very scarce at the coast, Fraser river sockeyes being almost unobtainable, prices being given as $5.65 f.o.b. coast. Cohoes are quoted from $3.75 to $4, f.o.b., and humpbacks about $2.50. We quote :

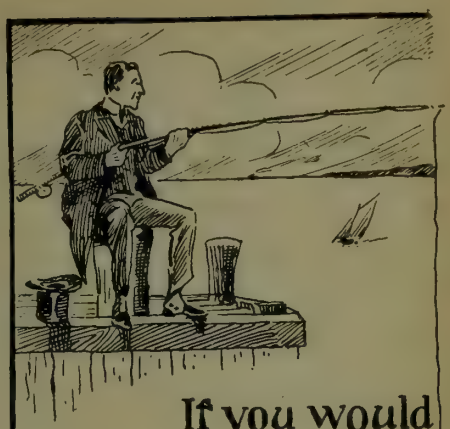
FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

Wm. Rogers & Co., of Denia, writing under date of October 17, say : "Our market looks like declining and we shall be glad to receive orders for shipments via New York. We expect to be able to make a good reduction in our quotations very shortly." This mail advice has since been made good by cable. Advices received under date of October 1, from Patras, are as follows : "The limit fixed by the currant bank law entailed buying any currants offering at a price equal to 11s. 6d. f.o.b., but while the spot price remains unaltered the gold equivalent keeps constantly fluctuating with the rise and fall of exchange, with the result that to-day the equivalent is 11s. f.o.b., and perhaps a shade less. On Oct. 1 this limit had actually been reached and the bank was buying in all the provinces whatever was offering at an equivalent of 11s. These purchases cannot but gradually relieve the recent heavy pressure to sell and an improvement is looked for sooner or later, the more so that the whole crop is of good sound quality and entirely free from rain damage. Buyers continue to show lack of interest in early arrivals of dates via



If you would catch fish, you must cast your line.

—and cast it where there are fish..

Good fishermen go where fish are plentiful—use the right kind of bait—and make many a good haul.

Shrewd advertisers use THE CANADIAN GROCER because plenty of grocers read it—they use the right kind of bait and make many a good haul of new customers.

Suppose the fish don't bite at fust,
What be yew goin' tur dew?
Chuck down yewr pole, throw out yewr bait,
An' say yewr fishin's threw?
Uv course yew haint; yew're goin' tur fish,
An' fish an' fish an' wait
Until yew've ketched yewr basket full,
An' used up all yewr bait.

Our Department of Advertising Service provides good bait—for those who desire it—without any extra charge.

If you would have more business cast your line to grocers in THE CANADIAN GROCER.

GREEN FRUITS.

The condition of the green fruit market this week is quiet. Apples are moving fairly well and prices are holding up strong. The demand for apples from England keeps up and this has a tendency to guarantee firm prices on this side.

Grapes are receiving some attention, but are gradually being cleaned out of the market. We quote :

FISH.

There has been a brisk trade during the past few weeks for all kinds of fresh fish. Fresh dore and haddock have been scarce. It is not expected that there will be much more fresh dore obtainable owing to the approaching cold weather and stopping of open fishing. There has been a little more haddock arriving from the Nova Scotia coast this week and it is expected that shipments from these ports will improve. Quite a run of mackerel occurred along the western shore of Halifax county and in two days the fishermen made catches aggregating 100,000 fish. These were sold at 5½c. each out of nets and shipped mostly to the American markets, though some will find their way here. There is very little dried codfish arriving as yet and in many cases there does not seem to be so much sale, as the skinless and dressed cod are taking its place. The stock of skinless cod is not very large as the fishing was not a success. The price ruling at present is $4.75, but an advance is expected in the near future. Salt herring are in good demand for choice fish, though stocks are light. Fresh halibut are scarce and prices high and are being bought in the United States for this market at present. We quote :

VEGETABLES.

A fairly good business is being done in potatoes and if anything prices are slightly higher this week, some ranging from 57c. to 60c. in carload lots. Canadian onions are still very scarce and prices high, particularly in red varieties. Yellows are somewhat more plentiful. Spanish onions are strong at $2.25 to $2.50 for large cases, and crates 70 to 80c. Red varieties are quoted at $3.50 per bbl., and yellow $2.15 to $2.50 in round lots. We quote :

EGGS.

During the past week there has been a further advance in the egg market which now remains firm at the advance. For select stock 23c. is the price now being secured, while for stored fresh and limed eggs the price paid is 19c. There is practically no No. 2 on the market.

BEANS.

Since our last report there has been a further decline on the local market and reduced quotations are given below. On spot beans are scarce and better prices than those quoted below are said to be obtainable for immediate delivery. Producers in the west are now sticking to their prices and deliveries are light. A number of western growers claim that they have no beans for immediate shipment. What turn the market will ultimately take it is very difficult at present to predict. We quote the following reduced prices :

No. 1 hand-picked, carlots	....	1 90
Choice prime, per bushel	....	1 80
" carlots	....	1 60

HONEY.

For buckwheat honey there is on the local market an excellent demand, but dealers are at present unable to obtain it. Of other grades, excepting comb honey, which is also in good demand, there is a surfeit being offered. As stated last issue, producers are now willing to accept much lower prices than they held out for two months ago, but, as has been the case all season, the dealers are not anxious to stock up heavily. Jobbers' prices to the trade remain unchanged and we again quote as follows :

Strained, white	0 07½	0 08
Clover and basswood	0 08	0 08½
Buckwheat	0 07	0 07½

MAPLE PRODUCTS.

There is said to have been an improved demand during the last week. Prices are steady and unchanged. We quote :

EVAPORATED APPLES.

Since our last report there have been no changes on the local market and prices are now said to be steadier than for some time. No advance is anticipated by those who are in a position to judge the market. We quote the following unchanged prices :

New, in carlots	0 05½	0 06
New, in jobbing lots	0 06	0 06¼

POTATOES.

There is a fairly good demand and offerings are ample to supply it. Dealers continue to buy at from 55 to 57c. per bag, and to sell at 65 to 70c.

FLOUR AND GRAIN.

FLOUR.

Prices are lower in some cases. We quote :

GRAIN.

There is very little grain moving now. As farmers have held it back they will have to keep much of it through the Winter and the result will be some very heavy shipments in the Spring. In spite of the fact that shipments this Fall have been much below the average it is now estimated that at the close of navigation almost 30,000,000 bushels of grain will have been shipped from the West through the port of Montreal. Locally there have been no price changes except for an advance of ½c. per bushel in oats. RAW FURS.

This week we publish the revised list of prices on the local market. As predicted in our last issue, there has been a very considerable drop in bear skins, due to the fact that bear is not suitable for the present style of manufactured garments. The decline since March has been about 30 per cent. Fall muskrat has advanced 15 per cent. since January. Otter and marten have declined 15 per cent. since March, while fox and mink have declined 10 per cent. The fine warm weather prevailing for the last few days has interfered somewhat with trade but prospects are good for November and December business. We quote :

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

Office of "The Canadian Grocer,"
St. John, N.B., Nov. 2, 1903.

BUSINESS is active and Christmas goods are coming to hand freely. California seeded raisins are already here, the earliest they have ever been on this market. The Winter port business is a matter of particular interest this season. With the accommodation it is difficult to find berths for all the steamers wanting to come. It seems too bad that while the Government has money for lake and river harbors in Ontario and other western points, also unlimited money for railways, there is not a dollar for a national port such as St. John, a port in the improving of which our own citizens have spent thousands of dollars. The Grand Trunk have a port at Portland, Maine, where they have spent immense sums but though we have given wharves and a railway to the C.P.R. they talk of leaving the port rather than furnish any berths for their own steamers even when it is the only Atlantic point with facilities their road reaches.

OILS.

In burning oil prices are again quoted higher, and the market is a very firm one. Season's contracts have been largely made at the lower prices so that the trade stands to make a fair profit, except where the retailers depend on the tank wagon. Linseeds remain unchanged. Prices are low and the market easy. Turpentine we quote higher ; the market is very firm. In lubricating oils full values rule. Supplies of cod oil are very light. We quote :

DRIED FRUIT.

This is a busy line at this season. While some brands of California seeded raisins were not received last year till after Christmas some have already arrived, this being the earliest they have ever been on this market. Prices are very high. In prunes new goods are due. Prices are quite firm. Loose muscatels will cost about as last year, the California market having somewhat declined. Figs find an active sale. Demand for spot dates is but fair. Peels are a rather light stock and find an active sale. Evaporated apples are quite firm and not very freely offered. Onions are not a large stock. Chiefly Ontario stock is sold. Prices in the west seem hardly as firm. We quote :

CANNED GOODS.

Dealers are disappointed and displeased. Independent canners who sold them goods are not filling their orders and the association, after keeping them waiting till very late for prices, will now give them no satisfaction in regard to what shipment they will make. The association is very unpopular here. It is not expected but that tomatoes and corn will be short. Salmon are held at full figures. Domestic canned fish are very firm. Sardines have been advanced. NOTES.

Kane & McGrath, St. John, have received the contract to supply meats to the principal Canadian Pacific steamers for the Winter. It means a very large business.

"Red Rose" tea is now being packed in its new home. The most modern facilities are to be seen here, blenders, weighers and packers being run by electricity.

Schepp's cocoanut continues to not only hold its own but to increase its sales. Three of our jobbers who have not before handled cocoanut have found it necessary to add it to their stock.

Seeded California raisins have made a record this season, never before arriving as early. Mr. Logan, representing The Phoenix Co., distributed a car to the trade this week.

Dearborn & Co. are offering a "special" English pickle under the "Kent" brand.

Maple syrup in pint tins is finding a large sale here, Imperial brand goods bringing repeat orders.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, B.C., Nov. 2, 1903.

RETAIL grocers in Vancouver have this past week been busy with reorganizing the moribund Retail Grocers' Association. The first move came from the Retail Grocers' Association of Victoria, a deputation of two members of that body, Messrs. Johns and Mouat, having been some days in Vancouver calling on the retail grocers of this city to urge that they take action.

A meeting was held at which steps were taken to reorganize the Vancouver Retail Grocers' Association. Fully fifty grocers of Vancouver were present and Messrs. Johns and Mouat laid before them the matters on which it was sought to take action. One feature of the reorganization of the association was the desire that co-operation with the Victoria association should be made permanent. The new association elected officers, Mr. J. R. Webster, of Webster Bros., being chosen president, Mr. Thos. Duke, of the City Grocery Co., vice-president, and Mr. J. P. Nightingale, sec.-treasurer. Messrs. A. DesBrisay and Jas. F. Foran, with the officers named, will form the executive board.

As reciting the general objects and aims of the association, the following resolution was unanimously adopted : "In order to obliterate trust and inspire confidence among members of the trade ; to correct excessive and unmercantile competition ; to remove by concert of action such evils and customs as are against good policy and sound business principles, whether it be by cutting prices, selling by the wholesale houses at retail, improper house to house peddling, the distribution and consumption of adulterated and unwholesome goods, the use of fictitious labels, the use of whatever evil it may be ; to obtain the results which experience has proved are not obtainable by individual or divided effort, and to watch and influence legislation toward the better protection of capital, to assist our members in collecting delinquent debts, to protect them against fraudulent customers, and to encourage the observance of the Sabbath and all legal holidays ; for these reasons we hereby organize ourselves into an association called the Vancouver Grocers' Association."

The first move made by the new association was to hold a meeting with the wholesale grocers, to discuss matters in the interests of which both were directly affected. Several matters, among them the basis of giving credit to retail grocers, the selling by wholesale houses at jobbing rates to hotels, lumber camps, and similar consumers, and other important questions were, it is understood, discussed. No report of the conference was given out, and what action, if any, was taken has not been announced. It is expected that further conferences between the Wholesale Grocers' Association and the Retail Grocers' Association will be held.

Closing of navigation on the Yukon River caught a good deal of merchandise in transit from White Horse to Dawson. The river first became impassable by float ice, which made it dangerous to navigate. Then the freeze-up followed, and last steamers down from Skagway bring the news from White Horse that the river is closed for the Winter.

Naturally there has been a good deal of inquiry respecting goods in transit, and, as a portion was en route to Dawson, the owners have been assured that The White Pass Co. will undertake the safe delivery of all shipments which had started down the river before the freeze-up began. It will be necessary to transfer all such goods to the sleigh teams, of which the company maintains a large force on the Winter trail from White Horse to Dawson, for stage purposes. The company also carries the mails. It is estimated that 1,500 tons of freight was en route, though part of it may have got through.

Two battered and damaged river boats from the lower Yukon made their laborious way up to Dawson this week—the Rock Island and the Susie. Both boats were injured by contact with rocks and with floating ice, and were badly strained from frequent hold-ups on the flats in the lower Yukon. They were held as long as a week at a time in making the arduous trip up the river.

The waters shoaled as the vessels made their way up, and they arrived with less than a fifth of the cargo with which they had started, the remainder having been lightered at various points along the river, to enable the vessels to continue the journey at all. The large quantities of merchandise now tied up for the Winter at lower river points, will not be available for use until late next Summer. There is no population down river to require such quantities of goods as have failed to reach Dawson.

Cost of living is bound to be high this Winter. Already prices of many commodities have advanced, caused by the shortage in supplies. This advance is steadily keeping up. Potatoes are 15c. per pound, and eggs, which have sold at $11, are now over $19 per case of 30 dozen. Hams are 35c. per pound, condensed cream $9 per case, fresh beef and pork 40 to 65c. per pound.

Fully 500 people failed to get out on the last boats up the river, and will have to get out over the ice. Many of those on their way out, who were on the various steamers now blocked at various points on the river, will also have to complete the journey to White Horse on foot.

Local conditions in grocery circles are very satisfactory. Trade with the interior portions of the province continues good, and some wholesale men report it better than their expectations for this season. The coast trade is of course light, as it always is at this time of year. Activity in building and other industrial operations is keeping a good surface on trade here, and the continued fine weather is making it possible to continue many lines of work, which would be closed down otherwise. This has kept a very appreciable number of wage-earners in receipt of steady pay, with consequent benefit to the circulating medium.

In groceries, new dried fruits are all in the market now. They have opened high, and that, together with the earliness of the season, prevents much movement. Demand is not strong yet, because of the proportion of fresh fruits still in the market. Raisins have opened very high and are sure to remain so. But retailers are afraid to stock up on account of the quotations being so high at this time of the year.

Canned goods, from the eastern packers are moving forward freely, stocks in wholesale hands filling up for the season. There is no change in the situation so far as advices here go. Tomatoes are not yet on the list for receiving orders, and both that line and corn will be scarce here by all indications. The question of the 10 per cent. rebate from the combine is beginning to interest those dealers who placed their orders with the concern. Without pledging themselves to buy all their stocks, they have bought all the combine could or would deliver. The merchants therefore hold that they are justly entitled to the rebate, and will try to make the combine people see it that way if argument will do it.

In fruits, the market is well supplied at the present moment with local apples. The indications are that the local crop will be ample for requirements until Christmas at least. The quality of stock being bought on the market is still keeping up, and shows decided improvement over former years. The only criticism is that in fancy apples the varieties are all too large. That possibly is a fault which will in time be corrected by selection in the varieties desired to be grown. The climate tends to produce a big apple even in ordinary medium varieties, and the growers will have to study how to counteract that tendency.

Local Winter varieties of pears, quinces and crab apples are also freely offering yet. Prices are very firm. Best quality of all local apples bring at least $1.50 to $1.75. Oregon and Washington fruit is not on the market, as it cannot compete. The prices quoted there are higher than local, and the stock is no better. The growers and shippers in the Yakima and other famous fruit districts of the neighboring states say they have a market east at good prices for all the apples they can ship.

Creamery butter is now largely confined to Government creamery from the Northwest Territories, and everything offering is taken up at once. Price for this line is 23c. and firm. Local creamery is still high, being held at 35c. to the trade. The supply has been keeping up well owing to the warm fine weather.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

Winnipeg, November 2, 1903.

THERE has not been a week for many months that has been marked by so little change in the general conditions of trade in the West. The last week of a month is not usually marked by many changes, but October's close has been particularly uneventful. The volume of trade has been good throughout the week and collections have been satisfactory. The weather has been almost ideal in its bright balminess and all kinds of building work have made great strides.

The wheat trade, the pivot on which almost all other trade turns in the West, has been most peculiar. The receipts so far have been very much behind those of last year and though a very large amount of threshing has been done, the volume of wheat coming forward has not been in proportion. It has begun to look as if farmers were holding back their wheat looking for higher prices in November. The truth of the matter is that prices at present are out of all accord with the export trade and very little export business has been done from Winnipeg this year. The principal trade has been the filling of orders of eastern millers. Contracts for this wheat were made early and the high prices of No. 1 hard and No. 1 northern, which have obtained, were due to the small quantities of these grades coming forward to fill contracts. That this contract business is pretty well up-to-date is attested by the fact that during this week the prices for the two grades mentioned have declined out of proportion to the lower grades. The percentage of the better grades increases as the season advances and the crop will on the whole grade better than was anticipated after the bad weather of early September. The yield also is larger. These features of the wheat market are not peculiar to Winnipeg, they apply to the whole American continent and dealers state that though prices are not likely to go higher it seems equally difficult to get them lower, as the whole trend of the American market is bullish. The developments of the grain trade this month will be watched with considerable interest. Up to the present time there has been little or no blockade, but the last week has brought very considerable complaints of car shortage in various districts and this is likely to increase. Even if the farmers have been holding for higher figures they will make an effort to get the grain out before the close of navigation and if they rush the wheat in November the fun will begin in earnest.

In going over the full list of Winnipeg prices sent you last week I cannot find a single addition or alteration to make. All staple lines are selling steadily, prices are firm and at present there does not seem much likelihood of any startling changes for some time to come. There will be shadings of prices no doubt, as there always are but nothing very radical is likely to occur in the near future.

EXPORT CATTLE.

The market has not improved in the matter of prices and the number of cattle going forward is very small compared with previous years. Some few of the ranchers tried the experiment of shipping their cattle to the Chicago market but it was learned on good authority that after paying freight and duty they only receipted 3⅜ to 3½c. per lb. This would mean a net price of about 2¼ to 2½ on the range for steers that probably cost $27 to $30 eighteen months to two years ago.

BUTCHERS' CATTLE.

The market here is well supplied, but the number of strictly fat cattle is rather below the demand. Prices run from 2¾ to 3c. Winnipeg.

DRESSED BEEF.

Supply is good and prices are unchanged, being 5¾ to 6c. for tops.

MUTTON.

The supplies of sheep reaching this market are small and the price is 4c. off cars Winnipeg. Dressed mutton is in fair supply and brings 8c. Lambs dressed run from 10 to 11c.

HOGS.

The supplies of live hogs are increasing and are larger than last year at the same period. The price is lower in sympathy with outside markets and 5½c. is all that is being paid for the best bacon hogs; this is a much lower range than last year, but is still sufficiently high to allow a reasonable profit to the farmer. This price is for hogs from 200 to 250. Under and over weights are ¾ to 1c. less.

CURED MEATS.

Prices in cured meats are not so strong as they have been, but trade is good. Quotations are: Hams, 14½c.; shoulder, 9c.; breakfast bacon, bellies, 14½c.; backs, 12½c.; spiced rolls, 11¾c. for long and 11¼c. for short; long clear bacon, 10c.; dry salt bacon, 11c.

LARD.

There has been a general decline in lard prices; tierces are quoted at 9⅜c.; 50-lb. tubs, $4.80; 20-lb. pails, $2; 10-lb. pails, in cases, $6.05; 5-lb. pails, do., $6.15; and 3-lb. pails, do., $6.25; compound lard, $1.75 for the 20-lb. pail.

BUTTER.

There is a fairly large amount of dairy butter coming in and the grade is very much mixed so that prices paid by jobbers range from 11 to 13c. Winnipeg.

CHEESE.

Jobbers' prices to retailers are 13c. for Manitoba and 13½c. for Ontarios. Local factories are all closed and the trade is confined exclusively to the selling of accumulated stocks.

EGGS.

The jobbers offer 20c. for eggs delivered at Winnipeg, but supplies are small. Ordinary packed eggs sell to the retailer at about the same price.

POULTRY.

Inquiry elicits the fact that the supplies of Manitoba poultry for the Christmas trade will be larger than usual, particularly in the lines of geese and turkeys. Whether they will arrive better fed and better dressed than in previous years it would be difficult to foretell.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, Nov. 2, 1903.

THE grocery trade has been very active during the past week. All local wholesale houses report a a good business with sales fully up to anticipation. There have been few important changes in market conditions, all lines continuing firm. Rolled oats have advanced slightly and higher prices are again paid for cheese. Quotations on canned salmon and canned meats have been advanced.

The direct steamer with dried fruits from Denia and Malaga arrived in port on Sunday and discharged here 2,500 tons of currants, raisins and onions for the wholesale houses of this city. She had a fair passage, the latter half being stormy. The fruit was discharged in excellent condition, and wholesale staffs for the rest of the week will be very busy receiving it into stock and shipping it out to fill orders booked in advance of arrival. The Bellona took on board a considerable cargo of dried and pickled fish at this port for the Upper Provinces and sailed for Quebec and Montreal with the balance of her through cargo of dried fruits.

The Fall mackerel struck in on Saturday in great numbers, and some of our fishermen have made snug fortunes. One man is reported to have cleared $3,000 in the past 48 hours. Up to the present strike the mackerel fishery had been almost a failure. The Summer run was small and people had begun to despair of the Fall catch. Now, however, the harvest is on and our fishermen are rejoicing. Very large quantities were taken Saturday night, and this necessitated a lot of Sunday work by carters and others to prevent the catch from spoiling. The police force had a number of these Sunday workers summoned for violating the Sunday law—an unnecessary proceeding considering the circumstances.

Grocery grades of herring and cod are scarce, and the trade will be very hard put for supplies before the close of the Lenten demand. The market keeps very firm for both Shore and Bank codfish, although there has been a decline in the price paid for Labrador "Cure," on account of a drop in the Oporto market, which is the chief export market for this grade.

There is considerable activity at Deep Water, and preparations are being made for the shipment of grain at this port by the Allan boats. The I.C.R. elevator is being got into condition to receive the grain. For many years this elevator has stood a monument to the deferred hopes of those who expected Halifax to become an important outlet for the products of the Western wheat fields. But in all these years no grain came, the shorter haul and influences of American ports being too much to be overcome. Lately, however, there has come a reversal of traffic conditions between the Maritime and Upper Provinces which has rendered the loading of grain at Halifax feasible in the Winter months. This season the west-bound freight has largely exceeded the east-bound, so that now, instead of sending the cars back empty after discharging, the grain return freights can be secured.

Window and Interior Displays

Timely Hints and Suggestions.

EVERYONE has heard of the great lift lock on the Trent canal in Peterborough—the largest of its kind in the world, and a great feat in engineering. To those who have not seen a picture of it the accompanying reproduction of a window arranged by Mr. Jas. A. Dawson for Mr. J. Edgcumbe, grocer, Peterborough, will give a very good idea of the appearance of this great work.

Side View of the Lock.

The entire production, where possible, was built up of " Blue Ribbon " tea packages, shaped when necessary to simulate the slants or curves of the actual work. The large balancing locks, the steps in various places, the tunnel under the canal, the vessels in position, etc., are all represented with remarkable exactness. The idea was certainly an ingenions one and was exceptionally well worked out. It was built on a base, so that it could be placed in any position.

Something that counted against it in the eyes of the judges in the competition was the fact that neither illustration shows the window as it would appear to the passers by, and, of course, it was from their standpoint that the prizes were given. One picture shows a side view, made very distinct by blocking out the remaining parts of the picture. This was a very good scheme for displaying the outline. The other picture shows, as far as can be made out, the display turned around to face the inside of the window, and thus shows no background or sides, and these count very much in the value of any window arrangement.

It was a bright idea that suggested the use of a line in groceries to build the display. The average decorator, even if he had thought of such a scheme as the building of the locks, would have gone to work to construct it from an elaborate framework, which would have made the display as suitable for a dry goods as for a grocery store, and thus lost much of the valuable advertisement which this " Blue Ribbon " structure gives.

The fancy window that has no relation to the goods carried has only limited value. As an advertisement of the store they are worth something, since they attract people to the window and thus indirectly to the firm and lines carried by it ; but its value as a selling window is small, and its use should be seldom, and only for variety. Neither should it be allowed to remain long.

This window, however, combines both the fancy window and the one that advertises some definite line of goods on sale in the store. No one could look at the locks without noticing " Blue Ribbon " tea and thus both purposes are served—the attractive window, and the selling window.

This idea could be carried out in any sized town, by representing some public building, such as a school, town hall or church, built up of cakes of soap or packages of tea.

HOW TO KILL CHICKENS.

Editor CANADIAN GROCER :

On page 31 of the October 23 number of THE CANADIAN GROCER I notice a resume of the debate in the House of Commons regarding the information contained in the bulletin "Profitable Poultry Farming" on killing chickens. I regret that the member of Parliament who wrote the article, as well as Mr. Rufus Pope, the member for Stanstead, was not aware of the great difference between killing chickens by dislocating the neck and the old-fashioned way of wringing or twisting the neck. When the chicken's neck is dislocated the head is pulled from the neck; the loose unbroken skin of the neck forms a sack in which the blood of the chicken flows. The body of the chicken is as well drained of blood as if the head of the chicken were cut off with an axe. The market appearance of the chicken is improved by dislocation; the flesh of the chicken is more juicy and edible. On the contrary, when the chickens are killed by twisting the neck, death results mainly from strangulation. The body of the chicken is not freed from blood, on account of there being no space in the neck into which the blood can flow. The appearance of the flesh of the chicken that has been killed by twisting its neck is reddish, and blood can be plainly noted in it. In several cities in Canada a law is in force prohibiting the sale of chickens that are killed by twisting the neck.

Hence the senselessness of the speech by Mr. Pope in the House of Commons regarding the detailed directions in "Profitable Poultry Farming" for dislocating the neck, and the absurdity of the statement that dislocating the neck and wringing the neck are one and the same thing.

TEAS OF OOLONG CHARACTER.

Editor CANADIAN GROCER :

I feel quite sure that my friend Mr. Valentine Webster was misunderstood when he was reported as being of the opinion that Ceylon and India should "imitate" Formosa Oolongs. Mr. Webster and myself, when chatting the matter over, were of the same opinion as to the desirability of Ceylon and India producing a tea of Oolong character, but we both believe that the planters there would so excel the product of Formosa (just as they have the black tea of China and the green tea of Japan), that there would be no similarity; so that the word "imitate," I know, hardly expresses the views of Mr. Webster, and in his absence from town I am taking the liberty of saying so.

Yours truly,
P. C. LARKIN.

FLOUR AND CEREAL FOODS

The Selling of Cereals.

THE impetus given to the cereal business of grocers by competition among the makers, has resulted in a very largely increased cereal trade, a trade, however, that is not entirely satisfactory to the retailer. In the old days, when bulk cereals were the rule, the public were content to take any maker's article, so long as it was good, and satisfactory. The question, "Whose make of meal is this?" was seldom asked. The grocer could sell bulk cereals without difficulty, buying from several millers of his choice without his customers knowing anything about it, and in this there was a certain convenience. This condition of affairs still obtains in some sections of the country where the potency of advertising has not made itself felt to the same extent as in those communities where daily papers flourish. The grocer is not called upon for package goods and so does not push them. There is yet a big work to be done by the makers of cereals whose goods are put up in cartons, before the rural sections are converted from the old ideas and practices.

Where the influence of advertising has abounded, and the demand for package goods is growing, the retailer finds himself called upon for a great many different brands, and then his trouble begins. He buys, we shall say, a case or two of every line asked for, and finds himself unready to urge any particular make. Soon he finds that he has a surplus of two or three lines and an ever growing call for perhaps two or more other makes. He stocks these afresh with an increased confidence in their worth and naturally feels disgusted with those that have not sold so freely and seem destined to remain on his shelves. The best thing to do with these lag goods is to get rid of them, by quietly working them off, or by rushing them off at a cut figure—the danger in both cases is that there may be created in some instances a preference for the very goods the grocer has resolved not to restock.

When so many millers and cereal makers are bringing pressure to bear upon both the public and the grocer, it is difficult to know what is best to do. However, the grocer who confines his package cereal trade to the lines which prove their own merit will do wisely, and generally speaking, it will be best to stock those most widely and forcibly advertised. It is not a question of fighting the growing demand for package goods; few grocers are powerful enough to successfully contest the issue. Whether or not one believes in selling goods which cost more to buy, pay a smaller profit, and are more costly to the consumer, the course of prudence is to give the public what it demands. At the same time the grocer will not neglect to sell all the bulk cereals he can to those people who have not yet been persuaded that health and strength can be found only in a cardboard box containing forms of breakfast food which have these last few years taken such a strong hold on the market.

New Wheat Record for Montreal.

"AT the end of the season of navigation close to 30,000,000 bushels of grain will have been shipped from the West through the port of Montreal.

"This will mean an increase of more than 10,000,000 bushels over last year. Had shipments not fallen so far below the average this Fall through the farmers holding their grain, shipments through this port would have passed the 40,000,000 mark, and more than doubled those of any previous season in the history of the port."

In making this announcement to a representative of The Montreal Herald, Mr. E. J. Chamberlain, manager of the Canada Atlantic Railway, pointed out how, as a result of keen competition, rates had fallen so low that notwithstanding the big increase in shipments, the profit to the different companies had not increased to any extent.

"The Canada Atlantic Railway," he continued, "has handled on its upper lake boats and thence through to Coteau Landing and Montreal this season more than 8,500,000 bushels of grain.

"The entrance into the trade of so many new lines of steamers has resulted in the creation of entirely new rates. Where last year the lowest rate at which the Canada Atlantic handled grain was 4¼c. a bushel, this year the average price has been 3½c. a bushel, and in many instances we were forced to go close to a 3c. rate. This, of course, means that the farmer has saved a great deal more money.

"The result of the farmers keeping back their grain means now that they will have to keep it right through the Winter, and this will result in very heavy shipments as soon as navigation reopens."

Canada's Field Products.

The census department issued a bulletin last week showing the field products of Canada, as shown by the census of 1880, 1890 and 1900 respectively. The totals were:

Grains, 1880, bushels, 149,461,399; 1890, bushels, 175,545,724; 1900, bushels, 282,411,911.

Seeds, 1880, bushels, 324,317; 1890, bushels, 484,880; 1900, bushels, 460,632.

Whole Wheat as a Breakfast Food.

STEAMED whole wheat as a breakfast dish has found favor in New York City, according to an American exchange, where it is said that in a certain restaurant they cook the cereal until it is something to dream of.

Only the best quality of wheat is used and the cooking is a matter of prime importance. When the wheat is to be cooked on a gas stove it is soaked over night and at four o'clock in the morning it goes into a double boiler with four portions of water to one of wheat. It is then cooked steadily, the water boiling hard all the time, until 11 o'clock, when it is ready to serve. It is a luncheon dish at the restaurant, where only vegetable foods are used.

For cooking on an ordinary range it is put on in a double boiler over night, the water in the lower kettle is brought to a boiling point and then the wheat is set back and allowed to stand all night. In the morning it is again brought forward and cooked steadily for seven hours.

When ready for the table the wheat is in large, round grains the size of peas, soft and tender, and yet each grain retains its individuality and shape like a well-cooked grain of rice. It is usually served with milk or cream, but may be eaten with butter and sugar.

Millers might be able to create a limited demand for wheat for this purpose. It would be necessary to select the grain carefully and clean it thoroughly. It could be placed on the market in five-pound packages, neat paper bags or cartons being used. Printed directions for cooking should, of course, accompany each package and the price can be fixed at a figure that will allow a good profit.

Immense Warehouse.

The Canadian Northern Road is completing at Port Arthur what is to be the largest grain storage warehouse in the world. It will exceed in capacity the great concrete storage of The Peavey Co., at Duluth, by 500,000 bushels. The Peavey storage now holds the world's record for size with its 4,000,000 bushels capacity under a single roof.

The Canadian Northern elevator consists of 160 cylindrical bins, each 21 feet in diameter and 85 feet deep to a concrete foundation. There is absolutely no wood about the entire structure, for the bins are of tile, arranged in double walls with steel tie rods surrounding each roof tile. Each cylinder touches those adjoining at four points, forming smaller bins with concave sides, and these are also to be filled with grain.

Sixteen thousand tons of tile were made in Illinois and shipped here for the work, and the builders are Americans, a Minneapolis concern. This elevator is connected with a wood and steel working house and contains nothing in the way of machinery but rubber belts running in concrete tunnels.

The working house has a capacity for 1,250,000 bushels, giving the road in this group a total capacity for storing 5,750,000 bushels of wheat. One-half the tile storage was built a year ago and successfully carried grain through last Winter.

Envy Us Our Wheat.

UNITED STATES millers, as has previously been remarked, are turning envious eyes toward our Western Canadian wheat. At the great convention in Detroit this Summer, resolutions were passed calling for reciprocity and the abolition of the duty on wheat. The American Miller, in a recent editorial, comments on the persistently increasing demand for wheat, despite a 659,000,000-bushel crop.

"When northwestern millers begin to talk of wheat shortage with such a crop as this on our hands," it remarks, "even if a portion of it is unsound, it is time to take an inventory of conditions and consider if price levels and crop normals are not higher and permanently higher than they were six or seven years ago. Nowhere is there a fear of a glut of wheat. Nor did such a fear present itself when last Spring the promise was a crop so huge as almost to stagger one."

"As to the revived talk of reciprocity," it shrewdly continues, "all the talking will be done on this side; Canadians are averse to renewing the subject. And it is idle to go at a simple matter in such a roundabout fashion as by attempting the negotiation of a reciprocity treaty. It does not need a treaty to take off our duty on Canadian wheat and let it come in. While it would benefit the Manitoba farmer, it would also benefit us.

The question of protection is not at stake. The prices for wheat and cotton are made in the world's markets. We gain nothing by compelling Manitoba wheat to find a market abroad. Every bushel of it sold in Great Britain affects the price in the United States just the same as if it were all handled in Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago. No protectionist need fear the charge of inconsistency in voting to remove the duty on Canadian wheat. It will help Canada and will help us. Why wait for a reciprocity treaty that may never come? We don't need the consent of the Dominion to make this simple, business-like move."

A Macaroni Booklet.

The Napoli Macaroni Co. have issued a very neat little booklet describing the several points of superiority claimed for the goods of their manufacture. It is explained that by using a specially prepared flour, very rich in gluten, the basis is of the very purest quality. No coloring matter whatever is used in their preparations, the delicate creamy color of the goods being entirely due to the superior excellence of their wheat.

The machinery used in the making of Napoli macaroni is of the very latest design and the addition of some of the company's own ideas prevents the macaroni from coming into contact with the hands of their employes at any stage of its manufacture. This advantage is worthy of special mention, as many foreign brands receive very little care in this direction.

The system of filtering the air in passing from room to room excludes all possibility of dust and dirt, the ventilating machines allowing only pure fresh air to come into contact with the goods. The finished products are very neatly packed in cartons, then wrapped in plate paper, sealed and finally wrapped in parchment paper, labelled and sealed again.

A visitor to the factory is at once struck with the clean and natty appearance of the employes. The men are supplied with white suits, and the young women in the packing department with print uniforms. Everything is suggestive of purity and cleanliness and the products of The Napoli Co. are already in good demand.

Fort William Dockage.

A deputation from Fort William, composed of Mayor John Dyke, Councillor L. L. Pelletier, J. J. Wells, president of the Board of Trade, and James Murphy, W. F. Hogarth, C. W. Jarvis and S. C. Young, waited on Sir Wilfrid Laurier last week to bring before him the question of dredging the Mission River.

Their reception was gratifying, as Sir Wilfrid said the estimates for the work had been considered and operations would be commenced at an early date. The delegation pointed out to the Premier the importance of the work, which will increase the dockage of Fort William by miles, and will advance the opening of navigation in the Spring two full weeks, which will have a most beneficial effect on the question of wheat transportation.

Good Crops at Indian Head.

Mr. A. MacKay, the superintendent of the Experimental Farm at Indian Head, Assa., writes that just around Indian Head most of the farmers have finished threshing. The yields on stubble run from 20 to 30 bushels per acre, and on Summer fallow from 30 to 35 bushels. The former grades, as a rule, No. 1 Northern, the present price for which there is 73c., and the Summer fallow wheat, No. 2 and No. 3 Northern. There are, however, many fields north of the Qu'Appelle River where wheat from Summer fallow will grade lower than No. 3 Northern.

The returns last year were regarded as eminently satisfactory, but the probabilities are that the cash receipts this year from the 1903 crop will, owing to the higher prices, aggregate more than what was realized from the crop of 1902.

Serious Mill Fire.

On Thursday of last week quite a serious blaze broke out in the premises of The McCann Milling Co., King street east, Toronto. The fire originated in the top storey, presumably from friction in a suction fan, and having a good start, gave the fire brigade considerable trouble. There was almost an entire loss of machinery and stock, covered by insurance.

The delay in business will occasion considerable loss and inconvenience and although the McCann company are doing the best they can to get things into running shape their customers will regret to learn that it will be fully a fortnight before they will be able to resume business.

Col. J. M. Pennington, an enthusiastic banana flour promoter, of Havana, Cuba, recently gave a dinner at Marianao to some big people, all the food set before the guests being either all or in part composed of the banana in various forms. Among the items on the bill of fare were the following: Banana soup, with banana crackers; banana pancakes, with banana jelly; stewed chicken, with banana gravey; roast chicken, with banana dressing; roast beef, with banana jelly; banana butter, banana jelly cake, banana muffins, banana fruit cake, banana plain cake, banana coffee, etc.

Cereal Notes.

St. Boniface, Man., is to have a new elevator at a cost of $150,000.

Ontario grain men complain that the railroads are not supplying sufficient cars to move the grain.

St. John and Halifax expect a large export grain trade during the coming season. The Halifax elevator will commence operations next month.

The plan to have a model mill in operation at the St. Louis Exposition has been abandoned for fear of arousing jealousy among rival makers of machinery.

CONDENSED MILK CONCERN.

A VISITOR to Montreal this week was Mr. F. E. Gifford, manager of The St. Charles Milk Co., St. Charles, Ill. A representative of THE GROCER had the pleasure of an interview with Mr. Gifford at the Windsor Hotel.

In the course of the interview Mr. Gifford stated that the increase in his company's business was very large, in fact it exceeded all expectations. His company, as readers of THE GROCER are aware, has a branch establishment at Ingersoll, Ont., and it is learned with gratification that the output of the Canadian factory, both as regards volume and quality of the goods used, is equal to anything on the market.

The district in which the St. Charles factories are located is one of the finest dairy districts in the United States. A number of condensed milk factories have been established in that district owing to the pure quality of the milk obtainable there. His company have two large factories with a daily capacity of about 1,000 cases of condensed milk and evaporated cream, and shipments are being made to all parts of the world. Mr. Gifford stated that during the South-African war large quantities of St. Charles Condensed Milk Co.'s products were shipped and used by the British Army, in consequence of which an extensive trade is rapidly growing for their products in that country. Orders from Japan, China, Australia and India are also increasing in volume.

It is very gratifying to Canadians to know that the business of the Ingersoll factory is one of the largest of the many condensed milk factories on the continent and the future prospects are most encouraging. The Canadian trade was rather slow in taking hold of the condensed milk and evaporated cream articles as compared with the United States, but during the past few years the demand has been extending rapidly in all directions, and the Yukon trade which formerly was looked after entirely by the American factories, is now one of the best, and is done entirely from the Canadian branch. When it is considered that this branch was opened only in 1900, it speaks volumes, not only for the quality of the goods turned out, but also a tribute to the manner in which the Canadian farmers in the Ingersoll district have looked to supplying milk in proper condition.

Mr. Gifford gave our representative a very interesting account of the origin and growth of the condensed milk business in America, the salient features of which were, that in 1858 Mr. Gail Borden made the first condensed milk on this continent, using an ordinary teakettle in the preparation of his first goods. Before Mr. Borden made his first milk all the condensed milk used in the United States was made in and imported from Sweden. There are now no less than 202 factories engaged in the manufacture of condensed milk in America, about 60 of which make evaporated cream as well as condensed milk.

Mr. Gifford stated that it was rather a difficult matter to get the trade and public to take a liking to evaporated cream on account of the number of years condensed milk had been so generally used, but now it was getting to be a most popular article.

Mr. Gifford was kind enough to state that the benefits derived from advertisements placed with THE CANADIAN GROCER were very large, and while his company were as a rule adverse to using trade journals, he was compelled, in justice, to admit that they had received more enquiries from foreign countries for information regarding their products directly traceable to their advertisement in THE GROCER than from all other advertising sources.

Mr. W. H. Dunn, Montreal, representative of The St. Charles Milk Co., was present at the interview, and reported that the increase in business in this district was very large, and the prospects for the future most encouraging.

BOXES FOR APPLES.

A recent bulletin issued by the Dominion Department of Agriculture reads as follows :

In view of the scarcity and high price of apple barrels this season, and of the fact that in some districts farmers find it impossible to secure barrels at any price, the Fruit Division recommends the general use of boxes. These can be had, knocked down, at almost any saw-mill for about eight cents each, and they should not cost more than ten cents each made up. As three boxes hold about as many apples as a barrel, they will be found much cheaper than barrels at 50 cents and upwards. The boxes should be well and strongly nailed, and should hold about 40 pounds of fruit. The dimensions of the boxes used by the Grimsby shippers are 9x12 x 18 ins., while the British Columbia standard box is 10x11 x 18 ins., these being inside measurements in both cases. The boxes should be made of strong material not less than five-eighths of an inch thick for the ends, and not less than three-eighths of an inch for the sides ; the tops should have strips across the ends to prevent the weight of other packages piled on top from bearing directly on the fruit. It is also usual to leave open corners at the top and bottom for ventilation. Little or no packing material should be used, as purchasers like to find the package quite full of fruit. A sheet of cardboard at the top and bottom will materially reduce the amount of injury from bruises. But it should be remembered that even in this year of scarcity of barrels it will not do to ship anything but first-class fruit in boxes, as the reputation of the Canadian box and of the Canadian trade in general will greatly suffer if inferior or common fruit is exported in the box or any fancy package.

FLOOR GAVE WAY.

A section of the two floors above the operating rooms at the new Burlington canning factory gave way early Friday morning and resulted in damages to the extent of $2,000. The foundation seemed to have been unsound.

OUT OF A BOTTLE.

Last year when some gentlemen were going around Green Bay on the ss. Clyde on business and pleasure, says The St. John's, N.F., News in a recent number, they decided to throw overboard a bottle containing a slip of paper, the finder to receive a certain amount of goods by returning it to one of the city stores. The following is a copy of the note :

"If the finder of this will present it at J. J. St. John's store, Duckworth street, St. John's, N.F., he will receive a can of magic baking powder, a package of gold dust, a bar of tar soap, a bar of copco soap, a can of gillett's lye, a can of gillett's cream tartar, and a package of vim tea.—(Signed), T. T. Cartwright, H. B. Potter, D. E. Brown, D. J. Curtain, ss. Clyde. June 21, 1902."

A few days ago the note was forwarded to Mr. Curtain, at Mr. St. John's store, the bottle having been picked up by George Snow, near Lewisport, on July 8, 1903, having been 362 days beating about Green Bay. The goods mentioned were forwarded to Mr. Snow immediately.

MORE EXTENSIVE QUARTERS.

Cameron, Gordon & Co., of Winnipeg, are again compelled to seek more extensive quarters for their rapidly growing business. They have leased the large warehouse located at the corner of Princess & McDermott streets, Winnipeg, formerly occupied by Foley, Lock & Larson, which will give them over 13,000 square feet floor space. This is the third time this enterprising commission house have added to their warehousing capacity in the two years they have been in business. Among the lines handled by them are those of The N. K. Fairbank Co.: Gold Dust, cottolene, soaps, etc. They also represent some of the large English and American manufacturers, and are always alive to secure goods of merit suitable to the western trade.

Tobaccos, Cigars, and Smokers' Accessories

A DEPARTMENT FOR RETAIL MERCHANTS.

Why Not Carry Pipes?

WITH the approach of the Christmas season the wide-awake grocer will add to his tobacco and cigar department a seasonable line of pipes. The pipe is at once a popular and appropriate article for a Christmas present. The smoker, however much he becomes attached to an old favorite, is always ready to welcome a handsome new pipe to his collection. People are very often at a loss to know on what to decide for a Christmas gift. The choice from a judicious assortment of pipes solves the difficulty.

Some wholesale houses now make up assorted lines of pipes for just this sort of trade. It will not be necessary, therefore, for the grocer to invest any very considerable amount of capital in order to secure an assortment which will be at once attractive and seductively profitable.

There is a very reasonable margin of profit, from 30 to 40 per cent., on pipes, and on some more. There is no waste, little capital is required, and no extra help is needed in order to dispose of the goods. The profit therefore is clear, and so much to the good.

Grocers will consult their best interests by calling on the tobacconists when in their wholesale centre, and looking over the great range of pipes that are some places carried. Ideas in this way may also be gathered for the best ways of displaying goods, and at the same time a serviceable familiarity gained with the several pipes most in demand.

A reference to our advertising columns will put the grocer, who is contemplating stocking pipes, in touch with the firms who can fill his requirements.

A Wonderful Industry.

IT is estimated that there are not fewer than 3,000,000 persons that earn their living, in whole or in part, from the growing and the manipulation of the tobacco plant, says The Western Tobacco Journal. In the United States alone there are no fewer than 657,715 persons engaged in growing, curing and manufacturing this product, besides those engaged in its sale, transportation and the retail trade, which must be fully as many more in the aggregate. Assuming that the crop grown one year is manufactured or exported the next, or taking a series of years as a basis of figuring, the Government ought to be able to check through its Revenue and Customs Departments so as to account very closely for the amount of tobacco which the Agricultural Department declares through its statistical agent is produced each year. But the fact of the matter is there is quite a wide discrepancy. The reported production as given by the census of 1889 was 488,256,646 pounds. The total quantity of domestic tobacco reported by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for that year, manufactured and exported, was 555,054,048 pounds. This statement shows an excess of manufactured and exported tobacco over production of 66,797,402 or 13.6 per cent. of the whole. Since the census of 1900 the conditions have been reversed, and now the trouble is to account for the large excess in production over that of manufacture and exportation. This is another proof that it is quite a difficult matter to arrive at anything like accurate statistics regarding the tobacco crop.

$43,000 Worth of Pipes.

A REPRESENTATIVE of THE GROCER called on W. B. Reid & Co., wholesale tobacconists, Toronto, recently, and was shown through their pipes and smokers' supplies department. The department occupies the whole of the first flat, and was such as to astonish the writer. $43,000 worth of pipes in 800 different styles are not seen every day. Mr. Reid has samples of each pipe in stock classified and arranged in a handsome cabinet, so that there is not the least trouble in finding any style or price of pipe desired. There are all kinds calculated to delight the heart of the smoker; briars of long stems, short stems, bull dog shapes; cherry pipes of various designs; long Dutchman's hookahs, and aristocratic meerschaums, ranging in price to sell at from 25c. to $10 each.

They come in all packages, from the sawdust packing around the plebeian clay to the morocco-bound, silk-lined work of art which encases the fragile meerschanm. In fancy pipes for Christmas trade especially there are some attractive lines, very handsome, mounted in silver and gold. These holiday goods are of course appropriately encased.

An inspection of the stock, which fills the shelves and tables of the department, raises the question of what becomes of all these pipes? The answer must be sought with the similar question, what becomes of all the pins?

Besides the pipes, the W. B. Reid Co. have a full line of cigarette and cigar cases, holders, and indeed all smokers' supplies, some of which, along with the pipes, are imported from Austria, France, Britain and the United States.

A consignment of 50 cases, valued at $15,000, are just being taken out of the Custom House to complete the Christmas stock.

Murdered by Smugglers.

News comes from Constantinople to the effect that many of the Koldjis of The Turkish Tobacco Co. have been murdered in the everlasting strife there, eays The Western Tobacco Journal. These men, it seems, are specially employed to keep down the smuggling, and are much hated by the poorer folk of the land. The selling of tobacco appears to be more or less of a foreign monopoly, and the consequent dearness of the leaf causes a great deal of smuggling to take place. Who knows whether the Christians in Macedonia murdered the Koldjis out of personal hatred or out of liking for cheaper tobacco. Probably for the latter reason, for, until the monopoly came, tobacco was cheap, but now it is so dear that well nigh an army would be required to put down smuggling.

Unique use for Cigar Boxes.

It is curious how firmly-rooted in Great Britain are the opinions of American "fakery," remarks The Tobacco and Cigar Journal. Any story, no matter how absurd, provided it relates to Yankee cunning, is apparently implicitly believed by the newspapers which publish such yarns and those that pass them on. One such, that has recently been going the rounds is to the effect that "a Buffalo spice merchant collects old cigar boxes and reduces them to a powder which he sells for ground cinnamon." The report naively concludes that "this practice is a common one in Buffalo." It is interesting to learn even that firms purporting to be spice manufacturers are "common" in Buffalo.

British Tobacco Trade.

There are to-day 411 tobacco manufacturers in England, 46 in Scotland and 25 in Ireland. In 1897 there were 413 in England, 54 in Scotland and 27 in Ireland. In the United Kingdom there has been a total falling off of 24 manufacturers in five years.

In contrast to this condition the number of retail dealers has increased enormously. In England there has been an increase of 28,351, in Scotland 5,202 and in Ireland 1,603, making a total increase of 35,156.

There are 290,836 retail dealers in England, 32,806 in Scotland and 35,647 in Ireland, making a total of 359,289.

How the Bishop had his Smoke.

QUEEN VICTORIA had, as a matter of fact, the greatest objection to smoking, and would not allow a smoking-room in any of the royal palaces until comparatively recently. On one occasion, after being received at Windsor Castle, Bishop Phillips Brooks was shown to his room, and soon proceeded to light his accustomed cigar.

Presently the smoke reached the nostrils of a custodian somewhere not far away, who came to the door and asked the guest not to smoke, as it was forbidden. Bishop Brooks went into the corridor and continued smoking there. The custodian again begged him to desist.

The Bishop went back to his room and out upon the balcony, and resumed his cigar, thinking that he was now in the open air.

Again the custodian came, this time passing through the Bishop's room, and said:

"Smoking is not permitted, sir, in any part of Windsor Castle."

Once more he disappeared, and Brooks, who gave up a cigar with great reluctance, when he had once lighted it, returned to his room.

A happy thought occurred to him. There was an open fireplace in his room. The Bishop lay down on his back on the floor, put his head up into the chimney and began to smoke there. This time he was undisturbed. Before the smell of the smoke had betrayed him; now, the smoke went up the chimney.

The cigar was finished in peace.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Tobacco Notes.

Charles Legros, tobacconist, Peterboro', was found dead in his bed Friday morning. The deceased was a large importer of Havana cigars.

T. J. Horrocks says that his factory is taxed to supply the demand for the "Ronto" cigar, and the scarcity of good cigar makers adds to the difficulty.

The W. H. Steele Co., Scott street, Toronto, ask the attention of the trade to their stock of pipes which is now complete and ready for the holiday trade.

Abbott Blunt, in The Minneapolis Times, sagely remarks: "As to the New York man who is said to have wrecked his mind by smoking from 60 to 80 cigarettes a day, did he go crazy because he smoked so many cigarettes, or did he smoke so many cigarettes because he was crazy?

According to the report of the English Consul at Pakhoi, the Chinese recently have been eager buyers of imported cigarette paper for rolling their own cigarettes. The custom has become very fashionable in China of late.

DEPARTMENT OF ADVERTISING SUGGESTION AND CRITICISM

Edited by
W. Arthur Lydiatt,
TORONTO.

NOTE—Herein are discussed the principles and practice of advertising. Subscribers are invited to send Mr. Lydiatt specimens of their newspaper and other advertising, for the purpose of review in this department. Address care of Department of Advertising THE CANADIAN GROCER.

The Best Advertising is "Store News"—It Should be Written in the Spirit in Which the Store is Managed.

THE same rules hold good in writing an advertisement as in news writing. First, tell what is offered for sale; second, where offered; third, by whom; fourth, give the most important essentials as to the goods, particulars as to qualities, values, usefulness, etc.; fifth, follow up with any interesting details that may be helpful and interesting to the buyer and help in any way to induce a sale.

All advertising certainly should be constructed with the idea, first, to inform, and second, to interest the reader. In the news columns of the daily papers striking headings are used to call attention to the facts contained in what follows and to the importance of the same. The headings frequently contain all, regarding certain classes of news, which many of the readers care to know.

So in advertising, the announcements which can be taken in at a glance, are all that many readers and possibly buyers wish; but these advertisements or ad. headings should convey an idea at a glance as to what the body of the advertisement has of special interest to present. The opening display line should be a key to the whole and reflect enough of what follows to awaken interest therein.

Advertisements should be clear, simple and straightforward; should be neither trivial nor dull; should be dignified, but not stilted. The idea should be kept ever in mind that the advertisement is to inform. This always should be the leading thought; but it is wise, while informing, also to please and interest.

Here come in the uses of the art. The attractiveness that turns the attention to the advertisement creates the opportunity to inform. The word "advertise," while meaning to inform, comes from two latin words, "ad" to, and "verto" to turn, or literally to turn to, and what every advertiser wants is for the reader to turn to his advertisement. This might be accomplished by making it so hideous as to attract attention by its very hideousness. There may be classes of advertising in which even this might be allowable, as where the thing advertised is intended to save the purchaser and user from something horrible, and the object of the ad. is to startle and fill with terror. The lake of fire and brimstone and the burning that may never be quenched have served the purpose of advertising the means of escape therefrom, but purchasers are generally attracted rather than frightened into buying. The illustration which gives pleasure is more apt to awaken a desire for possession. "Vinegar never catches flies."

This has become an age of the gospel of the beautiful, the good and the true. Men are drawn by, instead of being compelled to, these. Truth is the first essential of the advertising art, as it is of eloquence, and it always attracts. Beauty might very properly be said to be the expression, in perfect form, symmetry and harmony, of truth itself, and hence is a prime essential in the well-constructed advertisement.

Man is a complex being, and has sentiment, heart, fancy and imagination that are just as real and active in their demands as is the body itself, or as are reason and judgment. The advertising story, while it must be truthful and, to be permanently effective, must be backed up by true, honest dealing, also must be made to appeal to the heart as well as to the understanding. It must not only appeal to the desire to satisfy actual necessities, but to the fancy, the taste and the imagination. The Indian's moccasins, blanket and leggings serve as protection to the body and keep out the cold, but they do not meet the demands of the modern well-dressed merchant. The crudest, coarsest kind of a statement, put up in Indian-blanket style, might answer for an advertisement of cornmeal and bacon in a hungry community already spurred to the buying point by the gnawings of appetite, but this would not be true as to either the necessities or luxuries of life in highly refined communities with unlimited opportunities for making choice as to character of food and with abundance of means to supply whatever refined taste or fancy might suggest or dictate.

This leads to another important thought: Advertising should be suited to the people whom it is intended to reach and influence. One must not fire above the heads of his possible customers, but at their hearts, with words that are understood by them, and with a view to their likings, their conditions, and their financial ability.

This does not make it necessary to refrain from attacking wrongs or abuses in an advertisement, nor from showing that there are better ways of dressing or of living than the old methods—more economical, healthful and enjoyable. When this is undertaken, the advertiser is in the position of the pioneer or missionary, and must be well grounded in the facts that he presents. He must show, in a convincing manner, a knowledge above those whom he seeks to persuade from the old ways. This may, however, be said of all advertising that is to prove successful, for—as cannot be too frequently repeated, because apparently so often forgotten—advertising is to inform. One cannot inform another without superior knowledge.

No one ever knows too much about any subject on which he attempts to instruct others. Right here comes in the great trouble. The one who is most expert as to the goods, implements or machinery to be sold very frequently finds it almost impossible to put his knowledge on paper in a way forcibly and intelligently to convey that knowledge to others. If the merchant could only talk through his advertisement as he talks with his customers face to face there would be no trouble, but this seems almost impossible in most cases. Here is the place where the newspaper man must come to the aid of the dealer. He must get the story and then use his skill as a writer in putting the facts before the ad. readers as would the intelligent salesman, had he the customer before him really seeking to know.

in connection with your Tobacco Department. You will sell them if you have them. Pipes pay a good profit. Smokers are continually buying pipes. The proof of this lies all around you. Another proof is in the hundreds of thousands of pipes that are annually sold in Canada—and clay pipes are not counted.

The Holiday Trade in pipes has begun. Pipes for gifts, pipes for own use, are first-class stock. Here's a special offer to Canadian grocers, so good that it ought to bring to us some thousands of orders :

We will send prepaid to any address, on approbation, an assorted box containing three dozen pipes, valued at $6.00, or $2.00 per dozen, and which can be retailed at from 25 cents to 75 cents each, yielding an excellent margin of profit. If they are not the best pipe value you ever handled they can be sent back at our expense.

We have the largest, finest, most wonderful pipe stock ever shown in Canada—cheap pipes, expensive pipes, staple pipes, and pipes that are exclusive with us. We offer tobacco dealers the finest opportunity ever presented them in the matter of pipes. Anyone who sees our stock or samples has conviction of this straightway.

THE WALL PAPER TRADE

"FLAT PRICES" ON BORDERS.

THE retail wall paper dealers of Canada, in their own interests, should avoid the suicidal policy forced upon the retail wall paper dealers in the United States, of selling their borders at the same prices as side walls, a system now known as "Flat Prices." The retail dealers are frequently importuned to sell borders on a flat price basis by American book houses and a few Canadian book houses selling wall papers on such a plan.

This is a matter that has been thoroughly put before the retail trade of Canada in the last few years, and it is probably only necessary to draw their attention to it again for them to avoid doing that which will injure their business for the future. Some book houses tell buyers through circulars that they may figure the borders in the books they now have at the same price as the side wall they match. This is very much in the interests of these particular book houses, as last year's goods are jobs and should be bought at a large discount on the dollar, consequently. putting borders in at the same price as side walls in the old line is giving the book houses a large price for their old goods. The new lines, when they are issued, will be priced to let the book houses out, but it will play havoc with the retailer if he follows this method.

The Canadian wall paper manufacturers took a most commendable stand in declining to adopt the flat-price system, for their refusal to depart from the old and well established custom has made it possible for the retailer to continue the sale of borders by the yard, and in doing so they have had the interests of the retailer more particularly in view, for it would be quite possible for the manufacturers to sell at flat prices and be none the worse off; in fact, this course would probably result to their personal advantage; but flat prices are without doubt to the disadvantage of the retailer. Any retailer adopting the practice of selling at flat prices would require a very big advance on his side walls and ceilings to make up for the loss of profit on his borders, as may be seen by the two examples given below.

Example No. 1 shows that a paper retailing at 3c. per roll and a border at 1½c. per yard means an average selling price to the dealer of almost 4½c. per roll. Example No. 2 is a paper retailing at 4c. per roll and border at 2c. per yard; the dealer's average selling price on this is nearly 6c. per roll. Now, to make the same profit as he is now making, selling his border at a higher price than side wall and ceiling, he would require to sell the 3c. paper at 4½c. per roll, and 4c. paper for 6c. per roll; rather a difficult undertaking, and in what way would he profit by it?

Example No. 1—

10 rolls side wall, at 3c. per roll	30c.
5 rolls ceiling, at 3c. per roll	15c.
1 roll 2 band border, 16 yards, at 1½c. per yd.	24c.
16 rolls.	69c.

Almost 4½c. per roll.

Example No. 2—

10 rolls side wall, at 4c. per roll	40c.
5 rolls ceiling, at 4c per roll	20c.
1 roll 2 band border, 16 yards, at 2c. per yd.	32c.
16 rolls.	92c.

Almost 6c. per roll.

What has been stated above to the retail dealer applies with equal force to the paper hanger and decorator who sells from sample books. Is it not clear to him that if he sells border by the roll at the same price as side wall and ceiling, he will have to hang the border by the roll at the same price he gets for the paper instead of by the yard? As the paper hanger receives from 3c. per yard and up, according to the width, he can easily figure for himself which basis is the more profitable. If he is to make the same ratio of profit on his work, in order to hang the border by the roll, he will have to advance his charge for the side wall and ceiling. Will his customers stand this? It is not probable.

The retail dealers, paper hangers and decorators cannot too strongly discourage the practice of buying and selling on the flat-price basis. They do not buy any cheaper, for nobody can get a gold dollar for 90c.; indeed, they may even pay higher prices, and when selling have to be satisfied with smaller profits. This should be worked out by everybody engaged in the wall paper business.

FINANCE AND INSURANCE

THE dispute over fire insurance rates in Ottawa is likely to reach a satisfactory settlement as a result of the decision of the Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association, in Montreal, October 9 and 10, when it was decided to remove the surcharge of 25c. under certain conditions. The underwriters placed this surcharge on account of the extra hazard in Ottawa from lumber yards and the defective water-works system. In consideration of certain improvements the surcharge will be reduced 10c. after December 1, the remainder to be taken off when the big conflagration hazard is entirely removed.

THE branch at Ottawa of the Toronto General Trusts Corporation is now fairly in the field, and with a strong and representative advisory board and Mr. H. W. Chamberlin as manager, a successful career is predicted for the new venture in that section. The Toronto General Trusts Corporation has now a capital and reserve of over one million and a quarter, and with upwards of $25,000,000 under its care, will be an important factor in the money loaning business in its new field of operations.

"COTTON companies are doing well. Of course they would do better if they had protection. Canadian Colored Cotton at 40, pays 10 per cent. on the investment. Surely there should be a big chance in buying it with hardly any risk. One buying Dominion Cotton at 32 should double his money in a year or two. This may seem a long time, but it may be sooner." The above is an extract from a recent interview with Mr. Rudolph Forget, of L. J. Forget & Co., Montreal, one of the most influential brokers and best-known financiers in Canada. Mr. Forget also speaks enthusiastically of the opportunities for investment in Canadian industrial and railway stocks. While it is gratifying to hear Mr. Forget speak so encouragingly, the fact nevertheless remains that the present indications on the stock maeket do not point to a boom, and the squeezing to which Canadian investors have been subjected in the last few months has bred more or less distrust in "good things."

ONE of the most interesting developments of the month was the proposal for the re-organization of The Canada Cycle & Motor Co. by cancelling $3,000,000 common stock and reducing 30,000 preference shares from $100 to $20 each, par value. The preference shares were then to become shares without preference or priority and 5,000 of them were to be retained in the treasury. The discussion of this proposal, which was to have taken place at the annual meeting of the company on the afternoon of October 29, was prevented by the issuance of an injunction at the instance of the executors of the estate of Henry Cargill to prevent a vote being taken on the matter of reducing the capital until Thursday, November 5, and until a motion then to be made to continue the injunction be disposed of. At the meeting the situation was explained and an ajournment made for six weeks. The annual statement would have shown a net profit for the year of $29,344.90.

CANADA PERMANENT MORTGAGE CORPORATION.

THE Canada Permanent Mortgage Corporation, one of the leading Canadian financial institutions, has a paid up capital of $6,000,000, which is equalled only by that of three of the largest Canadian banks. It has a reserve fund of $1,600,000, and its invested funds amount to $23,600,000. That the management are justified in taking credit for the virtue of stability is evident from the last statement. Less than $2,000,000 (not quite eight per cent. of its total investments) represents the corporation's entire interest in bonds and stocks, all of which are assured dividend payers. Of this $1,505,345 represents advances on stocks and bonds. The company does not itself own any stocks or bonds, with the exception of municipal debentures to the extent of $448,420. The remainder of its assets, amounting to more than $21,000,000, are made up of mortgages on real estate, cash on hand, and the corporation's office premises. It also issues four per cent. debentures which are a legal investment for trust funds, authorized by act of the Legislature, (a favorite investment of both fire and life assurance companies, for deposit with the Canadian Government). The depositors and debenture holders have an equal first claim on the entire assets of the corporation, including $7,600,000 of actual paid up capital and surplus. By the terms of its act the Canada Permanent's investments in bonds and stocks cannot at any time exceed 75 per cent of its paid up capital. It must, therefore, have the entire amount of its borrowed capital (deposits and debentures) as well as 25 per cent. of its shareholders' capital, invested in mortgages upon real estate. In the selection of the latter there is brought to bear the very best experience available in Canada.

SHRINKAGE OF INVESTMENT SECURITIES.

THE shrinkage of securities which has wrought such havoc in financial circles these recent months has been the subject of innumerable editorials, articles and explanations. Everyone is now ready to explain how it happened, although there is not the same unanimity in deciding on what is to be the outcome.

The explanation which is most popularly received and which has a large groundwork of fact, is over-capitalization.

Confined to some of the new industrials little fault can be found with this explanation. At the height of the boom, enterprises were launched with a recklessness engendered of the gambling spirit. Capital stock was limited only by the receptivity of the investing or rather speculating public. Naturally the reaction came with the shrinkage which has been so much deplored, but which, under the circumstances, could not but have come.

Some other explanation, however, must be sought for the shrinkage during the Summer months of railroad securities of established credit, which have suffered, if not altogether so severely, yet almost as generally. It has been suggested that large blocks of these "gilt edged" securities were held in reserve by bankers and syndicates who were loaded up with industrials. When the slump came in the market and the investing public withdrew, the embarrassed bankers and syndicates found themselves called upon to discharge the loans contracted to underwrite and hold the industrial shares. They were compelled, therefore, to realize either on their industrials, which were depreciated and practically unsalable, or on their investment shares, which were at least salable at a price.

That this explanation has more or less force cannot be denied, but it is not all. Quite aside from the necessities of borrowers there was a further reason for a decline in the fact pointed out in these columns a short time ago, that the returns from investments in these stocks were extremely low, 4 per cent. indeed, while, at the same time, time loans to corporations in the highest credit placed for a year or more commanded 6 per cent., while merchants and manufacturers in perfectly good standing were borrowing on their notes at an even higher rate.

Capital under these conditions was certain to flow to the quarters where the most profitable investments could be secured. To emphasize this tendency there was a further inducement in the knowledge that other large security issues were about to be offered. For instance, when the Pennsylvania Railroad offered its own shareholders a large block of new shares at 120, their old shares, which had been listed at 157, were rapidly thrown on the market, and sold down to 120 to secure the funds to buy in the new. The fate of the Pennsylvania led to the postponement of other issues that had been contemplated, but the knowledge that their issuance was impending was certainly a factor in increasing the shrinkage.

A further factor that has been given much prominence is the bear element. Bear raids, bear manipulation, pressure by the bears, are phrases constantly in use in the papers. But what is the actual position of the bear in the market? He sells stocks he thinks are going to decline that he may buy them in later at the bottom price, just as the bull buys in stocks he thinks are going to rise in hopes of selling out at a higher figure. Both are incidents rather than causes of market fluctuations, and serve more to intensify and prolong fluctuations which are primarily due to other causes. In times of panic the bear certainly has a disproportionate influence, but as he must subsequently buy in the stock he has sold short the ultimate tendency of his completed campaign is to restore the equilibrium he has helped to disturb.

CURRENT BANK NOTES.

The Sovereign Bank has opened a branch at Frelighsburg, Que.

A branch of the Bank of Hamilton has been opened at Ripley, Ont.

The Royal Bank of Canada has established a new branch at Edmundston, N.B.

The Sovereign Bank has opened another branch in Ottawa, on Clarence street.

A branch has been opened at Preston, Man., by the Bank of British North America.

The Bank of Nova Scotia will shortly open branches at Calgary, Fort Saskatchewan, Vancouver and Wetaskiwin.

On November 2 the Bank of Hamilton will open its second branch in Toronto, on the corner of Queen and Spadina.

The Bank of Montreal has opened branches at Brandon under the charge of Mr. W. Watson, and at Indian Head under Mr. R. M. Napier.

The Bank of Ottawa has opened a branch at Buckingham. J. K. Lough, of Ottawa, has been placed in charge for the present.

It is said that the Eastern Townships Bank, Bank of Toronto, and the Union Bank of Canada are to start branches at the coast. All three will start either in Vancouver or Victoria, or both, and Eastern Townships will also probably locate another branch at Nanaimo. The Dominion Bank officials have decided not to open any branches at the coast at present.

WHEN you turn the life insurance agent away with the promise of next week, next month, or next year, do you ever reflect how uncertain it is whether he can do you any good? asks Insurance Age. In the first place you may not be alive when the time comes. In that case the business is settled once for all. But if you are, and want the company, the company may not want you. Any one of a thousand things may turn up to disqualify you as a risk. That cough may return or exposure may have weakened you, or disabling accident may have come. Or, added to an already none too good record, some of your near relatives may have been carried off by a prejudicing malady. A life company is a pretty exclusive sort of club. It doesn't take much to get you blackballed there. It is a good day when the man and the company both conclude they want each other.

MERCHANTS.

The Toledo Automatic Computing Scale SHOWS to EVERY CUSTOMER in LARGE INDICATIONS the EXACT WEIGHT they get. If you use a Cash Register you place it where the customer MUST SEE the INDICATIONS. This is for YOUR PROTECTION. Take OFF these INDICATIONS and you would consider the Register VALUELESS. The indications on a Toledo Scale PROTECT you from over and DOWN WEIGHT and IMPRESS your CUSTOMERS with YOUR HONEST PRINCIPLES. The CUSTOMER feels that he is PROTECTED when he buys goods over a TOLEDO SCALE, consequently it is a TRADE BRINGER. The customer values the GOODS he buys from you MORE THAN THE MONEY he hands you, otherwise he would not EXCHANGE the MONEY FOR the GOODS he gets. You are CAREFUL to count his CHANGE OUT CORRECTLY, and in plain view, why not use a Scale that COUNTS OUT the WEIGHT, it being to the customer of more VALUE than the MONEY he grades for the goods?

TORONTO. HAMILTON, MAR. 19th, 1903.

DEAR SIRS:—

I have used your BALL-BEARING COMPUTING SCALE for several years now and I believe it has paid for itself a good many times over during that period. Most of my profits went to my customers in overweights in the past. Now I have a little left for myself.

Yours truly, ———

System or Guess Work?

The grocer shown above is guessing, and the scale he has will keep him guessing, too.

He's an honest fellow, so he sees that his scale goes down on the customer's side every time, and he always gives full weight.

People buy so queerly nowadays; 10c. worth of 60c. tea; 25c. worth of 11c. dry fruit; 50c. worth of sugar at 5½c. per lb.

They know they can get more for their money this way. Can't blame them either.

You've noticed this, haven't you? Then you need our Dayton Moneyweight Scale as badly as he does.

Send for our 1903 catalogue. It tells how to stop this and how to Do it to-day.

LIPTON'S TEAS

have without doubt to-day THE LARGEST SALE IN THE WORLD. They are the only teas in Canada and the United States that are sold in HERMETICALLY-SEALED, AIRTIGHT CANS. This insures the tea retaining its excellent flavor and the delicious aroma with which they have so long been associated. This is the only hygienic and healthful way of packing tea and is far superior to teas packed in lead packages.

LIPTON'S TEAS are the only teas in Canada that are shipped by the seller DIRECT FROM THE GARDENS, which means there is more profit in it for the grocer. No up-to-date grocer can be without them to-day.

THE MANUFACTURERS AND THE GREAT WEST.

A Symposium of Some of Their Impressions Gathered During Their Recent Trip to the Pacific Coast.

IN accordance with what was promised last week there is given below a continuation of the impressions gathered by the Canadian manufacturers during their trip to the West and summarized for "The Grocer" in answer to questions submitted in a circular letter on their return home.

C N Bell, Secretary Winnipeg Board of Trade.

1st. Having been a resident of Winnipeg and the West for over thirty years, and having made frequent trips through the country between Lake Superior and the mountains, (my first journey having been made to the mountains in 1872 when not a sod was turned beyond a distance of seventy miles west of Winnipeg), my chief impression was the great development that has taken place during the last two or three years. Where two or three houses comprised the town of five years ago, thriving villages, surrounded by cultivated areas, now exist, and these places bear every evidence of prosperity and business activity.

2nd. Contrary to the somewhat generally conceived opinion, I am fully convinced that extensive manufacturing establishments will exist at a number of points in Manitoba, and the want, in my opinion is, in the main, a matter of population. It is true that at present the cost of power and labor is high, but with the transmission of electric power from the numerous falls on the Winnipeg river, Winnipeg will in the future have cheap power. It is not generally known that large power works are already nearly completed at a point some forty miles from the city, and within a year this plant will be in a position to supply far more power than there is any call for in Winnipeg to-day, and the operators have already publicly announced that they will, at the start, give power at one-half the present cost. While, as in all new countries, labor for factories is scarce, it may be taken as an axiom that increased population will provide factory labor as it is required. Large deposits of iron at Lake Winfipeg simply await development and the product can be floated right into Winnipeg. A glance at the map of Western Canada will show that the coal of the North Saskatchewan may be floated down to Lake Winnipeg and on to this city, provided the single existing barrier, the Grand Rapids at the mouth of the Saskatchewan river, is overcome. So too, short canals from the Saskatchewan into Lake Winnipegosis, and from Lake Manitoba into the Assiniboine river, will provide continuous navigation from the head waters of both the North and South Saskatchewan rivers. It is to be noted that for all time a manufacturer in Winnipeg will have a virtual protection against the goods manufactured in Eastern Canada to the extent of the existing freight rates from eastern points to Winnipeg. Above all it is to be noted that the city already has become a centre for quite extensive manufacturing establishments along certain lines, and that those lines are of goods that a small population consume a considerable output. Then too, even where the raw materials have to be, in whole or in part, imported into Winnipeg, the difference in freight between

QUESTIONS SUBMITTED BY THE CANADIAN GROCER.

FIRST—What most impressed you from a business standpoint during your trip through the Great West to the Pacific Coast?

SECOND—What is your opinion in regard to the future of Manitoba and British Columbia as manufacturing centres?

THIRD—In what way can manufacturers of the east secure a larger share of the trade of the Great West, that now goes to the manufacturing firms in the United States?

FOURTH—How can business men in the east best assist the people of Manitoba, the Territories and British Columbia in developing the natural resources of their respective parts of the country?

such raw material and finished goods will always be a strong factor in favor of Winnipeg. As regards British Columbia, with its varied resources in the direction of raw material and its facilities for shipping either to the interior or for direct export, it will certainly, with increased population, be in a position to maintain manufactories.

3rd. Manufacturers of the east can secure a larger share of the trade of the West by more carefully studying the particular class of goods required in the West by the circumstances of the soil, climate and the consequent general wants of the people; by making and shipping only the best qualities of articles (for it is notorious that the people of the West largely demand and will only take first quality goods) and by paying stricter attention to rapidly filling the orders of western merchants.

4th. Business men of the east can best assist in developing the natural resources of the West by joining in with the western people and exhibiting more personal interest in such legislation, along the lines of transportation; encouragement by financial and other means, of a good class of immigration; and generally in doing what they can to place western provinces on a perfect equality with the older provinces. If the Canadian manufacturers could secure an amendment to the British North America Act, which would prohibit any man taking his seat in the House of Commons or Senate of Canada until he could produce satisfactory evidence that he had travelled through Canada from the Atlantic to the Pacific, they would render to the people of the West one of the greatest aids for the proper development of the West that could be imagined.

Col. W M Gartshore, McClary Mfg. Co, London.

First. What impressed me most in connection with the trip of The Manufacturers' Association to the coast was the immense possibilities of the Great West, from an agricultural point of view, and the great district which is yet undeveloped.

Second. Regarding the future of these provinces and territories there can be no two opinions. All that is required is settlers of the right stamp, competent to develop the resources of the country. As far as the manufacturing is concerned, with the exception of commodities used by the farmers, such as flour, meal and binder twine, and the product of animals, such as dressed meats, etc., it is too soon to give an opinion as to any other manufactures which may develop. Should iron ore be found in the vicinity of the coal fields it might revolutionize the iron industry so far as that market is concerned, but at present it is cheaper to manufacture in the east and deliver than to manufacture such commodities at any of these points.

Third. Manufacturers can secure a larger share of the trade by being more familiar with the requirements. No manufacturer should attempt to do business in that section of the country unless he is prepared to visit his principal customers at least once a year, as it is much easier to manufacture just the article the customer requires than to educate him to adopt something which he (the manufacturer) has to sell. A great deal of this trade goes to the United States from the fact that present settlers in the West have been for a number of years buying goods from United States manufacturers, and are more familiar with them, but as it can be shown that Canadian manufacturers can make goods in every way as satisfactory, I see no reason why they should not get the preference.

Fourth. I do not see how manufacturers in the east can attend to their own business and also personally develop the West. There should be sufficient capital looking for investment which could and is already developing these territories. If eastern manufacturers possessed a portion of the enthusiasm and optimism of western men in general, greater progress would be made in all directions.

T. L. Moffat, Jr., The Moffat Stove Co., Limited, Weston.

1. The great resources and possibilities of the country. The faith and optimism of our western brethren. The large number of United States manufactured goods, especially stoves and ranges, which are being sold.

2. As the population increases and iron mining and smelting is developed, manufacturing in iron and steel lines will certainly follow, but at present there does not appear to be any great prospect of doing a profitable manufacturing business.

3. From a stove point of view, the manufacturers in the east have not been catering to a class of trade which demands some United States styles in stoves and ranges. The main difficulty, however, is, United States competition in cheaper grades. Canadian manufacturers, owing to their limited market, cannot specialize their goods to the same extent. Some of the United States factories have the facilities to turn out enough steel ranges in a few months to supply the whole western trade. The freight rates and special discounts given overcome the tariff and combine to make the Great West a convenient dumping ground for our neighbors. The only effective way to remedy this state of affairs is to follow the example of the shrewd Yankee and make the tariff wall higher. The Canadian manufacturers would only be too glad to guarantee no advance in prices if they only had the privilege of supplying our own market.

O. E. Fleming, of Fleming, Wigle & Wood, Barristers, Windsor, Ont.

In reply to your communication of October 10 I now enclose you a short note in reply to the questions submitted to me in reference to the Manufacturers' excursion. I have made them as short and as concise as possible.

1. The apparent inability of the trade to take care of the business offered, due in a large measure to the lack of sufficient transportation facilities, and the unpreparedness for such an enormous influx of immigration and prosperous development.

I look upon the business and industrial possibilities of the Northwest as enormous, which can only be appreciated by a visit to the country. We Canadians have a problem to work out in our own great country, which offers the greatest inducement to young men who can, by honest and energetic effort, make more profitable than any country under the sun can offer.

2. There are only a few lines that could be profitably manufactured in either Manitoba or British Columbia at the present time, but, of course, time will increase this, and eventually they must become manufacturing provinces, equally with the older provinces.

3. (a) Have warehouses at the leading centres of sufficient capacity, well stocked, to enable them to give prompt delivery.

(b). Increased transportation facilities, with reasonable freight rates.

(c) Meet the requirements of the people; the country and seasons are different from ours, necessitating many things different; a careful study of these questions by a personal visit of an intelligent representative from the different industrial concerns will accomplish much that has been sadly ignored.

(d) Of course a higher tariff will do much to enable us to retain our hold on this trade.

4. An active campaign in favor of better freight rates and transportation facilities, and by investing some of their money to assist in the development of the country.

Noel Marshall, The Standard Fuel Co., Toronto.

I have before me your letter of October 17, asking for answers to four questions.

To the first I would say that I was wonderfully impressed with the possibilities of our western country. As we passed through the Province of Manitoba and the Territories, the grain-growing possibilities of that enormous section of the country almost overwhelmed one.

Second. I believe that with the enormous quantities of timber obtainable in British Columbia, woodworking factories of nearly all classes should find a great opening.

Third. The manufacturer of the east, to secure a larger trade of the Great West, should recognize the fact that in all classes of articles our western brothers want the best that is made. From personal conversation with many of the business men, I am convinced they were in earnest when they stated that some of the manufactured goods sent from eastern Canada to the West did not suit their requirements as well as those they imported from the United States. This is an evil that should readily be cured. At the same time I do not believe that the trade of that western country can be retained to our own people unless there is a revision of the tariff, and unless I am very much deceived, the people of the West would support Canada as a whole in obtaining such a change, as it would be in the best interest of the whole country.

Fourth. The business man of the east who has any surplus capital to invest can largely assist in the development of the whole western country by investing either in manufacturing or commercial enterprises, and the opportunities for some years to come will be many.

You Sir, like myself, must have been thoroughly convinced that there is room for a vast number of the right class of men. The young man who has been so trained that he can resist the temptations of a western life (and they are many) must undoubtedly succeed, and the time when a Canadian finds it either necessary or desirable for him to seek his advancement in the United States is surely past.

CURED MEATS IN THE GROCERY STORE.

THE last few years have witnessed a remarkable development of Canadian trade in the direction of cured meats. Thirty years ago very little cured meat with the exception of salt pork was handled in the average grocery store. The economical farmer has and will always find it to his interest to salt down a barrel of pork for Winter use. Most grown-ups whose youth was spent on a farm, have a vivid recollection of hog-killing day, which was solemnly observed all over the country. They can tell you that 196 pounds makes a barrel of pork; how it takes a head, two hams, two shoulders and a quantity of mess, to fill the aching void. The farmer regularly salted down enough for his own use, and occasionally some extra for sale to his less fortunate neighbors or the village storekeeper.

As the country became more prosperous Canadian palates grew more sensitive. The home-cured product was no longer all in all to them, and city and town began to import ham and bacon. At first a Detroit pork-packer got the bulk of the fancy Canadian trade; later it passed into the hands of Armour, of Chicago.

"But now it is all changed," said one patriotic grocer. "Canada cures her own meat and exports large quantities to the United States and Europe. Very little American bacon is sold in Canada now except some sliced bacon put up in tins and a brand or two of breakfast bacon which certain conservative individuals persist in using. It may give you some idea of the turn over," said he, "when I tell you that we send ten times as much bacon and hams to the States as we have been importing from them. American bacon can no longer compete with our Canadian breakfast bacon, so greatly superior is our cure to the article put up across the line. The popularity of Canadian bacon in England has become almost a by-word. One injustice, however, has been done us: until lately Canadian meat was paraded under false colors—simply because English dealers were afraid to tell their customers it was Canadian grown. 'Made in Canada' has no uncertain ring at the present time, and even Englishmen have been compelled to give credit where it is due."

"What is the secret of the popularity of our bacon?" was asked of another dealer in groceries and provisions.

"It is mildly cured and has a peculiarly fine flavor, due largely to the fact that particular care is taken in feeding" was the answer. "Our best bacon is not soft or corn-fed, but firm and fed on peas or wheat."

"To whom does the cured meat trade rightfully belong?" was further asked.

"To the grocer, undoubtedly," he replied; "though for various reasons the latter often fails to get his share. One trouble with a great many dealers is that they are careless in their meat department. They get in a stock of hams, shoulders and bacon, and expect it to last forever, like the old-fashioned article, which was literally embalmed in salt. They should be reasonable, and, at the outset should recognize the A B C's of the cured meat trade—that mild-cured meat must be turned over quickly, while a drier cure will remain preserved for a much longer period. Another way in which the grocer allows the butcher to take this trade from him is by neglecting to exercise ordinary care in cutting, and then wonders why the latter is getting the cured-meat customers away from him. If he expects to make a success of this department the grocery and provision man must first make an attractive display, then he must have a competent man to handle the goods."

The manager of a large city grocery, which is making a great success of its cured-meat department, remarked recently that he found the department an indispensable part of the business. "Our provision department is growing every day," said he; pointing to a fine display of hams, rolls, shoulders, back and side pork and beef knuckles; "and there is no reason so far as I can see why the town grocer and even the country grocer to a certain extent should not make it profitable, as it is certainly proving to us."

It is announced that The Detroit Cream Cheese Co., manufacturers and importers of fancy cheese, will shortly enter the Canadian field and establish a branch at Windsor.

St. John, N.B.

This is the active season. Dealers buy quite freely of mess pork from local packers. These advise pork quite scarce, owing, it is said, to the farmers holding back supplies for higher prices. In beef there is fair sale at even figures. Lard is very low with fair demand; refined, while rather lower, is held quite firmly. There is improved sale for smoked meats; trade is supplied by local cured; prices are firm. In fresh meats prices have changed little. Beef is quite plentiful. Lamb is low and freely offered. Mutton continues dull. Veal is little offered. Pork is in fair supply. Poultry is more plentiful, but not in over supply. We quote:

BUTTER.

The market is featureless this week. No demand is felt from England and while there is a fair demand locally for choice there are but small quantities of such coming forward. We quote:

CHEESE.

The market is easier this week both on the boards and among the jobbers. Despite the lower values trade is quiet and very little is changing hands, as buyers are at a loss to know which way the market is going. We quote:

BUTTER

Owing to an apparent shortage in deliveries there is a decidedly firm tendency on the local butter market. There is always more or less of a shortage of fresh butter at this season, as now the Summer creameries stop making and the Winter creameries commence. This shortage may not be relieved as it usually is at this season by factories dropping cheese and commencing to make butter. The reason is that at present prices it is almost as profitable to make cheese as it is to make butter. Fresh creamery butter is selling locally at 21½ to 22c.; August and September makes 20½ to 21c., early goods 20 to 20½c.

The deliveries of fresh made dairy are light, and what is coming forward is meeting with ready sale at 16 to 17½c. There is some inquiry for rolls, and they would meet with ready sale here at about 18c. For dairy tubs there is also some inquiry, but to meet with a ready sale the quality requires to be good. Ruling price for same is 16 to 17c. There is not much demand for Summer dairies, the price ruling about 15 to 16c.

CHEESE.

There is not much change in the market. Exporters are still active at the decline. The local trade, however, is not very much affected by the fluctuations which have occurred during the past few weeks. Mild cheese has been selling for 12 to 12¼c.; strong, 12 to 12½c.

BUTTER

While stocks are quite ample good butter is already in demand and commands rather better prices. Dairy butter is being quite freely supplied in boxes. Creamery is very firm. We quote:

CHEESE.

The output in the province has been large and has largely gone out of first hands. Because of the very large receipts English prices are rather easier. Sale there is materially affected if prices advance very much. We quote:

IMPRESSIONS OF THE GREAT WEST

Gathered During a Transcontinental Tour with the Canadian Manufacturers' Association.

By W. L. E.

WE had our introduction to the prairie shortly after leaving Winnipeg, under auspicious circumstances. The day was an ideal one and the monotony of the distant horizon on either side of us was relieved by mirages in which were seen numerous woods and lakes. For two or three hours these optical illusions accompanied us. I have no recollection of seeing a mirage afterwards at any time during our journey. We had all seen mirages on lakes, but there were many of us who had never seen them on land before, at any rate on the vast and boundless prairie. Naturally we were all very much interested, and scarcely noticed the fields, reaching as far as the eye could see, from which the golden grain had just been garnered. "Now we get some idea of how easily thirsty travellers on African deserts have been led on wild goose chases after water and shelter," remarked a fellow passenger. We all acquiesced and continued to feast our eyes on the imaginary lakes and imaginary scattered clumps of trees, and when the optical illusion had vanished we found enough in the realities of the surrounding prairie to excite our interest.

An Elevator at Fort William, capacity 3,400,000 bushels. The largest in the world.

The soil of the prairie, which the farmers here and there were beginning to plow in strips that often reached as far as the eye could see, by its very darkness and richness was enough to excite the interest of the veriest tyro in agricultural matters. The very rich inky-blackness of the soil almost made one's mouth water and excited a desire in the breasts of more than one of us whose days are spent within city limits, and whose vocation is confined to office, factory or shop, for the life on the prairie, where the air is dry, always in active circulation, and invigorating. But what must the rich prairie land be to the trained farmer? No wonder so many thousands of experienced agriculturists from the United States and eastern Canada are taking up their homes on the dark soil of the Great West, rich in those properties which produce No. 1 hard—the best wheat in the world—and good healthy, sturdy live-stock, to say nothing of sturdy citizens.

* * *

But the prairie is not only a paradise for the farmer, it is also a paradise for the sportsman. Prairie chickens are easily obtained by the man who can shoot straight. We had at least one man in our party who could shoot straight and he demonstrated this to our entire satisfaction. He had travelled all the way from Halifax to journey across the prairie with us, and he refused the two days' pleasure which Winnipeg offered for the purpose of supplying the 170 passengers on our train with a taste of the famous prairie chicken. When we picked him up at Virden, the morning after we left Winnipeg, he had with him many brace of prairie chickens, or as one man in our party remarked, "chairie pickens," and a couple of large cottontail rabbits, to say nothing of an odd mallard or two. Some of our passengers joked Mr. Frank Simson (for he it was who was our good provider) as to how much he had paid for his birds and rabbits, but Mr. Simson is a crack shot as well as an expert curler and it was his own unerring aim that killed all but one of the rabbits. When the would-be wits were threatened with the elimination of prairie chicken from their bill of fare, they protested that they were not serious in their allegations, and were accordingly forgiven. That night prairie chicken graced the menu card of the two dining-cars that accompanied our train; and then everybody called Mr. Simson blessed, for prairie chicken is good, particularly when you are indebted to the prowess of a friend for the supply of the toothsome bird. Mr. Simson was shortly afterwards presented with a handsome pipe as a token of esteem. It could not be called the pipe of peace, for after that dinner in which prairie chicken so largely figured everyone had the most kindly feelings toward the man from Halifax.

It was the wild duck, however, and not the prairie chicken that most excited the spirit of sportsmanship in the breasts of our gentlemen fellow passengers. The prairies of the Great West are not barren of water. Indeed the water spirits have been good to the Great West. Here and there rivers and streams are encountered and the surface of the prairie is liberally indented with ponds and small lakes of fresh and saline water, and quietly feeding in nearly every pond and lake wild ducks innumerable met our astonished view. Talk about sparrows in eastern Canada, if wild ducks are not relatively as plentiful in the Great West, my eyes for once very much deceived me. I said wild ducks, but that name requires some modification. The species were wild, but I never saw wild ducks so tame. They seemed to be no more concerned about the presence of our train as it rushed past the ponds and lakes, on the bosom of which they lazily swam, than if they were ordinary domestic ducks from eastern Canada farmyards. It would have been quite possible to have killed many of them with stones, even if the stones had been in the hand of the average woman. A friend of mine who is an alderman in Toronto told me the other day, when I was speaking to him about the large number of ducks that I had seen in the West, that he was certain that during his visits to Manitoba, covering some years, he had killed at least 1,000 wild ducks by knocking them on the head with a stick. A smile of doubt passed over the faces of some of those within hearing, but he positively declared that he was telling the truth. Notwithstanding that he was an alderman, I am inclined to believe him; in fact what I saw of the tameness of the wild ducks on the prairie I am prepared to take as corroborative evidence. Possibly the ducks on the prairie of the Great West may be beneath the contempt of the average sportsman in eastern Canada, where ducks are so wild that it is only by the merest accident that one can get within half-a-mile of them, much less within gun shot; but as for me, give me the wild duck shooting of the prairie ponds and lakes. The very multitude of their number is a guarantee that I should be able to bag some of them. Even if I could not shoot straight enough to hit a barn, I could secure an occasional duck, for in case my aim failed me I would still have recourse to my gun for use as a club.

The alkaline lakes and ponds are quite interesting, particularly to those who for the first time see them. They are scattered far and wide over the prairies of the Great West and are without apparent inlet or outlet, while the white incrustations around the edges of many of them appear at the first glance like light sprinklings of snow. That the buffalo in their day drank of the waters of these alkaline ponds and lakes is evident from the trails which converge at them. The late Principal G. M. Grant, in his book on "Ocean to Ocean," which is in reality a diary of his journey across the prairies in 1872 with Sandford Fleming, deals at some length with these alkaline lakes. In speaking of the theories as to the causes of these lakes and ponds he says that several are suggested and adds, "Here is one that explains all the facts so far as known to us. Suppose that formerly a superabundant quantity of alkaline matter was diffused through the soil generally, over our Northwest, as we know it is over a wide extent of the American desert and in sections on the Pacific coast. We found it so in some places where there are no lakes and where it could be carried off by rivers. On the bank of the Assiniboine near Fort Ellice, similarly on the Saskatchewan near Edmonton, and at other points it was observed. If it had once been generally diffused through the soil, what must have happened in the course of centuries wherever there was an ordinary rainfall? The water percolating through the soil would carry off the alkaline matter into lakes and rivers, and it would be retained only in those lakes that had no outlet. This theory explains all the features of the case and starts no new difficulties. It suggests, too, that the one great reason why the American Desert must remain both desert and bitter is that there is no rainfall on it, whereas further north in the same longitude there is abundance of rain."

ALDERMAN LAPORTE FOR THE MONTREAL MAYORALTY.

MR. HORMIDAS LAPORTE, head of the well-known Montreal wholesale grocery house of Laporte, Martin & Cie., Montreal, who has for many years been an active and prominent alderman, has been petitioned by the business men of his city to allow himself to be put in nomination for the mayoralty. After mature consideration Mr. Laporte has decided to enter the field, and has announced himself as a candidate. His record as an alderman is one that any man might be proud of, as throughout his entire career in the council he has borne a reputation for integrity, diligence and sound business sense, and his valuable services in the interest of the citizens of Montreal will no doubt be duly appreciated by his election to the mayor's chair. That Mr. Laporte is appreciated by the grocery trade of his city is evidenced by the fact that at the last meeting of the Retail Grocers' Association of Montreal, held Thursday, 5th inst., a resolution was unanimously passed declaring the intention of its members to loyally support him in his candidature. The Butchers' Association of Montreal had previously at their monthly meeting signified their intention to support Mr. Laporte, another evidence of his popularity among business men. Other mercantile bodies are also endorsing his candidature, and the citizens of Montreal generally, from press reports, look with favor upon the entering into this civic campaign of a man of Mr. Laporte's ability and trustworthiness.

Ald. Laporte, the Business Men's Candidate for Montreal Mayoralty.

THE CANADIAN GROCER is gratified to learn that Mr. Laporte has secured to himself the confidence of the members of the grocery trade, as well as the high esteem of his fellow business men and citizens, and wishes him the realization of his ambition, the mayoralty chair of the City of Montreal. With his undoubted energy, business training and true conception of the requirements of a great city like Montreal, the citizens will doubtless find him always alive to their best interests and an honor and credit to the chair.

The wholesale grocery house of Laporte, Martin & Cie., of Montreal, of which Mr. Hormidas Laporte is the senior member, is prominent in the trade. Mr. Laporte is one of the living examples of the pushing intelligent Canadian merchant who, from a very small and comparatively insignificant beginning, has risen to be a prime factor in the commerce and trade of this country. He was born in Lachine, P.Q., in 1851, and at the early age of 14 years began to make his own living by working in a nail factory, and at the same time picking up what education he could between the primary schools of his native village and attending the night school when he came to Montreal. In 1870 he left the employment he was engaged in as nailmaker and joined the service of a large wholesale grocery firm as clerk, where he gained that knowledge of the business that he has so well applied since. After a few years he established a retail business of his own in the same line, in which he worked assiduously for some time, and finally founded the wholesale firm of which he is now the senior partner. The business of his house has increased enormously within the past few years, and is still growing, this being the result of the reputation the firm have of doing everything in their power to meet the wants and circumstances of their customers. Mr. Laporte was elected to the Board of Trade in the year 1883, and has since been a prominent and active member of the Wholesale Grocers' Association in connection with that corporation. He is a past-president of the St. Jean Baptiste Society, and occupies a prominent position on the list of membership in most of the French institutions, in the management of which he takes an active part. He was also president of the Montreal District Chamber of Commerce, a director of the National Building Society, president of the Alliance Association, past-president of the Union St. Vincent Society, and actively interested in other kindred benevolent institutions, to all of which he devotes a good deal of time and contributes liberally.

CONDENSED MILK INDUSTRY.

In our report last week of an interview had with Mr. Gifford, manager of The St. Charles Condensed Milk Co., it was stated that "condensed milk was first made in America in 1858 by Gail Borden." Mr. W. H. Dunn, eastern representative of The St. Charles Condensed Milk Co., kindly calls our attention to the fact that the idea of condensing milk or preserving milk was first discovered by Gail Borden while living in Connecticut in 1852, but was not patented until 1858.

Swiss milk, which came on the market a few years afterwards, was introduced and manufactured in Switzerland by W. D. Page, of Dixon, Ill. He was a clerk

NEED FOR TECHNICAL TRAINING.

THE industrial history of the United States is being repeated to a very considerable extent in Canada. The growth of manufacturing is remarkable, and, from all indications, will continue to be so. This year as never before there has been a cry for men—an unsatisfied cry; and not for men only, but for boys and girls. It is a very common sight as one goes along the streets of our manufacturing centres, to see cards hanging out with the words "Boy Wanted," or "Girls Wanted." Another noticeable thing is the want columns of the large dailies. The list under "Help Wanted" is far greater than that under "Situations Wanted."

This demand for boys and young women is robbing our schools of many who would otherwise continue to be students for several years to come. The temptation to earn a little money proves greater than the love of learning. The boy does not perceive the value for his later career of an education, and his parents are too often indifferent. However, there comes soon or late to most of these boys who leave school early a perception of the value of a specialized training, and when the facilities offer, a good many attend night schools. Clerks in stores, as well as young fellows at the bench or in the factory, are acquiring a thirst for knowledge—the special knowledge that will advance them in their line of work.

In the case of these young men who have left school all too soon, correspondence schools have sprang up. This is particularly true of the Great Republic, and some scores of such schools, some excellent, some the reverse, are making their appeals to that portion of Young America who have neglected or were never offered the advantages of high school and college.

In Canada The Canadian Correspondence College, Limited, Toronto, is doing creditable work along these lines, particulars of which they furnish on application.

The good of such "colleges" to earnest young men is very great. The pity is that there are not thousands more using their opportunities to acquire a technical training. It is the man who knows who compels success. Real success is not a lucky chance; it is won by labor; by purpose; by a diligent and intelligent use of means. The demand for prepared men is growing and is far in excess of the supply. The lack is not in the number of men seeking the choice position; it is in the number of men qualified for the position. Hundreds of men are willing to take a good appointment, determining to learn to discharge its duties—afterwards. The wise young man will prepare himself beforehand. In that preparation he should find the correspondence college of the greatest aid.

ONE of Montreal's leading brokers and commission merchants directly interested in grocers' specialties is Mr. W. H. Dunn, 394 St. Paul St. Mr. Dunn started in business in a small way about fourteen years ago, after having served an apprenticeship of five years with a leading Montreal wholesale grocery house, and has represented during that time most of the firms he now represents, but the business of his firms here has so

MONTREAL RETAIL GROCERS' ASSOCIATION.

THE regular monthly meeting of the Retail Grocers' Association of Montreal was held last Thursday, the 5th inst., in the Monument National. A very large attendance of members was noted, and business of considerable importance was put through. Mr. N. Chartrand, president, occupied the chair.

After the minutes of the previous meeting had been read by the secretary, Mr. J. A. Beaudry, and adopted, a letter from Mr. Wm. O'Brien, an old member, who had been nominated for 1st vice-president at the annual meeting, but who had subsequently resigned from the association, was read by the secretary, and on motion of Mr. Landry, seconded by Mr. J. P. Dixon, the secretary was instructed to write Mr. O'Brien, asking him to reconsider his resignation.

A number of new names of candidates for membership were brought forward, but as some of the propositions were for travellers, and it being against the constitution to elect salesmen as active members of the association, it was decided on motion that such travellers be elected as "auxiliary" members.

It was also decided that the night of meeting be changed from the first Thursday in each month to the first Wednesday of the month.

The treasurer's report was read and the satisfactory showing of a balance in the bank of $295 was gratifyingly received by the members.

A question that has been brought up in almost every similar association in the country, the pedlar nuisance, was a subject of active discussion, and very strong speeches were made. Petition forms were passed around among the members for signature by the taxpayers and electors for presentation to the City Council, asking that licenses be refused to street pedlars, and that existing licenses be cancelled and not renewed in future. These pedlars had grown to be not only a detriment to the grocery and other kindred trades, but the bane of the householder. It was pointed out that several of the suburbs had through their town councils, already prohibited the house-to-house vending, and it was agreed that united action on part of the members of the Grocers' Association would be the means of abating the nuisance in the city. A motion was passed authorizing the secretary to solicit the Butchers' Association of Montreal also to take measures against these hawkers. A resolution was passed, after long discussion, that the auditor's report be presented in writing and in detail, as some of the members took exception to the manner of its presentation.

The question of wholesalers selling to consumers in retail quantities was discussed with a good deal of warmth, and some very uncomplimentary remarks were made against certain dealers. A delegation was appointed to wait upon the wholesale dealers with a view of getting them to refuse to sell retail quantities at wholesale prices.

Another resolution was adopted requesting the secretary to communicate with the Hon. Chas. McCorkill, provincial treasurer, to obtain an interview to meet the officers of the association relative to having the transfer license fees reduced from $55, the present tax, to the price formerly ruling, namely $20.

The question of early closing was brought up, it being the desire of many members to close their stores at seven o'clock, at least one evening a week, though several members claimed that this was practically impossible, on account of the fact that many stores not actually grocers, but who handled certain grocery staples, could not be brought into line, and unless the closing hour was generally observed, a loss of trade would result. After an interesting discussion, delegates were appointed to visit the grocers generally, to obtain their consent to this early closing. Mr. Chartrand, the president, signified his intention of inaugurating the early system by closing his store at seven o'clock next Wednesday. In Hochelaga, it was stated, the grocers had commenced to close at seven o'clock on Wednesdays.

A resolution was read by the secretary endorsing the candidature of Mr. Laporte, of Laporte, Martin & Cie., wholesale grocers, for the mayoralty, and the association pledged itself to give him cordial support. It was pointed out that the election of Ald. Laporte was not only deserved by that gentleman, but would also be an honor to the grocers of Montreal. The association in thus giving their influence in behalf of a member of their calling, were doing only what was right and proper, as Mr. Laporte's career as an alderman of the city for many years had shown him as ever alive to the citizens' best interests. This resolution was unanimously adopted, and it was hoped that the next mayor of Montreal would be a grocer.

NEW CANNING INDUSTRY.

LAST week a representative of "The Canadian Grocer" visited the new canning factory recently erected in the flourishing and pretty little town of Burlington.

The building, which is four storeys in height, with basement, is built of brick, and has a floor surface of 40,000 feet.

It extends from the main street to the shore of the lake and has a substantial and imposing appearance. The factory is equipped throughout with the most modern machinery, and has every advantage in the way of shipping facilities. In addition to good water communication and connection with the Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific Railways, the Hamilton Radial is about to construct an extension leading to the shipping doors of the building.

The industry has proven a great boon to the farmers of the district, and the business people of the town are already reaping good results from the new enterprise.

The vegetable pack of the factory has been nearly all distributed this season, but the company are now employing a numerous staff in the canning of apples, pumpkins, etc.

Very shortly they purpose going largely into the manufacture of ketchup, jams and jellies, as also the packing of chicken, turkey, pork and beans, and other delicacies of this description.

The directorate is composed of George E. Fisher, president; Wm. Kerns, vice-president; W. F. W. Fisher, W. G. Pettitt, Chas. G. Davis and Thos. H. Fisher.

The president, Mr. Fisher, is also managing director, and is known to the people of Western Canada as a prominent and successful farmer and fruit grower.

Mr. Jas. Edgecombe, who superintends the manufacturing department, has had a wide experience in connection with some of the largest canning concerns in Canada and the United States.

APPROACHABLE MEN.

COURTESY in business costs nothing, often brings pecuniary results, and never can do any harm. No person having occasion to meet business men in different parts of the country can fail to notice great differences in the men with whom he has to deal. Some men are always approachable, always courteous, while others hedge themselves about like little gods, and are almost as inaccessible as royalty itself. It is always dangerous to draw sweeping deductions, but nine times out of ten the approachable man is the successful man, the man with the largest business and the widest and most varied interests; while the man who would impress you with a sense of his own importance, who can be approached only with great fear and trembling, through a number of careless and sometimes impertinent subordinates, is the little man who does a small business but always makes a great fuss about it.

As with men individually, so with towns and cities. Every town has its own individuality. Travellers often remark upon the unfailing courtesy of business men in one city, and upon the difficulty of approaching business men in another city, and their lack of courtesy when access is finally gained. We happen to know of the case of the head of one of Canada's large manufacturing concerns, himself one of the kindest and most approachable of a city of courteous business men, visiting in another town a house which, although large, was by no means so important or well known as his own. The difficulties which he encountered in obtaining an interview or even an appointment with the head of that firm would have been amusing had not the time at his disposal been so short that they were annoying. When admittance was finally gained the excuse given was that the pressure of business is so great as to make it absolutely necessary for the head of the firm to shut himself in his office and keep visitors out. The caller's surprise may be pardoned. He knew that his own business was considerably larger, and he had never found it necessary so to hide himself from the public. His office is near the entrance to his establishment, and, through the glass doors, he can see all who enter. No customer or visitor ever retires dissatisfied without his knowledge. Were we to mention the names of the two firms the absurdity of the excuse given would be apparent. If the head of the larger business has time to be affable and approachable, and finds that such conduct is profitable, why should it be impossible for the head of the smaller business to follow his example?

No business man, whether his trade be large or small, can afford to be unapproachable and discourteous, for, besides the direct harm done to the firm by the offence which he himself gives to customers and clients, the spirit of the chief is communicated to the subordinates, and a discourteous manager is almost invariably served by impertinent assistants who follow his example and go far beyond it. The character of a business house is determined by its head.

Now, by the foregoing, it is not meant to be said that a business man never has a valid excuse for refusing to see callers. We mean nothing of the sort. The demands of a business are often such that the manager can see only those whose business is of a pressing nature. But on such occasions there is no reason why a caller should be unceremoniously turned down, as he is in some houses. He should be informed when the manager will be free, and in most cases an appointment might be made. Such action pays in the end. Courtesy is never unprofitable.

A CUP OF TEA.

WE are inclined to live too strenuously on this continent. The thing that most surprises the Englishman on visiting the United States or Canada is the tremendous hurry everyone is in. The card the Chicago man is said to hang on his door, "Gone to lunch; back in three minutes," is indicative of the restless energy with which we are all more or less afflicted. Even in our games and amusements the same thing crops out. We rush off to a baseball game, and if it is not all over in an hour we vote it slow. No one but an Englishman has time for cricket. At the theatre we are bored to death if we have to wait four minutes for the curtain to rise; and between acts the male portion of the audience are reputed to be partial to neighboring temples of Bacchus, where a bell rings thirty seconds before the curtain rises.

Is it any wonder that cases of nervous prostration are so frequent? And, after all, is it proper, as it is customary, to ascribe these cases of breakdown to overwork? Is it not rather misdirected and ill-advised energy? We are so eternally bent on doing something that very often we are not fit physically to do anything.

They attend more to the amenities of social life in England. What a howl of derision there would be should the directors of a great company in Montreal or Toronto pause in the midst of their deliberations, abandon all thoughts of the matter at issue, while an afternoon cup of tea was being served and a quarter hour spent in social conversation! Yet, this is by no means uncommon in England, and the directors resume their deliberations with a keener zest and more penetrating insight as a result of the short mental re laxation and the cup that cheers, but does not inebriate.

The average grocer in Canada is an overworked man. He comes down to business early and he goes home late. He is distracted from hour to hour with a multitude of details. If there is anyone who needs a mid-afternoon relaxation it is the grocer. Why should he not have his afternoon cup of tea as well as his English cousin across the sea? He has all the materials handy. In many of the smaller towns four o'clock is a slack time in the day's work. In a snug den in the rear of the store, with the clerks gathered around a steaming pot of tea, affairs even of business could be discussed from a new standpoint. Clerks could be encouraged to throw out suggestions, and a better feeling generally created between employer and clerks. Occasionally a customer, whose interest it was desired to enlist, or to whom it was desired to do a favor, might be invited into the sanctum to try, perhaps, a new tea. If occasion demanded, the grocer's wife might be present to preserve the proprieties.

There is much virtue in a cup of tea. The grocer, who knows more about tea than any other man in the community, should be on the alert for demonstrating new ways of enjoying those virtues.

JUDGING BY APPEARANCES.

IT is a trite saying that it is not safe to judge by appearances, but, as a matter of fact, people do judge by appearances. That is often the only way they have of judging and in most cases they are right in so doing.

This is a fact that the grocer should continually bear in mind. Upon the appearance of his store will he be judged. From the nature of the lines carried it is difficult perhaps to keep the grocery store as neat and tidy as might be desired, but, on the other hand, in no line of business does a neat and tidy appearance count more in one's favor, or in which untidiness and disorder are so injurious. Mortal woman was born with a desire to get things cheap, but every well-brought-up woman has a horror of dirt, and especially in connection with things to be eaten. She will pay an extra price every time as a premium on cleanliness.

Go into the busiest grocery in any town or city and almost invariably it will be found that despite the hurry, and the large quantity of goods handled, a scrupulous neatness is maintained. The double inference is that attention to appearances pays in good solid trade and that being too busy is no valid excuse for being untidy.

It pays to make the store look cheerful. It pays to decorate for the holiday season, and some of the most successful stores have found it a good investment to have handsome bouquets of cut flowers here and there throughout the store.

But the appearance of the store itself is not all. The personal appearance of the proprietor and the clerks is an important matter. There has been a great improvement in this matter within recent years, but there is still room for improvement in some cases. The proprietor should insist upon his clerks coming to work well, though not expensively, dressed, and he should set the example himself. He should insist upon them coming to work clean shaven and generally well kempt. Soap and water, brushes and whisks are cheap and made to be used. People like to deal with well groomed young men, and it is the grocer's business to give the people what they want. Moreover, the employe who is careless as to his personal appearance will in all probability be careless in business affairs. Appearances as a subject for an evening's quiet consideration might be advantageously taken by not a few men now in business either as employers or employes.

AMERICANS IN NORTHWEST.

SIR CHARLES DILKE, speaking recently, said that in Canada the fact of a preference on wheat would weaken the Imperial tie by increasing the already rapid rate at which the Northwest is being flooded by capital and labor from the United States.

Sir Charles need not be alarmed. Give us the preference and we will look after the Imperial tie. It is true that Americans are flocking into the Northwest, but so far as can be learned they are proving admirable settlers. They are generally well supplied with capital, and are familiar with the conditions of agriculture in the West. They are men of discernment, as is evidenced by the fact of their leaving the poorer lands of the United States for the No. 1 hard wheat lands of the Canadian Northwest. They have already shown their preference for Canadian soil; the same acumen of intellect will lead them to show a preference for Canadian laws and customs, which, especially in the matter of municipal government, are immensely superior to those of the United States. Then again, the little red school house is a wonderful power for instilling Canadian spirit. The sons and daughters of these American settlers will substitute Wolfe and the Fathers of Confederation for George Washington and the signatories of the Declaration of Independence, and the first of July will be found as propitious a day for exploding fire-crackers and nigger-chasers as the "fourth" ever was.

Yes, it may be objected, you may make them Canadian, but not British—and there is force in the objection.

But the preference on wheat is the very thing to bring the advantage of British connection home to people who, however devoted to the land of their adoption, might be unaffected by those traditions which bind us of British origin and descent to what we delight to call the Motherland. The preference would have the very opposite effect to that suggested by Sir Charles Dilke.

DAIRY INTERESTS PROSPEROUS.

THIS has been a great year for the dairy farmer. Although cheese is at present somewhat weak the prices taken the season through have been excellent and the make has been a record breaker which the fine weather of early November seems likely to still further increase. Butter which, owing to the partiality shown to cheese this year, has not been a large make, is on the other hand bringing very attractive prices, indeed from one to two cents above same time last year.

Altogether the farmer who includes dairying in his arrangements, and in the older provinces there are few who do not, should have plenty of ready money this Fall. The advantage of this condition to the trade generally is obvious.

HINTS TO BUYERS.

Contributors are requested to send news only, not puffs of goods they handle, or the arrival of standard goods that everyone has in stock, or that they are offering goods at close figures, or that they have had an unusually large sale this season.

The Eby, Blain Co., Ltd., report their first shipment of Valencia shelled almonds in store.

Buyers of chicken soups may procure some of the "Simcoe" brand from H. P. Eckardt & Co.

Balfour & Co., Hamilton, report a very large sale of nuts, figs and table raisins; larger than ever before, also a large demand for Ceylon green and black teas.

The R. & J. H. Simpson Co., Guelph, report that they have exceptionally good values in new season cleaned currants and extra selected and fine off-stalk raisins.

Ocean Mills received an order this week from their Quebec city representatives, Boivin & Grenier, for 400 cases Chinese starch and 2,500 lb. Ocean baking powder. Boivin & Grenier state that Chinese starch is fast becoming a leader with the grocery trade.

"Griffin" and "Thistle" brands of seeded raisins, 1-lb. packages, are in stock with The Eby, Blain Co.

Laporte, Martin & Cie. report having made deliveries in full of all their orders for dried fruit. As prices have advanced materially buyers can congratulate themselves on having placed their orders with Laporte, Martin & Cie.

H. P. Eckardt & Co. are selling choice California evaporated apricots at a very low price.

The Greig Mfg. Co., Montreal, report that their sales of ffikovah jellies, custards and blanc manges, etc., are increasing in volume, some very large orders having been received from the Maritime Provinces. In fact the demand lately has exhausted their stock, but another shipment is arriving this week, when all orders will be promptly executed.

The R. & J. H. Simpson Co., Guelph, are just in receipt of a shipment of new Hallowee and Sair dates, and they state that the quality is very fine, and that the prices are right.

The attention of buyers is directed to the advertisement of Laporte, Martin & Cie. in this week's issue. Special attention is drawn to the list of special agencies controlled by this house.

The Eby, Blain Co. are just in receipt of a shipment of Morton's herrings, fresh, kippered, and in tomato sauce, and are quoting same at low figures.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. Thos. Smart, late Toronto representative for The California Fruit Agency, has left for New Orleans. Mr. Brownlow, late of Brownlow & Husband, takes his place.

Mr. A. G. Snowdon, of Messrs. Snowdon, Forbes & Co., Montreal, is in the Ancient City this week looking after the interest of "Bee" brand goods, and the numerous other specialties of his firm.

Mr. D. W. Douglas, eastern representative of E. W. Gillett Co., Ltd., Toronto, is in Ottawa this week and Royal Yeast and Gillett's Lye, to say nothing of his other lines, are getting close attention at his hands.

Mr. David Brown, of Winnipeg, representing Tetley's Teas, has just returned from a visit to England. Mr. Brown will have something of interest to all buyers of Terley's Teas on his arrival home in Winnipeg.

Mr. H. R. Barnard, Montreal representative of Messrs. Hunt & Co., Yokohama, is on a business trip through Western Ontario this week, visiting Toronto, Hamilton, London and other large centres in the interest of Japan teas.

Mr. Frank Adams has joined the staff of The Comfort Soap Co., having been appointed assistant to Mr. F. D. Cockburn, manager of the eastern distributing department, at 1676 Notre Dame street, Montreal. Mr. Adams is a brother of Mr. J. E. Adams, Omemee, and both he and his brother have long been readers and subscribers of "The Grocer."

A visitor to the Montreal office of "The Canadian Grocer" this week was Mr. C. L. Farnworth, representing the F. F. Dalley Co., Ltd., Hamilton, Ont. Mr. Farnworth has, for many years, represented his firm in Eastern Ontario, and as far east as Quebec City, and through the Eastern Townships. He reported very satisfactory business throughout his entire territory. His devotion to "2-in-1" is apparent in the very large number of stores now handling this line in the city of Montreal. Mr. Farnworth's headquarters are at Ottawa.

GOOD REPORTS FROM THE PROVINCES.

Mr. A. M. Piper, of Todhunter, Mitchell & Co., coffee and spices, Toronto, dropped in at the Montreal office of "The Grocer" on his way home from the Maritime Provinces, the other day. Trade is reported as very good in all lines throughout the Maritime Provinces, and it is gratifying to learn that the general activity noticeable in the eastern section of Canada has an air of permanency about it that augurs well. Mr. Piper reported that unfortunately for certain fishing districts the season just closed had not been a good one, the failure, being attributable to scarcity of bait, inclement weather and absence of schools of fish, but on the whole the prosperity of the provinces was undeniably evident. The recent strong advances in spices and coffees had been so stimulating to buyers that very good orders had been booked. The coal industry was never in better shape and the mines driven to their utmost to supply the ever-increasing demand. Mr. Piper's trip covered a period of some seven weeks, during the major portion of which he had been favored with good weather, and the salt air had put a very ruddy color on his genial countenance. "It is astonishing," remarked Mr. Piper, "how 'The Grocer' is looked to down in the Provinces, and, as an old friend of your journal, I am always glad to find it on my trip, as it keeps me in thorough touch with the trade and its changing conditions." Thanks, Mr. Piper!

A TEA MISSIONARY.

Mr. A. Suter, of the Montreal branch of Crosfield, Lampard, Clark & Co, the London, Eng., and Colombo tea house, has returned from his two weeks' tour through New York State, Ohio, Michigan and Pennsylvania. Mr. Suter's trip was made with a view of opening branches and agencies for his house in the special interest of Ceylon and Indian teas, and though the popular taste has not taken hold of our southern and western cousins as in Canada, he was pleased to learn that owing to the stimulating advertising that had been done during the past number of years the trade was beginning to look with distinct favor upon these teas, and it was only a question of a few years when the excellent merits of British-grown teas would meet with favor. Many of the leading jobbers in Bay City, Detroit, Cleveland, Columbus, Buffalo and Pittsburg were considering the advisability of taking hold of Ceylon and Indian teas, and there is little doubt but that the St. Louis Purchase Exhibition next year, where large bungalows are being erected by the Ceylon Government and Tea Association, for the purpose of introducing these teas to the American public, will have a marked effect. The introduction of Ceylon green teas since the Chicago Fair will make the work of diverting the taste of tea drinkers easier, as Americans are, if drinkers of tea at all, more friendly to China and Japan greens than to blacks. Mr. Suter reports his reception as very favorable and most encouraging.

RAYMOND SUGAR FACTORY OPENS.

The first sugar made in Western Canada was made at the Raymond factory, Alberta, on Tuesday. Owing to the scarcity of labor, the crop fell short of what was expected, but will reach 1,200 tons.

The proprietors of "Silvia" tea, of Buffalo, being threatened by suit by The "Salada" Tea Co. for imitating their packet, have agreed to discontinue using the name and label resembling "Salada."

ARGUMENT.

We now offer a practical time piece for the Grocery Trade of Canada, and base our statement upon the following:

First—It is absolutely guaranteed to keep accurate time.

Second—It stands rough usage and does not get out of order easily, making it the only watch for dealers outside of the jewelery trade to handle, and also making it a practical one for sportsmen, boys and all men who give a watch hard usage.

Third—Its low price and high quality insure a tremendous sale, which we further augment by furnishing many handsome advertising devices for your store.

Fourth—Last but not least, these watches offer a handsome profit. Price cutters are not supplied.

Sold by several leading Grocery Jobbers of Canada. We will tell you who they are upon request.

Trial Offer—To any Grocery Dealer who will write to us upon his business letter head and inclose 75c. we will send a sample watch (duty not paid) and our catalogue, so that he can test its accuracy and durability.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

ONTARIO MARKETS.

GROCERIES.

Toronto, Nov. 12, 1903.

WHOLESALERS report they are now in the midst of the Fall rush. Orders for canned goods and dried fruits are rapidly being filled since the arrival of the Bellona. City trade is especially good. Collections are reported satisfactory and the prospects encouraging. The canned goods situation is more satisfactory than for some time. There will be plenty of tomatoes, but perhaps a slight shortage in corn and peas. Coffees are firm with an upward tendency and buyers cautious. Spices still continue to maintain a strong position, with indications pointing to a reduction of stocks. Syrups and molasses are meeting with a fair demand, with particular inquiry for corn syrups. On the London market teas continue to show strength and have fully maintained the advance reported last week. Locally there is a more healthy tone, and buyers have realized that teas have made more than a temporary advance. In dried fruits the most interest centres round the advance of 2s. 6d. to 3s. per cwt. in Valencia raisins at Denia. The advance has stiffened prices locally, but has as yet resulted in no quotable advance. Sugar is dull with no quotable change. Wallaceburg has listed standard granulated at 4, and also No. 1 yellow, an innovation for domestic beet factories.

CANNED GOODS.

During the last week the canners have been more liberal in filling orders, and many wholesalers on the street report that they have all they want. It looks now as if tomatoes will be fully sufficient, but doubts are entertained as to corn and peas. Tomatoes are now on a basis of 1.05, and some concessions from this have been heard of on the part of holders of large stocks. We quote :

COFFEES.

In New York the market is fluctuating between the bulls and the bears with the bulls usually on top. As to spot, the market is more steady. The "Ariosa" and "Lion" brands have been advanced from 8 to 9½c. within the last week, a good indication of a strong feeling. Locally there is an improving retail demand, but the high values have rather frightened wholesalers, and buying is cautious. We quote :

SUGAR.

The market for the past week has been extremely dull. There have been some sales of raws in New York at 1-16c. decline, the Arbuckle Refinery taking 11,000 bags of Cuba centrifugals at 2½c. cost and freight for basis of 96, which equals 3 3-16c. duty paid. At close, this quotation is only nominal, and the tone and tendency rather favor buyers. There have been buyers at 3⅜c. but no sellers thus far. The concession in prices already referred to was given by importers rather than put cargo in store, and, since, a cargo of Cuba sugar arriving in port has been stored in absence of buyers at recent quotations. Receipts at United States four ports for week ending November 4 were 21,575 tons, with estimated meltings same as previous week, namely 30,000 tons, leaving total stock in all hands of 120,917 tons, which is 45,000 tons less than same week last year. As against this, stocks in Cuba are about 40,000 tons over same time last year. Combined stocks thus show a decline of about 5,000 tons. Combined European and American stocks at latest uneven dates are 1,234,917 tons, against 1,293,098 tons last year, a decrease of 58,181 tons. It is estimated that sugar afloat to United States ports is 30,000 tons less than same time last year. There is considerable conjecture over the probable action of the United States Congress on the Cuba reciprocity treaty, which will come up for consideration this week, although there is likely to be considerable delay in passage. The proviso inserted by the Senate on March 19 last, that the treaty should not take effect until approved by Congress, is believed to be a technical error and gives the opponents of the treaty an opportunity to block its progress for some time. Should the reciprocity treaty be passed promptly, taking 20 per cent. off Cuban sugars, the prospects are for the demoralization of the immediate future of the raw market, as the bulk of the 125,000 tons remaining in Cuba will be promptly shipped to the United States ports. In the meantime, as may be gathered from the figures above, the statistical position is favorable and prices should hold about steady. There have been only slight fluctuations in Europe to 8s. 7½d. basis, f.o.b. Hamburg, 88 test, since reacting 3 farthings per hundredweight to 8s. 6¾d. The apparent reason for this has been the continued favorable reports from Mr. Licht, the latest of which was "No change in the situation." The condition of the New York refined market is about as last advised, the only change being a reduction of 5c. per hundredweight on the long price, the net, however, remaining at the former figure. There is little to advise as to the local situation. The movement of sugar is slow at the moment and prices are without change. On referring to list it will be noted that the Wallaceburg beet sugar factory have listed 1903 granulated and No. 1 yellow. The latter is an innovation, no other domestic beet factories having heretofore made this grade. We quote :

SPICES.

The general tendency is toward a reduction of supplies and higher price levels. The market is active with a good grinding demand for pepper, cloves, nutmegs and mace. Locally the wholesale trade are pretty well supplied, but there is no weakening of the firmness which has recently prevailed in the market in all lines. We quote :

TEAS.

The advances in the London market reported last week have been fully maintained, with a tendency toward the hardening of prices in most grades, though mediums continue relatively cheap. Buyers have perhaps not been quite so keen as a week ago, transactions being of the hand to mouth character, while offerings are by no means liberal. A circular from Brooke Bond Co. reports good demand for common Pekoe Souchongs in London, with a tendency upwards on account of the shortage of Ceylons. Many gardens there are reported under water, which will probably check the growth for some months. The circular hints that we have seen the lowest prices of the season. Locally the inquiry for cheap teas continues and last week some brokers placed considerable quantities at a small advance. The tone is decidedly healthier. One wholesaler said he thought the market had got beyond the buyers, who were too slow in anticipating the rise. We quote :

Grocer" some time ago. This is an improvement on late reports, but nevertheless there has been a sharp advance of 2s. 6d. to 3s. per cwt. at Denia, as was forecasted in last week's "Grocer." The result locally has been a stiffening of prices, but as yet scarcely any quotable advance. Prices are now about a cent lower than this time last year when London stocks were exhausted in January. As the market was bare and the crop this year same as last, it would not seem that local prices are warranted by conditions. Jobbers, however, are understood to be well stocked at low prices and are more disposed to unload than to make fancy profits. The arrival of the Bellona has aroused greater interest in dried fruits, and the Christmas demand is making itself felt in a general steady call for all these classes of goods. We quote :

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

EGGS.

The market is firm at last week's quotations. The demand is good for strictly new-laid, with but few arrivals. The export orders for pickled are largely filled although some dealers report they could have filled more had they the eggs. We quote :

GREEN FRUITS.

This is a little between seasons just at present and trade is consequently not so brisk. When the weather becomes a little cooler the foreign fruits will become more active. There is a good demand for Florida oranges. Cranberries are quiet. Bananas are slow. We quote :

GRAIN, FLOUR AND BREAKFAST FOODS.

GRAIN.

The grain markets continue brisk, a little easier than last week. Owing to difference of opinion among dealers as to wheat, we quote a somewhat wider range of prices than usual. Manitoba wheat, No. 1 hard, has dropped 2½c. Manitoba Northern is from 2 to 3c. easier. Red wheat has dropped ½c. We quote :

QUEBEC MARKETS.

GROCERIES.

Montreal, November 12, 1903.

GENERAL business during the week has been of a satisfactory nature, with little of special interest to be noted. Payments are now said to be more satisfactory on the whole than for some months back. Sugars are quiet now, but are steady at prices quoted. No advance is expected. Business in syrups is steady, except for some conflicting prices in Barbados. The situation is commented upon at length under heading syrups and molasses. In teas, the chief interest this week seems to be in China greens and Japans. The former are very hard to get for immediate delivery. Coffee is firmer. In spices of all kinds there has been a gradual stiffening of values, owing to the report of a short crop. The canned goods situation is unchanged. A few sales of tomatoes at $1, and of corn and peas at 85c. are reported. There has been more activity in the foreign dried fruit market since the arrival of the Bellona from the Mediterranean with figs, dates, currants and raisins. Full particulars are given below. Some kinds of fish are reported very scarce and as there is an excellent demand prices rule firm throughout. Oysters are weaker as the consumption has fallen off during the warm weather. Eggs are in splendid demand and prices are now ruling very strong. The bean situation is commented on below. Prices of Manitoba flour are declining and reduced figures are quoted below.

SUGAR.

The trade has been very quiet during the past week. Prices remain unchanged and there does not seem to be any likelihood of an advance in the near future. Several lots of Russian granulated have lately come to hand and been readily taken hold of. Some jobbers reported to "The Grocer" representative that certain houses were not adhering to the prices and in consequence they have refrained from offering or pushing sugars. As the river and shore navigation is drawing to a close quite a little sugar is being forwarded by schooners. Outside of this there is no special feature in connection with the sugar trade this week. We quote :

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Business continues steady, though prices of Barbados molasses are somewhat conflicting. Genuine pure Barbados is quoted in round lots at 38½ to 39c., while blended stock is being offered from Maritime ports at from 2½ to 3c. per gallon. This mixed molasses is generally fought shy of by the trade having a call for pure Barbados, but occasionally a lot will be passed through that upsets prices for a month. In syrups, good business is going, and although prices are unchanged the corn syrups are meeting with favor. We quote :

TEAS.

In China greens there has been quite a demand for Moyune 2nd and 3rd, Young Hysons, and particularly Ping Suey and Gunpowders and Young Hysons in boxes during the past two weeks. Such teas as have arrived have been eagerly picked up. It is understood, however, that the bulk of these teas are to arrive by the Suez Canal, which will take till about the middle of February before the major portion of them come to hand; in the meantime these teas are very hard to get for immediate use.

Ceylon and India black low grades are exceedingly close and range from 6½d. to 7½d.

Japans are enquired for freely from the West during the week and import orders have gone forward both from here and the West. for teas ranging from 15½ to 17½. We quote:

SPICES.

There has been a gradual stiffening of values on all grades and the report of short crop is confirmed.

Cloves are reported high and active again, and as stocks in New York are in two or three hands, the position is very strong and no likelihood of prices easing up.

Nutmegs are steady. Pimento will likely advance before 1905. Cassia is active with no special changes in value. We quote:

That THE CANADIAN GROCER is a most valuable advertising medium for those who seek the trade of the grocers and general storekeepers of Canada is as plain as day—yet some folks can't see it.

Like the man who was looking all over the house for his glasses when they were on his forehead, there be some who are looking for more business among grocers yet can't see that the easiest and cheapest way to get it is through advertising in THE GROCER.

And as long as they won't listen to nor see the reasonableness of our arguments in favor of their advertising in THE GROCER, just so long are they going to be denied the business that GROCER subscribers are continually sending to GROCER advertisers.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

The arrival of the Bellona from Mediterranean ports with figs, dates, currants and raisins has put a little more activity into the dried fruit market. As regards Valencia raisins, importers having supplied their requirements, have shown little interest in the reductions at Denia mentioned in our last report. The currant market continues firm, with tendency to advance.

The earliest of new crop shelled walnuts were shipped from Bordeaux on October 23. These goods are kiln-dried and will arrive considerably in excess of earliest shipments. Earliest natural dried Mayette Grenobles were shipped from Havre on November 7. The first direct shipment of figs is expected this week. Dates are also expected and prices will be in the neighborhood of 5c. per pound.

English manufacturers of candied peel advise a very material advance amounting to 1s. per cwt on lemon and orange, and 3s. on citron. The last mentioned will be very high next year owing to a further failure in the citron crop. We quote :

GREEN FRUITS.

There is a good demand for fancy stock of apples, fair quality selling from $2 to $2.75. The foreign market is keeping up remarkably well considering the enormous shipments that are being made.

Spanish onions are quoted from $2 to $2.15 per large crate. Red onions, 75-lb. boxes, $1.50, and red onions, 150-lb. boxes $3.10. This high price is due no doubt to the failure of the Canadian crop, and what is selling here is arriving from Michigan.

Cranberries, Nova Scotia, are selling at $9.50 to $10 ; Cape Cod, $11 to $11.50.

No change to report in sweet potatoes. We quote :

FISH.

There has been a good demand for all kinds of fresh fish. Haddock is arriving more freely from Nova Scotia coast and from this out ample supplies are offered from there. Same applies to steak cod. Dore and pike are looked for, as the close season for whitefish and trout commences on November 10. In green codfish there is nothing new to report since our last. The market is still bare of stock, although a small lot was offered from Quebec on Monday last, but this did not have any effect on the market, as the shipment was too small.

Prepared fish show nothing new to note. The demand is good and on setting in of cold weather a better business will be done.

Oysters have been arriving more freely during the past week and owing to the warm weather the consumption has not been up to the receipts, and consequently prices have fallen off some. We quote :

VEGETABLES.

Prices for potatoes are firmer than at the time of our last issue and it is now said to be difficult to buy under 60c. Spanish onions are now selling freely at prices given last week, viz. : $2.25 to $2.50 for large cases, and crates 70 to 80c. Canadian red onions are reported scarce. We quote :

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

EGGS.

The demand still continues good, and is likely to remain so, as there does not seem to be sufficient stock to go round. Late Fall deliveries are selling readily at 23 to 25c., selects 22 to 23c., limed 19c. There is very little No. 2 stock on the market.

BEANS.

The bean situation continues very difficult to estimate. American prices are continuing to decline and many good judges of the Canadian market are confident that prices here will have to be reduced very considerably. On the other hand, some brokers are talking confidently of a rise. This feeling is perhaps due to the scarcity of goods on spot. Beans for immediate shipment are hard to get in any considerable quantity and for "rush" orders producers are holding out for stiff prices. For later delivery, however, prices may generally be said to be easier. We quote the following jobbers' prices which might be increased for immediate delivery :

No. 1 hand-picked, carlots	1 85
Choice prime, per bushel	1 75
" carlots	1 55
Ordinary (off grade), per bush	1 45

HONEY.

There is nothing new in the situation, Buckwheat honey is still very scarce and dealers are unable to secure the supplies needed to supply the demand. Comb honey is also in good demand, but other grades are not wanted at present. Producers are unable to sell their stocks to jobbers, although they are offering low prices. We quote the following unchanged prices to the trade :

Strained, white	0 07½	0 08
Clover and basswood	0 08	0 08½
Buckwheat	0 07	0 07½
Comb honey		0 13

MAPLE PRODUCTS.

Prices are steady in sympathy with an increased inquiry. We quote :

EVAPORATED APPLES.

There have been no changes since last issue and it would now seem that prices have found their level. Wholesale houses are still quoting the following prices to the trade :

New, in carlots	0 05½	0 06
New, in jobbing lots	0 06	0 06½

FLOUR AND GRAIN.

FLOUR.

Some further reductions will be noted below. Prices have been abnormally high for some time back but it would seem that they are now settling to their proper level. We quote :

Manitoba spring wheat patents		4 60

FEED.

Business is fairly active, with a good demand for all lines. Since last report, Manitoba bran has been reduced 50c. and shorts have also dropped 50c. Other prices are unchanged, and prices now given are firm. We quote :

Ontario bran, in bulk	16 50	17 00

A fair business is reported at unchanged prices. We quote :

ROLLED OATS.

There have been no changes. Business is only fair. We quote :

GRAIN.

Business this week has not shown any improvement. Both for local and export account trade is very quiet as bids from foreign buyers are generally out of line, and local dealers are buying only to fill their immediate wants. With the close of navigation at hand, the season may be said to be closed, except for some Ontario deliveries which are expected before the close of the month. We quote :

BALED HAY.

Shipments to Great Britain have been increasing since our last report. The local trade is, however, far from active, owing to light offerings from the farmers who are busy with Fall plowing. We quote :

No. 1 timothy	10 00	11 00
No. 2 timothy, choice	9 00	9 50
No. 2 timothy, ordinary	8 50	8 75

LOOSE HAY.

The market is quiet at $7.50 to $8 per load of 100 bundles of 15 lb. each, and old hay, $8 to $8.50.

ASHES.

Receipts continue small and the volume of actual business is not large. The demand is good and prices are strong. We quote :

First pots, per cwt	5 95	6 00

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

Office of "The Canadian Grocer,"

St. John, N.B., Nov. 9, 1903.

AFTER some quite cold weather we have had nearly a week of Summer days, perhaps the finest of the year. Business while good has not the snap which the trade expect at this season ; still they are very busy, country storekeepers being anxious to get supplies in before the close of navigation. Winter port matters are still of interest. The great need this year in the face of the large and continued increase of the Winter export business and the absolute need for another year, keeps the matter a live issue. The C.P.R. continue to say they will do nothing in the way of wharf building, but do say they will have to find another port if something is not done. Many feel, however, that from the fact of their own road coming here, and that already they have spent much money, that they will be willing, if necessary, to do considerable before moving.

OILS.

Burning oil is again quoted higher, the advance during the past week being marked. The market is very firm. Business is active, as contracts were largely made when prices were lower. Lubicating oils are very firm, and already many contracts for Spring are being made. Paint oils, that is linseeds, are easy. Turpentine is quite high. Cod oil is very scarce with full prices asked. We quote :

SALT.

In Liverpool coarse salt there is a fair stock held. Regular supplies will shortly be received. This will mean rather lower prices where shipments can be made direct from steamer's side, saving storing expenses. In fine salt business is rather quiet. The season has been unsatisfactory because of the difficulty of getting supplies. We quote :

CANNED GOODS.

The association have made quite an improvement in their reputation here by the deliveries they advise they will make. This is the more noted as several outside packers are short. Prices in corn, peas and tomatoes are very firm. In fruits the supply seems rather small and is controlled by the association. Salmon receipts are now quite large ; prices are very firm. Domestic canned fish, particularly sardines, are held at full figures.. We quote.

DRIED FRUIT.

Business is active. Malaga loose muscatels, choice and fancy seeded, continue to arrive. While the seeded do not show the high quality of the loose, they are sound, and, at the low prices, being well below California stock, find quite a large sale. A new line of California seeded, called seeded seedless, are offered. While the raisins are small the stock is good and the price attractive. New prunes are slow arriving. Figs find a large sale. Dates are in fair demand. Peels are moving out freely. Direct shipments of new cleaned currants are here. In evaporated apples little has been done; the price in the west is firmer, but dealers here are inclined to look for lower figures. We quote:

GREEN FRUIT.

Dealers are quite busy. Apples are perhaps not as firm, but best stock brings full figures. Nova Scotia shippers send their best fruit to England. Oranges and lemons are unchanged. In Malaga grapes sales are quite active and quality particularly good. Cranberries are firm; some Nova Scotia berries are offered under Cape Cod figures. There are no quinces. We quote:

FISH.

The very firm market continues. Fall is a season of large sales, and, particularly in pickled herring, there has been some difficulty in supplying the demand. The quality of Grand Manan and Bay herring has been good, and the better grades are not offered. Smoked herring keep high. Dry cod and pollock are held at full figures. We quote:

FLOUR, FEED AND MEAL.

In flour, prices are unchanged. There has been a quite active sale. Feed is quite high, with a good demand. Oats and oatmeal are firm. In beans, few are offered. Barley is a light stock. Shippers say they cannot get barrels. Split peas are rather higher. Cornmeal is quoted rather lower. We quote:

NOTES.

The first western corn and tomatoes to arrive is the "Quaker" brand, controlled by Dearborn & Co. These goods though on the market but a few years, command the very highest prices.

Upton's home-made jam in full pound bottles and Upton's marmalade in the same style, are offered by The F. E. Williams Co., who are now doing a jobbing business in fine groceries.

The Fall Number of "The Grocer," to hand a week ago, receives everywhere many words of special praise.

Bowman & Cole received another large shipment of choice Malaga seeded raisins this week. These sell well below California stock.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

Winnipeg, November 9, 1903.

THE fine weather still holds. With the exception of Friday, which was cold and windy, the week has been ideally perfect weather. Soft, balmy air, clear blue skies and bright sunshine all day have prevailed, and glorious moonlight nights, further enhanced by the most magnificent displays of the aurora that have been witnessed for many years.

The fine weather is keeping farmers close to their plows and the receipts of wheat continue to be small, and the slow sale of wheat and the fine weather are retarding the sale of heavy Winter goods in the clothing and fur lines, but grocers report business quite as brisk as ever. Fruit men state that the turn over in their business for October was better than last year. The fruit trade is pretty well settled down to apples and will not show much of interest until Christmas supplies begin to arrive. Three wholesale grocers called on this morning in succession made exactly the same reply: "business is very good, no change in prices that I have heard, in fact we are too busy to worry over prices just now."

A word as to the wheat trade may not be without interest. The last returns from terminal elevators show that the receipts are 2,340,000 less than for the same period last year, while shipments are very close to 3,000,000 behind those of last year. If Mr. Foster's predictions for November are as accurate as they have been throughout the season, navigation will be open late, but there is no doubt the crop is moving slowly and a large part of it will be out of the country before the Spring. Exporters report trade very dull in wheat and local prices considerably above export. The farmers are the men who will make the most money out of this crop, for all that has been sold up to the present time has brought very high prices to the farmers. The crop was, in many respects, a cheaper one to harvest than that of last year and though the grade was off considerably, from wet weather, the prices were so much in excess of last year as to cover these difficulties and leave a larger margin.

CANNED GOODS.

The situation is without change. Stock is moving freely and the demand is good at the higher prices. Jobbers are not keen to sell any of the leading lines of vegetables owing to the fact that their orders have not been filled in full.

The goods of factories outside the syndicate do not appear to be coming forward very rapidly, as some retail houses who are known to have bought this stock continue to tell their customers that the new pack of tomatoes is not in yet. We quote:

The ordinary steady consumptive trade goes on from week to week and no change in price is to be noted, and none seems to be anticipated in the very near future. We quote:

EVAPORATED AND DRIED FRUITS.

The only item of importance is the arrival of direct shipment raisins, which are quoted at $1.90 to $2 for fine off stalk. The prices in primary markets advanced 20 per cent. after orders were placed so that the spread between first shipments and direct is not so large as usual. The new stock is very fine in quality. GREEN FRUITS.

As already stated, the trade now is largely confined to apples, for which there is a heavy demand. Cape Cod cranberries are out of the market and Jerseys have not yet arrived. They are due the coming week and will be quoted at $11 per barrel. The first car of California oranges is booked to arrive about November 20. Prices are as follows: Mexican oranges, $6; lemons, $6; apples, $3.50 to $5 per barrel; Malaga grapes, $8; bananas, $4 a bunch.

PRODUCE.

The slow export trade is having a tendency to glut the local market with beef, and prices are down. Prices are as follows: Beef, 5½ to 6c.; mutton 8c.; lambs, 12c.; hogs, 8½c.

CURED MEATS.

Prices are easier in nearly all lines, quotations for the present week being: Hams, 14½; shoulders, 9c.; breakfast bellies, 13½c.; backs, 12½c.; rolls, 11 to 11½c.; long clear, 10c.; dry salt backs, 11c.; lard in tierces, 9½c.; 50-lb. tubs, $4.70; 20-lb. pails, $1.95; 10-lb. pails, $5.95; 5-lb. pails, $6; and 3-lb. pails, $6.10.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, Nov. 9, 1903.

THE open Autumn weather of the last week has been favorable to trading, and wholesale houses report business better than usual for the first week in November. Farmers are moving their produce to market, necessitating frequent visits to retail centres, which has led to an improvement in sales. Reports to hand from all parts of the province take a very favorable view of the trade outlook, and, with few exceptions, conditions are better than they have been for many years. There is unusual activity in all provincial industries, and whatever the outlook may be elsewhere, there is not apparent in this province any evidence of approaching depression.

The local cheese market is depressed, and there is very little movement in this article. The local factories are holding out for higher prices than obtain in Quebec, and buyers refuse to operate. The factories want about 11¼ to 11½c. for October make. At the same time there are fairly large stocks in dealers' hands in this city for which 12c. must be had in order to afford a profit. Butter is in good demand, especially choice creamery, which is none too plentiful. Now that some cheese factories have closed down there will be an increase in the butter supply. Really choice dairy butter is in request, but buyers have become quite critical, and the poorer grades are not salable. Eggs are very scarce and high. They are jobbing to-day at 21c.. The time is now past when supplies come from general dealers throughout the province, and a further advance in price is certain, as the Prince Edward Island supply seems to be under strong control this season.

Large quantities of Prince Edward Island produce arrived by schooners during the last week. Sales, however, have been slow, as buyers have held off for lower prices. Some cargoes of island oats have sold under regular quotations. This has weakened the oat market in spite of the strong position elsewhere. Potatoes are held at 38c., but our buyers refuse to operate above 35c. per bushel. Turnips are selling ex-vessel at 80c. per barrel.

* * *

A good deal of interest centres in dried fruits and peels, for which there is a brisk demand. Seeded raisins are now higher, owing to an advance in first cost. All other varieties are jobbing at about the same price as last year. Retailers are laying in their supplies well in advance of holiday requirements, evidently anticipating that repeat orders will carry higher prices.

* * *

Flour is unchanged with the exception of Manitobas, which are a little easier than last week. American pork is easier, as well as domestic. Sugar is steady, but the demand is lighter than a few weeks ago. Molasses is unchanged; the price remaining quite firm. Beans are a little lower. There is considerable outcry regarding the scarcity of grocery grades of codfish and herring. A small lot of codfish were offered last week at a price which would mean $6 a quintal to the retailer.

* * *

Apple exports continue heavy. So far this season 172,201 barrels have been shipped from Halifax, as against 25,788 barrels up to the like date last year. As a consequence of the strong export very few choice apples are available for the local market. A dealer who spent the greater part of last week in the valley, reports that foreign buyers have taken about everything in sight, and that he had difficulty in getting enough good fruit to supply his trade. At present No. 1 Gravensteins sell here at $3, and No. 2's at $2.50. Blenheims sell for the same, but Kings, Baldwins, Spies and Ribstons are selling at $3.50 for No. 1 and $3 for No. 2. Pears are selling at $3 to $4 per barrel. Bananas are scarce and high, owing to the storm in the West Indies. Fair bunches are worth $2.50 each. Malaga grapes are in good demand at $5 to $6, according to weight and quality. Jamaica oranges arrive regularly by steamer and sell at $5.50 to $6 repacked.

JAPAN TEA TRADE.

Mr. C. M. Bernard, of Chicago, sends THE GROCER the following statistics showing the exportation of tea from Japan to America this season up to September 30, as compared with the same period last season:

New York	11,624,898	11,426,626
Chicago	15,523,570	12,171 082
San Francisco	5,055,942	2,675,903
Canada	3,340,079	2,261,421
Total	35,544,489	28,535,032

This shows an increase this season of 7,009,457 lb., of which the increase to Canada is 1,078,658.

Mr. Bernard says there is no sale for Ceylon greens in Chicago except for mixing with low-grade Japans.

CARE OF ORANGE TREES.

WHEN the engine driver of the railroad train passing through the orange country of Florida blows a prolonged blast with the whistle of the locomotive you can see men, women and children hastening toward the orange groves, as the people in a country town run to put out a fire. The whistle is a signal to them that a cold wave is coming, and unless they take steps to fight it a few hours may mean the loss of a year's work and perhaps ruin. This is why everybody who can help, from grandfather down to the youngster of ten, starts for the orange orchard.

Down in Florida the orange tree is as carefully matured as some of the invalids who go there in Winter for their health. In fact, in the country which is exposed to the frost many of the trees are provided with homes for themselves, and in some cases a whole grove is housed in a mammoth building, sheltered not only from the cold winds, but heated as well as some of the hotels. It is a curious sight to ride through the middle portion of the state during a cold spell. In places it seems as if an army of soldiers was encamped, for row after row of tents stretch away in regular order as far as the eye can reach.

In other places the sheds which enclose the grove cover from five to ten acres, and at a distance look like mammoth stables or exposition buildings, such is their length. Many of the tents are similar in shape to those used for military purposes, and large enough to hold a dozen soldiers comfortably. Where they are made entirely of canvas they are attached to a wooden pole driven into the ground and firmly buried. From the top of the pole extends a cross-piece which supports the top of the canvas when the tent is in use. Below the cross-piece is fastened a wooden hoop large enough to completely encircle the tree. When there is no danger of a frost the canvas covering is folded against the supporting post and tied so loosely that it can be unfastened by a mere pull of the hand. When the engineer gives the warning of an approaching cold snap, as already stated, everybody starts for the orchard.

The canvas fastenings are untied, the cloth pulled around the hoop and over the top by a jerk of the cord attached. Then the ends of the canvas are fastened securely. Only one person is required to cover a single tree, unless it is unusually large. The work of drawing the tent requires but a few seconds, but where there are three thousand or four thousand trees in a grove, time is indeed precious. Only a few hours may elapse before the frost comes, and it is often necessary to work far into the night with the aid of lanterns.

Where the orchards are enclosed in sheds the sides and roofs of the sheds are composed largely of huge frames of glass, so that during the cold weather the trees can have the benefit of the sunlight. The frames are mounted on rollers so that they can be slid to one side and the trees exposed to the air. In some of the sheds there are hundreds of these frames, and the work of closing them is no small task, but if the weather indications are for an unusually cold spell the sheds are heated, as already stated. In some orchards lamps filled with coal oil are placed a few feet apart, all ready to be lighted at a moment's notice. Others have stoves which are made especially to heat a very large area.

Thanks to the United States Weather Bureau, the orange grower in Florida is no longer caught napping.

NEVER DRIP-A-DROP TEA STRAINER.

LAST week in the course of a few minutes conversation with a Montreal business man, a representative of "The Grocer" was shown a little novelty which is soon to be introduced to the Canadian public through the grocery trade, and which, because of its utility and cheapness, should very soon become popular. This little invention is a tea and coffee strainer of quite a different type from those to which we are accustomed. In naming it the promoters were divided between two names, each of which tells of a peculiar merit. These names were, "Never Drip-a-Drop" and "Out of Sight." The strainer is invisible, as it is inserted in the spout of the tea or coffee pot. It is so constructed that it will fit any spout. Like most useful inventions it is very simple, and the wonder is that it was never thought of before. It consists of an annealed rust-proof wire, to which are attached bristles of special quality. As the wire is quite pliable it can be made to fit any spout. The bristles scarcely interfere with the flow of the liquid, but, from experiments made, it is demonstrated that it will not allow any tea leaves or coffee grounds to escape. A good feature—expressed by the name—is that the strainer does not allow of any dripping on the table cloth.

We understand that it is the intention of the promoters to commence an energetic advertising campaign, which should make their strainer familiar to the whole country. It sells for 10c. and allows a good percentage of profit to the retailer. It will be easily handled and will represent only a small investment.

The manager of the company controlling this useful article, is at present in England closing arrangements with a large house there for its sale. The Greig Mfg. Co., Limited, Montreal, have the exclusive right for supplying "Never Drip-a-Drop" tea strainers to the grocery trade of Canada, and those interested should communicate with these parties.

A LARGE TEA PACK.

During last week one of the "Salada" tea-packing machines packed 18,400 lb. of tea. This is a considerably larger quantity than the lot of tea that made a great deal of noise in the world; the tea that was dumped into Boston Harbor, in 1776, for there were only 324 half-chests in the ship from which it was taken.

DIPLOMA FOR MERIT.

The A. F. MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co. have just received a diploma from the Osaka Exhibition, Japan, testifying to the merits of Imperial Cheese exhibited there. They say they have become so accustomed to taking highest awards for Imperial Cheese that the novelty of the thing has long since worn off, as wherever they have shown "Imperial" since the World's Fair, Chicago, they have carried off firsts.

APPLE EXPORT REPORT.

The following comparative summary of the quantity of apples exported from Atlantic ports for the week and season ending November 7 has been given out by Mr. Fred. Barker, apple exporter, Church street, Toronto:

The following cable from Liverpool was received Wednesday afternoon by Mr. Barker in regard to the apple market there on Wednesday, 11th inst.:

"47,000 bbls. selling; market active at rather lower prices; Baldwins, 13 to 16s.; Greenings, 15 to 18s. 6d.; Spies, 12 to 16s. 6d.; Russets, 13 to 15s. 6d.; Kings, 20 to 23s."

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, B.C., Nov. 9, 1903.

VANCOUVER Board of Trade is still wrestling with the freight rate problem, as applying to the trade in the Northwest Territories, as far east as points parallel with Calgary and Lethbridge.

As reported in "The Grocer" at the time, the C.P.R., in August last, conceded a reduction on all freight rates as far as Calgary, on the main line. No concession on the Crows Nest line to Lethbridge was given, nor was any mention of the matter made by Mr. B. W. Greer, general freight agent at Vancouver, who wrote the letter informing the board of the company's decision. The special committee which had the matter in hand took up this question with Mr. Greer, and through him with Mr. G. M. Bosworth, the company's freight traffic manager at Montreal. On September 14 Mr. Greer wrote to say that the company would not interfere with existing rates to Lethbridge.

The Board of Trade and the Wholesale Grocers' Association, acting in conjunction in the matter, do not consider this satisfactory, as it does not meet the wishes of the coast merchants who hold that a dividing line should be established so that all distributing rates, both class and commodity, shall meet equally at the two points named, Calgary and Lethbridge, and that these rates should always be readjusted at these points should any future tariff changes be made from either end.

In submitting its report, which was endorsed by the Board of Trade, the committee submit in support of their claim that the Great Northern has recognized such a rule, and makes Butte, Montana, the dividing line as between St. Paul on the east and Seattle and San Francisco on the coast. The comparative distances are: Seattle to Butte, Mont., 1,036 miles; St. Paul to Butte, 1,246 miles. Vancouver to Calgary, 642 miles; Winnipeg to Calgary, 840 miles.

The cost per 100 pounds of first-class freight from Vancouver to Calgary is 35-100c. per mile. From Winnipeg to Calgary, 20-100c. per mile. From Seattle to Butte, 24-100c. per mile, and from St. Paul to Butte, 20-100c. per mile.

The committee's report recommends the acceptance of the rates offered by the C.P.R. as the best possible to be obtained under the circumstances, though they enter a strong protest against the failure to give a readjustment of rates on the Crows Nest line similar to that on the main line, holding that existing inequalities unfairly shut the coast wholesale merchants out of a territory rightfully theirs.

A great consideration in the decision to accept the concession is found in the assurance of Mr. McInnes, general traffic manager of the C.P.R., who assured the committee that a similar cut would not be made from Winnipeg west. The reduction granted amounts to a 12½ per cent. advantage over former conditions. Merchants express themselves as fairly well satisfied with the concession, which improves their chances of working up trade, especially in Northern Alberta, in which territory they now meet the Winnipeg merchants on an even basis.

Many of the independent canners in eastern Canada have notified the trade that they will only be able to fill 70 per cent. of orders for tomatoes. The Consolidated Canners' Co. have made no announcement. Some think it is possible that they are continuing over-selling at the $1.05 price now quoted and will then turn down some early orders altogether. One or two of the independent canners will fill their orders in full. In corn there is a likelihood of a shortage when orders come to be filled, but other lines of vegetables are likely to be filled in full.

Discussing the situation which would have existed had the combine's terms been accepted, one wholesale man said to-day: "We could not do business at all under those conditions. They have not the goods we want, and in their circulars sent out, no proviso of any kind is inserted. There are some lines of fruit, for instance, which we have to get from California. In tomatoes, the situation is plain. The canners are unable to fill our orders as it is. We must look elsewhere for stock. My opinion is that the whole case could be summed up, as far as we are concerned, something like this—We could carry on our business without the combine and we could not do business at all if we conceded their demands."

Canned goods are coming forward freely now, as the western merchants require to take advantage of the lake and rail rate, and to do that orders must be rushed forward now. The same is true with heavy goods, such as salt.

Christmas groceries, such as English candied peels, nuts, seeded raisins, etc., are beginning to come forward. The outlook for Christmas trade is very fair, and the opinion expressed is that the business this year will show a satisfactory growth over last year's total.

All lines of dried fruits are in and prices remain as they opened, firm. The price of raisins is slightly advanced again.

Finer biscuits, such as Christie Brown's, are coming in, partly in anticipation of Christmas trade and partly as the lake and rail rate is taken advantage of to bring the stock forward. Candies are also being received.

In produce lines there are one or two apparent anomalies. While American hams are the stock here, and the price has gone up ¾c., though bacon remains steady; lard is being received in large quantities from eastern Canada. The price of this Canadian lard is low, a base figure of 8c. in tierces, equal to 9c. in smaller packages, at eastern points being the quotation.

Eggs are altogether from the east and fresh eastern case eggs are scarce, and hard to get. They are quoted here at 26 to 28c. now. The local fresh are retailing at 50c. per dozen. It is expected that pickled eggs will come in from the east soon to fill the demand.

Butter and cheese are in practically the same position as last week. Local creameries are selling to the trade at 30c, which is retailing at 35c. Northwest Territories Government creamery is quoted practically at 25c., though the figure is shaded somewhat yet. Dairy is not plentiful, and choice is scarce.

RICE AT ST. LOUIS EXPOSITION.

Louisiana has finally determined to make her rice exhibit at the St. Louis Fair surpass anything of the kind heretofore attempted by the Pelican State. A space of 2,000 feet has been assigned, inside of which will be installed a miniature rice field under irrigation, showing the plant, pumps, canals and ditches watering the same. The machinery employed in cultivating a rice crop, harvesting and threshing it, and finally the rice mill for cleaning, packing and preparing for market is to be in operation, in charge of a practical demonstrator.

Window and Interior Displays

Timely Hints and Suggestions.

THE style of window dressing usually adopted in this country is entirely different from that in England. It is not only that our ideas of an attractive window differ somewhat, but the class of goods consumed in this country requires a different arrangement.

In England there are a hundred pounds of cheese consumed to one in this country, and less fresh meat is obtainable. From this it is a common event for provision and grocery stores to cut up a great number of cheeses on certain days of the week and decorate the window with these. In this country the average grocery carries no more than two or three cheeses at a time, and only one is cut into. The prepared meats and bottled and canned goods which form so large a part of the English grocery store are always elaborately displayed in the window.

It is perhaps on account of the different class of goods demanded that the English style of arrangement differs so materially from ours. The general principle upon which we display goods is the flat or irregular shape, but the English grocer almost invariably starts his trim low at the front, and stacks up to a considerable height at the back. The result is a "stocky" rather than a select display. An immense quantity is contained in all their windows, while we consider that the tasty arrangement of a small quantity is much more effective. The English window, however, is not a breach of good taste or artistic work, but they arrive at results in a different way to what we do.

Park & Thompson, provision merchants, Toronto, almost always use the English method, and their windows are highly thought of, and, according to Mr. Thompson, are a profitable advertisement. The cut shows a recent trim in their pair of windows. One is a cheese arrangement, made up entirely of whole and cut Stilton cheeses and jars of cream cheese. By means of boxes the arrangement slopes up to the back after the English fashion.

In the other window is an assortment of cured meats carefully placed, and a side fixture of bottled goods, standing up four or five feet. On the back partition is a stack of pails of lard, and depending from the ceiling is a figure of a pig.

On the glass are pasted a few very realistic lithographs of cut meats, and some labels, while down the side triangular sign cards contain notices of the lines carried. A bar on the outside is hung with cured meats and fowl, and eggs are placed in the doorway.

The two windows between them show a fair inventory of all the goods carried, and yet are so arranged as to be in no way a breach of taste. The distinctly English tone, differing so much from the style generally seen in Canadian windows, forms one of the attractions of the display,

Comparing these figures with those of last year the shortage to Montreal this year is 10,489 puncheons and to Quebec 2,042 puncheons, being a total of 12,531 puncheons less than last year, or looking at it from another standpoint the total importations to these two points last year was 16,269 puncheons, and this year only 3,738 puncheons ; the quantity imported into the provinces is 2,350 puncheons in excess of last year, making a total shortage in the Dominion this year, as compared with last year, of about 11,000 puncheons. At it will be nearly six (6) months before any new crop Barbados molasses can arrive in Canada, it would look, judging by these figures, as if there was likely to be a great scarcity in this article about the Spring of the year.

The shortage and high price of Barbados is a matter of very considerable importance in Quebec and the Maritime Provinces, where, as is well known, the consumption is very large.

FLOUR AND CEREAL FOODS

Canadian Made Breakfast Foods.

OUR Vancouver correspondent writes complimenting us upon our Special Fall Number and especially upon the cereal department thereof. He says: "Many flattering remarks were made on the Fall Trade Number of 'The Canadian Grocer.' It attracted general attention. One gentleman was particularly struck with the advertisements of the various newer brands of Canadian-made breakfast foods.

"Why, you could have called it a Canadian Breakfast Food number very appropriately, merely from the attractive advertisements of that line of goods. I was much surprised, for though I am in the trade, I had no idea there were so many new names of breakfast foods which were 'Made in Canada.'"

"The Grocer" is gratified to hear this commendation of our cereal department. That Canada produces the finest cereals in the world is well known. As indicated by our correspondent, our readers are coming to realize that we also manufacture those cereals into the finest breakfast foods in the world.

Wheat Shortage in Russia.

According to statements made in the Russian newspapers there has been a very bad harvest and it will be necessary to purchase wheat abroad. There is great distress among the rural population, and many peasants will be forced to sell their cattle because of the lack of forage.

In the Province of Riazan the hay crop is two million quintals below that of last year. The harvest in Siberia is very bad. The new rye is found to be mixed with ergot, which has already had poisonous effects.

The Movement of Wheat.

THE reduction in the movement of grain since September 1, the beginning of the present crop year, up to and including October 31, amounts to nearly 2,131,000 bushels, according to figures posted in the grain exchange, and compiled by Chief Grain Inspector Horn, says The Winnipeg Telegram.

During the months of September and October of this year there was a total of 11,378 cars of wheat inspected at Winnipeg, compared with 13,509 cars during the same two months in 1902, and 12,419 cars in 1901.

LOWER GRADES.

Not only has the amount inspected shown a falling off, but the quality also is by no means equal to that of the two previous years. The extremely wet and unfavorable weather in August and September had a disastrous effect on grades and while last year 7,731 cars, or 57 per cent. of the total inspected graded 1 hard, this year only 349 cars, or exactly 3 per cent., reached the grade which has made Manitoba famous. No. 1 northern about holds its own, being but 560 cars short of last year, but 3 northern, which in former years totalled much less than either of the two superior grades, this season is more than three times as much as in 1902.

MAKE GOOD FLOUR.

While the hard grades show such a reduction from previous years, grain men assert that the milling quality of 2 and 3 northern grades is this year nearly as good as 1 hard and 1 northern. The great percentage of what would otherwise have graded 1 hard is reduced owing to its being slightly frosted, but it appears that this has not to any great extent injured its nutritive qualities as a bread maker.

At the same time it is to be noted that the grades which generally come under the designation of "sundry grades," are greater in quantity than last year, rejected, no grade and feed wheat making up a formidable proportion of the total inspected.

OTHER GRAINS.

In the other grains, oats, barley and flax, while the movement has been less than in former years, the quality holds well, except possibly barley, while flax arriving is of excellent quality and well up in quantity.

The following table gives the total amount of grain inspected during September and October in each of the two years, 1903 and 1902:

Grain—	1903	1902
Wheat	11,378,000	13,509,000
Oats	240,000	207,600
Flax	212,000	174,000
Barley	57,000	44,000
Speltz	1,000	2,000
Total	11,888,000	13,936,000

INSPECTION FIGURES.

The following table shows in detail the total number of cars of grain inspected during the two months of September and October in each of the years 1901, 1902, and 1903:

Milling in the Argentine.

MILLING, of Liverpool, states that Argentina can boast of having as fine mills as any country in the world. In Buenos Ayres alone there are several large and excellent plants. One of the best is the Molino Rio de la Plata, which stands by the side of the docks and was built and equipped last year in the space of six months. Its initial capacity was 45 sacks per hour, but a contract to double the capacity was recently awarded.

Another large milling concern is that of the Riachuelo Mill. This was built in 1889 and is now increasing its capacity from 20 to 40 sacks per hour. A silo granary to hold 240,000 bushels of grain is also being constructed, and other improvements are in progress.

Other mills in Buenos Ayres and district are: Weber & Stricker's Palermo Mills, Fisher & Weber's Central Mercado Mills at Barracasal-Sud, a city which adjoins Buenos Ayres, and Vattuone y Vignolo's Mills at Lucia. There are several others in the district which make up a fairly large total output.

The export flour trade of the country has now reached about 500,000 sacks annually. While this is not a large total, it must not be overlooked that in the past the country has had many serious set-backs because of internal political dissensions. It is possible that in the future Argentina flour may be a factor in the world's markets.

Estimates of Western Crops.

The Northwest Grain Dealers' Association have issued the following estimates of the wheat and grain crop of 1903 for Manitoba and the Northwest Territories: Wheat, 3,123,663 acres, at 16.1 per acre, 50,290,974 bushels; oats, 1,101,333 acres, at 36.5 per acre, 40,198,654 bushels; barley, 381,135 acres, at 29.7 per acre, 11,319,709 bushels; flax, 64,639 acres, at 9 per acre, 581,751 bushels.

Strong and Weak Flours.

IT may safely be asserted that while some flour is spoiled in the process of manufacture, says The American Miller, a far greater amount is spoiled in the baking, because the baker does not understand the peculiarities of the particular flour being used.

Any one who has had even a limited experience knows that there is a marked difference in the fermentation of various doughs. Some will work much faster than others and if not taken at the proper time will not make a good bread. While these fast-working flours will, with care, produce a good loaf, any abuse will result in flat, coarse-grained, dark-colored bread.

To illustrate this it is only necessary to take a strong and a weak flour and work them under the same conditions. When due care is exercised in the case of both flours the result will be the same, good bread. But treat the flours with the same ferments and give them the same amount of work, neglecting, however, some little detail. For instance, have the temperature of the liquor used in making the dough a few degrees too high, or allow the dough to stand in the pans a little too long before being placed in the oven. The result will be that the bread from the strong flour will be as good as when baked under perfect conditions, while that from the weak flour will be poor, coarse and dark.

Dough made from strong flour will, during the fermentation process, rise up and "drop" and rise again a second and even a third time, but dough from a weak flour will not rise again if allowed to drop once. It is evident, therefore, that weak flours require very careful handling.

Reciprocity with Canada.

AT the seventh annual convention of The Grain Dealers' National Association of the United States, held at Milwaukee recently, Theodore Knappen addressed the delegates upon "Reciprocity with Canada," dwelling at length upon the growth and development of Canada, and saying that free, or freer, trade in natural production should be a matter of mutual convenience and benefit, rather than of trade invasion of each country by the products of the other. Mr. Knappen pointed out that the problem of trade relations with Canada was entirely different from that of such relations with any other country, and contended that the geographical conditions were such as to make free coal, free lumber, and perhaps free grain almost a necessity. He said it was a movement which would benefit the whole country.

These views were heartily indorsed by J. L. McCaul, of Minneapolis, who emphasized the fact that the reciprocity movement was not a sectional one, and that reciprocity with Canada would mean an advance of from five to ten cents a bushel for American wheat, and that it would also bring up the grade of flour manufactured in that country.

Big Yields of Wheat.

Officer Wolfe, of the immigration staff, tells The Winnipeg Telegram that he saw Fall wheat thresh 52 bushels to the acre at Macleod. The crop is also very good in the vicinity of Wolseley and adjoining towns, one tract of 30 acres returning 1,000 bushels of machine measure, or 1,200 bushels ordinary measure. Near Edmonton, Officer Wolfe met a farmer named Staples who came into that country five years ago bearing a debt of $1,000; now he is rated at $10,000. He owns 520 acres of land, 40 head of cattle and nine horses. Staples went in mostly for mixed farming.

The Grain Insurance Dispute.

THE railroads and the underwriters have not yet settled their dispute over the doubling of insurance rates on grain stored at Fort William and Port Arthur. The companies have submitted to the increased rate so far as the ordinary elevators are concerned, but up to date they have refused to insure grain stored in the C.P.R. steel elevator at Fort William or the C.N.R. tile elevator at Port Arthur.

The banks are interested in the matter, and are at present taking the case up. Grain men who, previous to the arrangement with the railway companies regarding insurance, wished to raise money on grain stored in these elevators, were asked by the banks to produce their insurance policies. As the railways are now doing the insuring and refuse to insure grain in the steel and tile elevators at Fort William and Port Arthur respectively, in the regular line companies, it follows that the owner of grain stored therein is unable to produce the policy and can merely furnish the bill of lading showing the promise of the railways to put up for any loss through fire.

The question was, would the banks accept such bill of lading in lieu of the ordinary policy heretofore demanded? The Bankers' Association now has the matter under consideration, but in the meantime banks in Winnipeg have decided to take the bill of lading as security, pending the decision of the head offices.

To Corner Wheat.

A plan to corner the St. Louis December wheat market by the buying of all the possible insurance on the wheat in elevators, both on the east side and in that city is outlined in information given to the Republic by insurance men.

Corwin H. Spencer, John T. Milliken, Thomas Atkin, and Herman Kuehn are mentioned as the leaders in the movement which was begun last September.

Of the 120 insurance companies taking business in St. Louis it is said that every one of them has written policies about $3,500,000.

The insurance far exceeds the visible supply in the elevators, but by taking out insurance for the full capacity of the warehouses at the marginal price of wheat, the bulls hope to make it impossible for outsiders to store their grain which would preclude the insuring of it, and necessarily prevent the borrowing of money on the part of the shorts who would be practically frozen out of the market.

Hand Mangled.

A. W. Maguire, Hamilton, flour and feed merchant, met with a very painful accident on Friday last. He was working with one of the machines when in some manner his hand became entangled in the mechanism, and before it was stopped his hand was seriously mangled. He was removed to St. Joseph's Hospital, and it is considered likely that the hand will have to be amputated.

Kansas Luck.

The latest hard luck story from Kansas is to the effect that farmers there hauling their grain to the elevators have found them full and have been compelled to dump the grain on the ground to rot. It is estimated that from the 4,000,000 bushels harvested, 500,000 will be lost.

Cereal Notes.

The Ogilvie Flour Mills Co. will build a mill on Mill street, Montreal, to cost $25,000.

The flour mills of Minneapolis are gradually starting again, and the trouble has assumed a more agreeable aspect.

W. R. McInnes, freight traffic manager of the C.P.R. expects to see a vastly increased grain acreage in the West next year.

Mr. R. F. McDonald, who conducts the "Scotch Bakery" in Vancouver, B.C., took five first prizes at the Westminster fair this Fall.

October shipments of western grain reported at Montreal were 966,000 bushels, as compared with 886,000 for the same month last year.

Over forty million bushels of wheat can be stored west of Port Arthur. The C. P.R. capacity is 32,555,000 bushels, and the Canadian Northern 7,570,000.

Messrs. Currie, Van Ostrand and Powell, of Toronto, have bought out The Battle Creek Health Food Co., of London, and will continue the business under the same name.

Ottawa Merchants' Trip to New York.

THE most eventful and most enjoyable pleasure trip in the history of The Ottawa Retail Grocers' Association took place when a party numbering 26, composed of business men and a few friends, availed themselves of the invitation extended to them by the "Clique Tourists," of New York and Brooklyn, to visit their city on October 28 and 29.

The Ottawa party consisted of Ex.-Ald. G. W. Shouldis, chairman and manager; Ald. Rosenthal, Ald. Plouffe, G. W. Hunt, Wm. York, C. J. Provost, president Retail Grocers' Association; J. K. Paisley, Ex.-Ald. B. Slinn, J. N. McIntosh, H. H. Leggatt, W. R. Cummings, R. G. Harris, E. Bambrick, J. Graham, J. C. Scott, R. Kennedy, H. W. Booth, J. C. O'Keefe, R. Tunnoch, J. Hawken, C. Dunlop, Chas. Sutherland, H. C. Ellis, secretary Retail Grocers' Association, and party; M. Hugh Convery, Thos. J. Potter and a Mr. Box, of Montreal, joined the Ottawans at Coteau.

A private Pullman was secured which aided in making the journey to New York a pleasant one; such a jolly time was spent that the distance seemed too short.

Mr. Frank W. Meyer, who is manager of the New York clique, boarded the train just outside of the city and presented

G. W. Shouldis, Chairman and Manager of Party.

G. W. Hunt, Vice-Chairman of Party.

each Canadian with an American emblem which, pinned alongside of the Canadian maple leaf with the Ottawa colors attached, made a pleasing effect.

The train pulled into the Grand Central depot about one hour and a quarter late. Rooms were secured at the Grand Union hotel, 42nd street, breakfast was partaken of immediately, and when over, Mr. Meyer, with his committee, composed of Mr. Geo. H. Tiemeyer, president New York and Brooklyn Grocers; Henry Minners, secretary of same organization; Hon. James McInnis, Ald. Geo. L. Wilson, Chas. Volbnier, E. Corbert, Chas. Baessier, Robt. Steele, of The National Biscuit Co., Ellwood Hanson and Mr. L. J. Callanan, one of New York's oldest and most respected grocers, took a special car direct to the down town district. The first place visited was the World building, 28 storeys high, where a panoramic view of the city was had. The next place visited was the Syndicate building, another sky-scraper, 33 storeys high. An appointment at 12.30 with Mayor Seth Low brought the party to the city hall, where each one was introduced to His Worship, who, in a few well-chosen remarks, extended the Canadians a glad welcome and wished them an enjoyable and profitable time while guests in the city. In the absence of Mayor Cook, of Ottawa, Ald. Rosenthal replied, thanking New York's Mayor, whom he said he considered it a great honor to have met.

Chas. J. Provost, President Ottawa Retail Grocers' Association.

The party were then escorted to the "Hardware Club," one of the most exclusive clubs of the city, where an elaborate luncheon was partaken of.

After luncheon was over the party had the choice of a drive over Brooklyn bridge, or the privilege of walking. Most of the boys walked. On the Brooklyn side a parlor car for sight-seeing was in waiting, laden with refreshments and good cigars. It was boarded and the first stop made was at the city hall of Brooklyn, where some of the officials were met. The next stop was at the large departmental store of Abraham & Strauss, which was gone through from top to bottom.

The car was again boarded and a trip taken to Coney Island, for the purpose of viewing the wide, wide ocean—which was new to a good many. The Summer hotels were all closed, but the magnitude of everything was there and an idea of what goes on during the Summer season could be had.

A visit to some of the leading dancing halls which were still open was made and the party started again for Mr. Meyer's home in Flatbush, a suburb of Brooklyn. Mr. and Mrs. Meyer received the party at their house, which is an ideal home, the pride of Mr. Meyer and his lovely wife. Light refreshments were served after which a presentation was made to Mrs. Meyer, by the Ottawa merchants, of a set of solid silver carvers.

The next event of the day was a banquet at the Cortelyou Clubhouse, given by Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Meyer. The menu card was gotten up very tastefully, with the American and Canadian flags entwined on the front cover, while on the back was a picture of the "Royal Shanty," at Rockliffe, which was visited by the Clique Tourists when in Ottawa last June.

After the toast list, which was responded to by Henry Meyer, the Hon. Jas. H. McInnes, ex-Ald. Shouldis, and others, the party broke up with three cheers for Mr. and Mrs. Meyer and the singing of God Save the King and The Star Spangled Banner.

Thursday morning at 9 a.m. began another day's entertainment as pleasant as already enjoyed. A sight-seeing automobile, which held 35, was in waiting at the hotel, and after all-aboard was sounded, we started to visit the great many interesting points of the city. The Bowery, Chinatown, Brooklyn Bridge, Fish Market, Wall Street, Sub-Treasury, Castle Garden, Rubber Neck Row, Broad Street, Trinity Church, etc., were pointed out.

A stop was made at Mr. L. J. Callaman's grocery store, where the proprietor took the grocers in the party through and explained his mode of doing business.

Ald. Rosenthal, who represented Mayor Cook with Party.

H. C. Ellis, Secretary of Party.

The auto. trip wound up at The National Biscuit Co.'s works, where the party were introduced to Mr. Gowan, the manager, who in a short address, welcomed them and invited them to luncheon in the company's dining-room before going through the factory.

A fast trip was made to the hotel to prepare for the banquet, which took place that evening in Saengerbund Hall, Brooklyn. It was in the form of a dinner and reception of the Clique Tourists in honor of the Canadians present. The toast list was as follows: Geo. H. Tiemeyer, president of the Clique Tourists—

Welcome; Frank W. Meyer,—Introductory; Henry G. Meyer,—Fond Reminiscences; Fred Cook,—City of Ottawa,—Mayor of Ottawa, Canada; responded to by ex-Ald. Shouldis; Hon. J. H. McInnes,—City of New York; Henry Minners,—Clique Tourists; A. W. Pfluger,—Manhattan; L. J. Callanan,—The Ladies; B. Bischoff,—Our Borough.

A short programme was given in the auditorium of the building, followed by dancing, which was indulged in until about 2 a.m., when the party broke up, after having spent a most enjoyable time. During the evening a presentation was made to Mr. Hugh Convery, manager of Fleischmann & Co., of Montreal, of a travelling valise from the ladies of the Clique Tourists. Mr. Convery was among those responsible to a large extent for having the New York grocers visit Ottawa last June, and they were so favorably impressed that they are coming about 300 strong next year.

Most of the Ottawans stayed in New York until Sunday night and took in what was left to be seen. Mr. F. W. Meyers still showed his great hospitality in having those he could get ahold of take dinner with him at his own house.

A meeting was called for Thursday in the Grocers' Room to wind up the financial part of the trip and take immediate steps to arrange an entertainment for next season, when it is hoped to have the Clique Tourists visit Ottawa again.

MONTREAL TRAVELLERS.

At a meeting of members of The Dominion Commercial Travellers' Association, of Montreal, which will be held in the rooms of the association, Board of Trade Building, at eight o'clock on Saturday evening, November 14, 1903, nomination of officers for the ensuing year will take place.

Mr. Jas. Robinson, wholesale shoe merchant, who served the association as director, vice-president and president, several times elected by acclamation, will be nominated to fill the position of treasurer.

Mr. James S. N. Dougall, of McCaskill, Dougall & Co., varnish manufacturers, Montreal, who served the association as director and treasurer, several times elected by acclamation, and who has been treasurer for the last three years, will be nominated as president.

Both Mr. Dougall and Mr. Robinson have been presented with nomination papers signed by a great number of the members, including nearly all past presidents of the association.

Both the above gentlemen, after considering the representative character of requisition, have consented to accept nominations.

TORONTO RETAIL GROCERS.

The Retail Grocers' Association of Toronto met in St. George's Hall Monday night with President David Bell in the chair, and a fair representation of the members present.

After approving the minutes the application of Mr. Riley for membership was accepted on the motion of Messrs. Snow and Van Loan.

A letter was read from The "Force" Food Co. acknowledging the receipt of the association's communication in which complaint was made that The T. Eaton Co. were selling "Force" at 10c. per package. The "Force" people regretted the fact, but declared themselves powerless in the matter. They sold only to and through the wholesale trade, and it would be impossible for them to prevent any person from obtaining "Force" and selling it below cost if he chose so to do. The letter was received.

On motion of Messrs. Van Loan and Johnston, Mr. Panter, who is retiring from business, was made an honorary member.

The Executive recommended that $10 be granted the Excursion Committee in re-embursement of expenses incurred in going to the Falls to arrange the excursion. The recommendation was adopted on the motion of Messrs. Snow and Clarke.

The question of the annual "At Home" was next brought up. After some little discussion it was decided to again hold the "At Home," the date probably some time in February, and the further details to be left to the Executive Committee with power.

Under general topics the discussion turned on the bakers' agreement and the price of bread. Complaint was made that the agreement was not lived up to and that large loaves were being sold at lest than 10c. A more definite complaint was the clause in the agreement allowing families using 15 large loaves per week to get bread on the wholesale basis at 8c. per large loaf. A committee composed of President Bell, Vice-President Johnston and Treasurer Schoales was appointed to interview the master bakers and obtain their views.

The meeting then adjourned.

A PROSPEROUS SEASON.

Purnell, Webb & Co., of Bristol, England, have had a record season for the sale of their pure malt vinegars in the Dominion, ending up with the two largest orders they have ever received from Canadian buyers. Between October 19 and 26 they received orders for 4,150 gallons, distributed between Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver, and a large proportion of their increased trade has been done with new buyers. They look forward with great confidence to a further development of trade next year, and admit with the greatest pleasure that they owe much of their success to the advertising they have done in THE CANADIAN GROCER.

THE OFFICE

DEVOTED TO THE OFFICE STAFFS OF BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS

MODERN BUSINESS METHODS.

By Will Payne.

I ONCE called on the comptroller of a very important corporation to find out the amounts of certain payments, which had been made to the corporation quarterly during several years by one of its licensees. The comptroller summoned a clerk and directed that the information be given me. The clerk and I retired to the outer office and a season of trouble ensued. There was a more or less vague theory that the payments should appear on the cash book, but the cash book, upon examination, failed miserably to support this theory. Some payments were there and some were not. My friend scratched his head, and finally brightened up with the idea that a fellow-clerk, who knew all about that particular business, would return to the office next day. I called again the next day and was so fortunate as to get the ear of the expert, but the expert himself went to sea over the lapses of the cash book. The payments had surely been made and there was surely somewhere or other something or other which would disclose them. In the general distress I was invited to try my luck the next day. I did so. It was remembered that a statement from the licensee accompanied the payment, and that theoretically these statements were filed away. A vault, which from my view outside the railing seemed to be mostly dust and waste paper heaps, was valiantly explored, and, in the course of time, some rumpled sheets were produced which contained the desired data. So at the cost of much time and soiled linen the information was forthcoming. The same corporation, in one of its many departments, acts as the trustee of funds contributed by hundreds of thousands of persons. Not long after my experience it was discovered that the trust funds were hopelessly confused. Receipts had been credited and payments charged with a haphazard disregard for accuracy which perhaps could not have been matched elsewhere outside of comic opera. The corporation was actually compelled to suspend all payments, to the vast disadvantage of its clients, and to pay a firm of expert accountants $65,000 to write a new set of books.

You wish to know the name of this important corporation which did business with so wonderful a lack of system? It is the City of Chicago.

As a matter of course, any private enterprise that attempted to get on with such a lack of system would have found itself in a receiver's hands long ago.

First and last, system is the machinery by which the business moves, and the business simply cannot move beyond its machinery.

A CRITERION.

No doubt the best test of any particular business undertaking is a test of its system. If you go into an office, as in the melancholy case I have cited, and find that nobody knows just where anything is to be found, you are very safe in guessing that the concern is in a poor way. Take the most prosperous concern you know, and you may be quite sure that any item of any importance will be forthcoming at the touch of a button. I have had considerable opportunity of applying this test and have never known it to fail. The difference between a successful management and an unsuccessful one may be pretty accurately gauged by the ability, through a proper system, to at once command any special information of whatever sort that is of real importance. You are pretty safe in forming final conclusions according to whether the furnishing of any particular information is a matter of scratching the head and guessing that somebody else possibly knows something about it and of laboriously searching records and files that fail to "pan out," or whether it is a matter of touching a button and having the item laid on the desk. So in a general way the measure of a manager's capacity lies in his ability to develop the right system.

Many men are able enough within the narrow limits of their own personal, bodily powers—that is, they can do well whatever comes within the touch of their own fingers or directly under their own eyes, and they may be very successful in the small way which this limitation implies. But they lack the higher ability to devise a machine for other hands to operate. In short, they cannot make a system, and so they cannot be successful on a large scale. Broadly speaking, the man who is most successful is he who has the greatest capacity for making a machine or developing a system.

ELIMINATION OF PERSONAL SUPERVISION.

One may venture upon a personal illustration. There were several men in the meat-packing trade in the earlier days than whom there was none abler so far as concerns what they could do with their own hands—that is, through their own immediate, personal supervision. Nobody could get more out of a hog or a steer; nobody knew the provision trade any better. But as the meat-packing industry developed possibilities of enormous expansion these men and their concerns were left far to the rear, because they had a few great competitors who, in addition to the purely personal capacity, had the higher capacity to create a system that would employ the energy of scores of subordinates. These great competitors could operate a dozen plants as well as one, do a business of $200,000,000 a year as well as the personally conducted business of a tenth of that. And the really big business man appreciates this power of creating a system as highly as it deserves.

Not long ago I happened to hear A boasting to B of the ability of his general manager; his tremendous industry—he spent 12 hours a day at the plant and always came down of a Sunday; his indefatigable loyalty—why, three of their special cars were missing and the manager tramped around the freight yards two days until he found them. The cruel B advised his friend to get a new manager. "If he has to spend 12 hours a day and Sundays at the office and tramp around looking for his cars he isn't up to his job," said B. He recognized that the manager was unable to create a proper system, and if there be no proper system any one man's energy amounts to little. Mere human energy is cheaper than steam horsepower. If it is a matter of energy only you might as well praise a man for running upstairs instead of taking the elevator.

A young man runs from the bank, dodges a cab, sprints across the bows of an automobile, flings himself on a street car and catches his breath. He is a praiseworthy young man, but in fact he is a messenger, receiving $25 a month and worth no more at present. In a corner of the bank, in a very comfortable room, a man sits at a desk, doing nothing much except to talk at ease with his callers and, in the intervals, glance over a balance sheet, ring for a subordinate, give a few directions—all in a leisurely, unrumpled sort of way. He receives $30,000 a year, and is very likely worth double that. He has a system and knows how to control the energy of a hundred or five hundred other men thereby.

It is a commonplace that this is not the day of the small concern. Business is coalescing in larger and larger units, bigger and bigger machines, which means steadily increasing need of perfection in the system and greater and greater prizes for the man who has the ability to develop the right system.—System.

HOW A BUSINESS WAS SAVED.

A CERTAIN manufacturing concern in the West found itself doing a large business. It was very busy and apparently was making great strides in securing for its product a large place in public favor. Among those holding a subordinate executive position was a keen young man who was not easily satisfied by exterior appearances, but had the digging habit.

"You are doing lots of business," he told his superior. "Almost every week you are adding more help to the office force; your correspondence is steadily increasing, and apparently the business is right on the crest of the prosperity wave. But if you will overhaul everything and find out just where you stand, I'll miss my guess if you are really making substantial headway or satisfactory profits."

This rather startled the managers of the business, but the young man was so much in earnest that a careful and thorough examination into the affairs of the enterprise was made.

It verified every prophecy that the young "kicker" had made.

"Now," he continued, "I'm convinced that the leakage of profits is in the very department which is the pet and pride of the house—the one that brings the most correspondence, that calls for the most of the new help, that 'keeps things doing' and gives the place the busiest appearance."

"Nonsense!" replied the manager. "You were right on the general situation. But this time you are wrong."

"But," insisted the digger, "I'll tell you right now that of the seven methods you are using to put your goods on the market the one which you think the best is the very one that is cutting down your profits. Call in an expert who is able to sift this matter right down to a finish and you'll find I'm right."

This was done, with the result which verified to the letter the prediction of the young man.

TENGWALL LOOSE LEAF BINDERS.

THE "Tengwall" is one of the most practical binders on the market for all kinds of loose leaf sheets. It consists of covers in various bindings, with a hinged or divided back, which opens on pressing a thumb-spring. This is a most ingenious device. By a simple pressing of the thumb a leaf can be inserted or taken out at any opening. Curved metal prongs are securely fastened to the back, one pair on each side. On closing the covers, the back locks automatically. The advantage of the Tengwall idea is easily seen: loose sheets and business papers of all kinds can be filed securely, yet a single sheet can be removed from or inserted in any part of the file instantly, without disturbing the remaining sheets. Hart & Riddell, Toronto, are the Canadian manufacturers. They have issued handsome illustrated catalogues, which will be sent on request.

DEAD LETTERS.

"THE letter that never came" isn't giving half so much trouble to the world as the letter which did come, but contained no address to enable the recipient to reply to it.

Every large mail-order house receives these letters by the score, and nearly always they contain money. Some firms maintain a regular staff of handwriting experts to discover from whence the letters come, and though they are largely successful, yet there remains an average of 25 per cent. of the number unidentified.

Recently several of the large concerns in Chicago distributed a total of $25,000 to local charities as a disposition of the funds accumulated from letters which had become "dead" through the carelessness or ignorance of writers all over the country.

Often a first letter of this character, necessarily left unanswered, will be followed by several others from the same source, all indignantly complaining, but never giving a hint of identity or location which would insure the answer. Here is one specimen, marked by extreme moderation:

"Gents,—What are you going to do about my order for which I sent you 90c. last month aint you got any flat iron if so what do you say so fer in the catalog. Dont send anything to the postmaster, cause he steals everything he always says they aint no mail fer me."

Oftener the writers employ phraseology that is more picturesque than courteous.

All of which serves to remind us to be very careful indeed in our corresponding moments to give some plain signs as to our habitation and family cognomen.

DO YOU WORK FOR ANOTHER?

What is your object in working?

What is your employer's object in hiring you?

A frank answer and conclusion in regard to these two questions will put you square with yourself, and lead to a change of attitude, perhaps.

First, do you work for the pleasure of it, from a sense of duty, or "because you need the money?"

It should be obvious to all (but it isn't!) that real happiness lies in work well done. We should then, equally of course, work from a love of work, and to accomplish unselfish purposes. Incidentally "the servant is worthy of his hire"—and will get it. All the surer will he get it, and the more, if this be his attitude rather than that other which looks to the salary and the week's end as the primary objects.

Your employer gladly hires you when your work yields him a profit; and when it doesn't—and he finds it out—your name is among the missing of that business household, and properly. He must handle his workers as he does other materials; and on each must realize a profitable difference between cost and selling price. The great laws of commerce are back of this simple truth, and we should accept the consequences, and adopt the means to properly meet the case: a decision to give value, to try to accomplish the most for our employers irrespective of salary, and to hold fast to faith in the happiness produced by "the sweat of the brow."

Tobaccos, Cigars, and Smokers' Accessories

A DEPARTMENT FOR RETAIL MERCHANTS.

Look to Your Smokers' Department.

A WELL-BALANCED tobacco department will include pipes and cigars. Of course nowadays there are very few groceries that do not carry the fragrant herb in plug and package form, and it is possible that some may not consider it profitable to go into tobacco any more extensively. But is this belief well founded?

It depends largely on circumstances, and at some seasons of the year it might be a matter of doubt, but with the holidays coming on this doubt vanishes. At this season people are more free with their money, and are more than ordinarily inclined to indulge in the luxury of a new pipe or a box of cigars. There is, moreover, the good old custom of making gifts at Christmas time that should be considered. A box of cigars or a well-turned pipe, sent with the compliments of the season, is a graceful method of discharging a social obligation or repaying any other favor. When the large proportion of men who smoke is thought of, to any of whom such a gift would be welcome, the opening in this line will not appear insignificent.

In stocking cigars for the holiday trade the small boxes put up for just this purpose should not be overlooked, and by adding a few good reliable lines a connection may be built up in the next couple of months that will prove a very pretty source of revenue subsequently.

In regard to pipes, as noted in last week's issue, jobbers are now putting up assorted lots for the grocer who is just beginning or who handles them in a small way. It is not necessary therefore to invest a very considerable sum of money in order to stock a very respectable little tobacco department.

It should always be remembered that tobacco and cigars require practically no extra help. The sale is a matter of but a few seconds or minutes at the most, and the profit, especially on pipes and the better class of cigars, is very inviting.

The grocer should have this profit rather than the druggist or barber, who in many places are making a strong bid for it.

London Tips.

London was favored with a visit some days since from Mr. Oscar Hammerstein, the well-known theatrical manager of New York. In addition to Mr. Hammerstein's numerous theatrical enterprises he is the inventor of a machine for the manufacturing of cigars, which is pronounced by those who have seen it and tested it to be the acme of perfection, it being impossible to distinguish the machine-made cigar from that turned out by hand, while of course the cost of production is very materially reduced. It is not known positively that Mr. Hammerstein will succeed in placing any of his machines in this city, but his visit here at all in connection with them is an indication that the manufacturers, or at least some of them, are preparing to get even with the strike of employes of some months since. Since returning to New York Mr. Hammerstein has been most seriously ill, having been threatened with an attack of appendicitis, but is happily now quite recovered.

October was a busy month with all our manufacturers, being for the most of them largely in excess of the same month last year as regards output.

turing tobacco in the country for 35 years, the Government reserving to itself the right of terminating the concession at the end of the sixteenth year on giving two years' notice. The Government in the same year also contracted with the tobacco company a loan for £9,950,000 ($48,456,500), and these bonds, carrying interest at the rate of 4½ per cent. per annum, have been circulated; they are absolutely guaranteed by the company, while they constitute a direct charge upon the state. It has been stated in Lisbon by The Diario de Noticias that the Government has recently redeemed a large block of railway debentures, which it had deposited with the tobacco company as security for an advance of 23,700,000 francs ($4,574,100), "required to pay off the Delagoa Bay indemnity," and the inference is that the Government is thinking of exercising its option to cancel the concession in 1907. — Western Tobacco Journal.

Wives for Tobacco.

In the early history of Virginia and Maryland tobacco was by all odds the most important crop, and it was even possible at times to secure a wife in exchange for a moderate amount of tobacco, as in later days in the West a squaw could be of whisky. In 1732, at Jamestown, obtained in exchange for a small amount tobacco was made a legal tender for all debts, including customs. In about a dozen years after the founding of Jamestown by Captain John Smith, an English nobleman, Sir Edwin Sandys brought over with a shipload of supplies 90 young English maids, who, immediately upon their arrival, were wooed and married by the colonists, each being paid for at the rate of "120 pounds of good tobacco." As late as 1777 the annual poll-tax of Baltimore City and County was fixed at 172 pounds of tobacco. Tobacco, it is well known, was a native Indian crop in America before the advent of Columbus.

Mexico's Exports.

The exportation of tobacco from Mexico is increasing rapidly, and is keeping pace with increasing production. In six months after planting the crop can be gathered and sold and the returns received. A very large part of the last crop was shipped to England, France, Spain and Belgium from the Vera Cruz and Tobasco plantations. The tobacco prospects of Mexico, in fact, are becoming daily more and more satisfactory and promising.

Failure of the Tobacco Crop in Hanover.

Owing to the severe hailstorms in the Eichsfeld district of the Province of Hanover during the past Summer, the tobacco crop has been almost entirely destroyed, writes B. H. Warner, jr., U.S. Consul, Leipzig, Germany. Many of the farmers—in order to avoid the payment of the production tax—have waived all claims to their tobacco crops. At the fair which was held at Solingen last Fall over 40,000 marks' ($9,520) worth of tobacco was sold; this year, however, hardly a pound will be even offered for sale. As the tobacco crop was not insured, the farmers have sustained very considerable losses.

Did the Ancients Smoke?

The frequency with which old pipes made of clay, wood and metal have been found in England, Ireland, Germany, Switzerland and France, has led archaeologists to the belief that the ancients may have smoked. The belief receives some color from passages in ancient authors. Herodotus remarks that the inhabitants of the Araxes islands, supposed to be the modern Volga, "were wont to throw piles of fruit on a fire and then to inhale the vapor, with the result that they became as drunk as ever the Greeks became after drinking wine, and the more fruit they threw on the fire the more drunk they became." Pomponius Mela talks in a similar strain of certain Thracian tribes. Pliny asserts that the vapor of plants was used to cure diseases, and says that in some instances it was even inhaled through a tube.

Cigar Counter Philosophy.

Arguments between sellers and buyers are invariably business killers, at least so far as the seller is concerned.

A buyer must be accorded every courtesy, provided the seller expects to do business with him. Friction will sometimes occur, but no matter what the cause, hot-shot should never be fired by the seller of goods.

A sarcastic tongue in a salesman may be likened to a two edged sword that cuts deeply in many directions. It kills customers, slashes profits, and eventually cuts his own throat.

A smiling face and an affable manner will always win the day and make friends. This may be said to be the secret of success of the man behind the counter.

A cigar drummer shot a business man who objected to his flirting with his stenographer. There are certain rights and privileges that must not be denied to drummers—such, it would seem, is the unwritten law.

you are industrious you practically know what dollar bills are worth a foot; we all do, therefore, like to buy the BEST goods at the lowest possible figures. Well, here are some of them in the Show Case line: A square front Gem Case in Oak or Cherry, 3-ft. long, 24-in. wide, 14-in. high, securely boxed for $5.50, or a 4-ft. one, same style, height and width for $7.00 CASH WITH ORDER, f.o.b. Toronto.

These are splendid cases for the money, and just the thing for displaying Cigars or Confectionery, etc. Don't hesitate, don't fail to order at once as we have only about 20 of them left over from last Winter's stock that we are clearing out at the above ridiculously LOW price, which is a bargain SNAP. The goods are RIGHT, the price is AWAY DOWN. Regularly they are sold at $7.50 and $10.00 each.

Tobacco Notes.

The W. H. Steele Co., Scott street, Toronto, report their pipe business as largely in excess of that of former years.

The Horrocks Co., Toronto, secured a bronze medal for their very attractive display of tobaccos at the Dominion Exhibition.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. O. Youngheart, formerly of Toronto, have taken up their residence at 1062 Dorchester street, Montreal.

It will be noticed by reference to our advertising columns that a pipe department in connection with the sale of tobacco is being urged upon grocers. The special offer made last week and repeated this week by W. B. Reid Co. is worthy of every grocer's attention.

DEPARTMENT OF ADVERTISING SUGGESTION AND CRITICISM

Edited by
W. Arthur Lydiatt,
TORONTO.

NOTE—Herein are discussed the principles and practice of advertising. Subscribers are invited to send Mr. Lydiatt specimens of their newspaper and other advertising, for the purpose of review in this department. Address care of Department of Advertising THE CANADIAN GROCER.

Don't Neglect Things. When you Receive a Business Letter that Requires an Answer, Acknowledge its Receipt at Once, and Answer it at your Earliest Opportunity.

THERE is nothing so annoying to me as that very common occurrence—the absence of any reply—or even acknowledgment—to letters I have written. Nor do I think that I am the only one to experience it.

Just try the shoe on yourself. Suppose a customer came into your store and you obligingly waited on her to see wherein you could be of service to her; you inquired if she would like to have some of this or that—remarking that so-and-so was very nice—imagine her ignoring your presence altogether and paying no attention to what you said. What would you think of it?

Then think of the manufacturer, wholesaler or other business man addressing you, and question whether or not you are justified in altogether ignoring your business correspondents.

This does not pertain to advertising—and yet it does. Anything that indicates the manner in which you conduct your business affairs is either good or bad advertising for you, and most retailers need the kind of advertising that commands the respect of those from whom they buy and with whom they deal as much as any other kind of advertising.

Give all sides of your business proper attention—your every action gives you some kind of advertising, and whether it is favorable or unfavorable to the extension of your business depends entirely on yourself.

It only requires a few minutes to attend to your correspondence when it is received, and in the long run you'll find it well worth your while to be courteous to all who approach you in a business way.

Someone under the name of A. L. Bogan has written a few rhyming lines in an endeavor to immortalize the ad.-man, and a correspondent sends them to me with the comment: "There is no poetry in an ad. except the dollars that are glinting through every line."

I'll pass it on to you with this remark: There is seldom "cent"-iment in the poetic advertisement, and none of it is very "touching" unless it reaches the pockets. They say there is not much sentiment in business. There usually is in poetry. There's the clash.

SOMETHING AD-DITIONAL.

Who couldn't sing of birds and trees;
Of sun and moon and stars?
Who couldn't write of far-off climes,
Or voyages to Mars?
But it's quite a different story
Quoting facts, not fancy fads,
And cloaking them with beauty
Like
The man
Who writes
The ads.

Who couldn't weave a romance
Of kings and queens and knights;
Of courtiers brave and gallant;
Of intrigues and of fights?
But it's hard to talk of shoe-strings,
Patent pills and liver pads,
With the fascinating interest
Of
The man
Who writes
The ads.

A Flour Sale at Bradley's

Choice Family Flour { 42c. per sack. $1.65 per cwt.

To-morrow (Saturday), the Bradley store places on sale a special purchase of five tons of choice family flour. This is a timely sale and demonstrates the forethought of this store. At present, when farmers, millers and storekeepers are talking about "dollar wheat" the housekeepers are talking about "dollar wheat" the housekeeper needs to take a peep into the future and think about "winter bread." With a good supply of flour in the pantry "dollar wheat" won't worry you.

Here is your chance to provide for winter and save money as well. At our special sale price you save 8c. per sack or 35c. per cwt. on present regular prices—a splendid bargain even if there were no possibility of higher prices.

Of course every special sale has a reason and this is no exception. A miller in a nearby town was forced to give up business. The flour on hand had to be sold. The purchaser knowing the distributing power of the Bradley store offered us the entire lot in shape for retail selling—We bought.

Instead of holding for higher prices you share the profits of our purchase to-morrow.

The quality is there. The flour has been tested before being offered for sale.

Buy to-morrow. Next week there may be none left.

Delivered to any part of the city, Merritton, Thorold or Port Dalhousie. Mail and telephone orders will be promptly filled.

Advertising Deeds.

The announcement of the advertising competition made a few weeks ago hardly brought as many entries as I had expected. To be sure, the prize money wouldn't pay many advertising bills, but it strikes me it would be worth while entering an ad. in the competition even though no prizes were offered. Surely there are a number of grocer readers who consider that they are doing fairly good advertising, and here I am almost begging the opportunity to help them all to do better advertising. Curious state of affairs, isn't it?

Some half dozen entries came in during October, and they were pretty well scattered over Canada. One came from Nova Scotia and another from British Columbia, one from the Northwest, another from Quebec and the others from Ontario.

The one adjudged best came from St. Catharines, and is reproduced herewith, together with the letter that accompanied it:

W. Arthur Lydiatt, Toronto, Ont.

Dear Sir,—Enclosed find advertisement to enter in the prize competition.

This ad. appeared in the Friday, August 28, Daily Standard, and was intended to create new business for the Bradley store. As a rule we only have one ton of flour in stock, so that five tons was an extra large purchase for us. The flour was sold at a small margin so as to make a genuine bargain. At that time the millers here were charging from $1.70 to $1.80 per cwt. for flour, wholesale. This flour cost us $1.50 per cwt. and we sold it at $1.65.

The result of this advertisement was greater than we anticipated. People who had never visited the store before came in to order flour and also their other groceries. In two days 4½ tons of the flour was sold and spoken for.

On the Saturday of the sale the cash receipts were the biggest in the history of the store (Christmas not excepted).

Trusting this may land the prize, I remain,
Yours truly,
GEORGE. R. BRADLEY.

This letter relieves me of the necessity of making any comment on the ad. It sold lots of goods—that's enough—and you won't wonder why when you read the ad.

We'll continue the competition for another month to give those who are thinking about it an opportunity to send in some of their best recent advertisements. It might be well to state that the ads. sent in should be those that have been used within the last three months.

If you are making any effort to do good advertising send in some of your ads. and I'll gladly comment on same, omitting mention of the name of the sender when requested.

Tell me why you wrote the ad.—why you thought it ought to sell goods—and why you think it is a good one—when you send anything along. It is the experience and expression of opinion that I want as much as the ad.

MERCHANTS.

The Toledo Automatic Computing Scale SHOWS TO EVERY CUSTOMER in LARGE INDICATIONS the EXACT WEIGHT they get. If you use a Cash Register you place it where the customer MUST SEE the INDICATIONS. This is for YOUR PROTECTION. Take OFF these INDICATIONS and you would consider the Register VALUELESS. The indications on a Toledo Scale PROTECT you from over and DOWN WEIGHT and IMPRESS your CUSTOMERS with YOUR HONEST PRINCIPLES. The CUSTOMER feels that he is PROTECTED when he buys goods over a TOLEDO SCALE, consequently it is a TRADE BRINGER. The customer values the GOODS he buys from you MORE THAN THE MONEY he hands you, otherwise he would not EXCHANGE the MONEY FOR the GOODS he gets. You are CAREFUL to count his CHANGE OUT CORRECTLY, and in plain view, why not use a Scale that COUNTS OUT the WEIGHT, it being to the customer of more VALUE than the MONEY he trades for the goods?

If You're a Grocer Who Advertises

—who is going to advertise or who should advertise—in fact, if you want to sell the most goods and make the most money possible, you ought to have a copy of "100 Good Ads for a Grocery Store," a book of ideas for ads — thought-stimulators and business-getters—every one of them.

Each one presents some convincing argument about your business — about the goods in your store—just as well as though specially written for you.

Sufficient copy for a year's advertising, allowing two ads a week—a lot of bright remarks suitable for ad headlines, show cards, etc., and an introductory talk on best methods for grocers.

THE MANUFACTURERS AND THE GREAT WEST

A Symposium of Some of Their Impressions Gathered During Their Recent Trip to the Pacific Coast.

IN the last two issues of "The Grocer" a couple of pages have been devoted to the impressions of the Great West as received by some of the gentlemen who crossed the continent with the Canadian Manufacturers' Association. In this issue these impressions are continued. The questions submitted to the excursionists by "The Grocer" were as follows:

QUESTIONS SUBMITTED.

FIRST—What most impressed you from a business standpoint during your trip through the Great West to the Pacific Coast?

SECOND—What is your opinion in regard to the future of Manitoba and British Columbia as manufacturing centres?

THIRD—In what way can manufacturers of the east secure a larger share of the trade of the Great West, that now goes to the manufacturing firms in the United States?

FOURTH—How can business men in the east best assist the people of Manitoba, the Territories and British Columbia in developing the natural resources of their respective parts of the country?

S. D. Joubert, of H. Lamontagne & Cie., Montreal.

First. What impressed me most is the great future for business we people of the east have in Manitoba and the Northwest Territories, but at the present time, with their small population, the placing of goods by manufacturers and jobbers is overdone, hence the keen competition which results in reducing the legitimate profits that a manufacturer must make, and is not in accordance with the heavy travelling expenses. As for British Columbia, better leave it alone for the present.

Second. I consider that there is no advantage whatever for manufacturing establishments in the West for ten or twelve years to come. Let it be an absolutely grain-producing country, so that the farmers' sons may not be tempted to leave the beautiful fields for the smoky cities.

Third. By getting cheaper transportation rates, and keeping their goods constantly on the market, and doing all in their power to improve in quality and finish.

Fourth. I leave this question in better hands than mine, but would say that a G.T.P. road would bring a wonderful result in the development of all that western country.

John Bertram, of The John Bertram & Sons Co., Limited, Dundas.

Regarding your first question I may state that going over the ground twelve years ago gives me more advantage than if it had been a first trip. Taking the Great West as a whole the progress all along the line is unmistakable. This is evidenced by the great growth of all the business centres, particularly Winnipeg, Portage la Prairie, Brandon, Calgary and Edmonton, and others, while Vancouver has tripled itself since I saw it in 1891. This means that back of all these growing centres there is an immensely increasing productive element, and business men seem to be pushed to the utmost to cope with the rapid increase.

Regarding your second question, I think that for some time the Prairie Provinces will not manufacture the great staples needed, such as harvesting machinery, but I find at Winnipeg and other centres some very fine machine shops, well equipped for light and heavy structural work, as well as for repair of engines and harvesting machinery. But I find, regarding Vancouver and Victoria, some live companies going largely into steamboat building and marine repairs, and as a large amount of machinery for these is being made in Britain, I could see plainly that in the course of a few years nearly the whole of these boats will be made in the above ports and cite the case of the C.P.R. steamer "Princess Victoria," with engines of 6,000 horse power, and able to attain a speed of twenty-three miles per hour. The engines for this steamer were built at Newcastle, England, and the boat at the coast, and to handle the machinery, plants had to be used nearly reaching the manufacturing point.

Regarding your third question, I may say that we saw a great deal of American harvesting machinery, but this will soon right itself, as the importing firms are now building extensive works at Hamilton and elsewhere, which will insure to Canada this large internal trade, but I think that a higher duty would have more quickly emphasized the location of American industries here.

As to your fourth question, I am not prepared to give a detailed answer, but only state that the business men in the east stuck loyally to the first inception of railway communication from ocean to ocean, which, to a certain extent, made the West what it is to-day, and I have no doubt that they will do their part in the present railways now projected and building across the northern part of the continent. There is one point which might be enlarged upon, and that is the large amount of American silver in circulation in the Northwest and British Columbia. These pewter cartwheels were everywhere and suggested to our tourists the necessity of buckskin pockets to take change. What the cause is for this influx it is for the financial men to say.

Just another word outside of your questions, and that is that the tourists on the manufacturers' train were received with open arms and a hospitality they were not prepared for in every city and town, and handshaking was the order of the day as old friends met.

Lloyd Harris, of Harris, Cook & Co., bankers, Brantford.

First. What most impressed me from a business standpoint on our recent excursion to the Pacific coast was the extraordinary purchasing power of the people of the West. I had heard it said that the income of the people in Manitoba and the Northwest Territories is larger per capita than in any other part of the world, and, judging from the large purchasing power they have, and the desire on their part to buy the best class of goods available, I think this must be correct.

Second. My opinion as to the future of Manitoba and British Columbia as manufacturing centres is that British Columbia and the western parts of the Northwest Territories must eventually develop large manufacturing industries for the reason that raw materials will be plentiful and cheap. In Manitoba they are not so well situated, as the transporting of raw materials and fuel will always be a serious question, so that the natural situation for industries will be nearer the base of supplies for the raw materials, and this will be found in great abundance in the eastern part of British Columbia, and also cheap power should be available in that section. As soon as the population of the Territories warrants it, I have no doubt but that many manufacturing industries will be started in that section of Canada, as, if the market is available, those situated there would have a tremendous advantage over those in the eastern part of Canada.

Third. The manufacturers of the east can secure a large share of the trade of the Great West, some of which is now going to the United States, by simply going after it, and when they have got it, taking care of it. I was impressed with the fact that the western people want Canadian goods if they can get them, and it is up to the manufacturers in the east to supply them with the goods, but they must get the trade and supply the goods which are demanded the same as is necessary in doing business anywhere.

Fourth. The business men in the east can best assist the people in Manitoba, the Territories and British Columbia in developing the natural resources of their respective parts of the country by going out and studying existing conditions, and by getting an intelligent idea of the problems which western Canadians have to face. We have been believing too much in what we have read in the newspapers and from politicians, and what is wanted in Canada is that Canadians should individually understand their country and the great problems which they have to solve in the different sections. I believe that the recent excursion of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association is destined to do more good in this direction than anything which has ever occurred, and more excursions of this kind should be planned and carried out. I sincerely hope that the suggestion which was made on different occasions by the Canadian Manufacturers' Association party, that a representative party of western Canadians should come east in a body, will be acted upon, as, if we can get such a party to visit the industrial sections of the east, and talk with them over the questions we have to solve, I am sure that there would be a lot more sympathy and friendly feeling between the east and the West.

John M. Taylor, of The Taylor-Forbes Co., Guelph.

First. I was most impressed, from a business view, with the great quantity of stock that was necessary to be carried by the large jobbing houses to meet the demand of the western country, and, further, the anticipated extensions to these already big warehouses to handle the vastly greater trade than has been.

Second. Manufacturing in Manitoba and British Columbia is not a subject for present consideration, nor will it be until railway facilities are sufficient in quantity and low enough in rates to encourage a manufacturer to set up in business; besides, we shall have to wait a little while until the country is more thickly populated and the mines developed—then I think that manufacturing in north-west Manitoba will be a decided success.

Third. Our Canadian manufacturers, I believe, can secure the bulk of the trade of the Great West, provided they make first-class goods, that they try to meet the prices, and that they systematically look after the needs of the distributors and consumers of the wares that we make.

Fourth. We can best assist our friends in the West by standing shoulder to shoulder with them in their endeavor to get whatever they think, know and believe to be absolutely necessary to the good and welfare of their respective provinces. We can further help them by forgetting that politics ever existed and assist in electing men to govern our country broad enough and big enough to forget themselves and their own pockets, who are statesmen first, last and always, with their watchword "Canada for Canadians."

D. J. Waterous, of Waterous, Brantford.

First. The great purchasing power of the people.

Second. Would not think either likely to be good for varied manufacturing for many years to come.

Third and Fourth. By supplying the demand with goods that are best suited to the country, and by having them on the spot with live active men to push sales. In implements especially, samples, with repairs, to my mind, should be found in all towns having a population of 500 and up. If this was the case the manufacturers here in the east would soon notice the difference in the volume of business coming from our western people. Or, in other words, go after the business in exactly the same manner as the American manufacturers do.

W. H. Steele, of The W. H. Steele Co., Limited, Toronto.

First. The vast country and the up-to-date high class of goods sold in the West from Winnipeg to Vancouver.

Second. As to manufacturing centres my opinion is Winnipeg, Regina and Edmonton are the places for the manufacturers of the east to branch to.

Third. By having the manufacturers of the east build factories any place between Winnipeg and Edmonton according to their line of business.

Fourth. By establishing branch factories and warehouses and sending out good men, lots of capital and advocate more lines of railways.

A. F. MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., Limited, Toronto, Canada.

GENTLEMEN,—

It gives me great pleasure to tell you what I think of MacLaren's Imperial Cheese.

My acquaintance with it dates back about six years, and in that time whenever I have used it for cooking or eating, it has always been just right. While essentially a cheese for eating, I have used it constantly in my lectures and demonstrating, because it is always the same in flavor and consistency and gives perfect results.

When cooking with it, I use one-third less than the recipe calls for, because from its richness less is required than is the case with store cheese.

One hears it said sometimes that MacLaren's Imperial is more costly than cheese bought by the pound, but I refute the statement, for MacLaren's Imperial Cheese can be used to the last crumb without a particle of waste or dryness.

I hope always to be able to obtain it for my own sake, as well as for its merit, for I know that I can depend upon it.

Yours very truly,

DAIRY PRODUCE AND PROVISIONS

and Cold Storage News.

OUTLOOK FOR THE COOKED MEAT TRADE.

A RECENT interview with an enterprising grocer elicited the interesting information that of the various departments of his business none had proved more popular or profitable that the cooked meat department. Three years ago the trade in cooked meats may be said to have been confined entirely to half-a-dozen staple lines, such as cooked ham, bologna sausage, corned beef, etc., with which everyone is familiar. To-day it has increased its former dimensions three fold. There are now on the market no less than 30 different kinds of cooked meats—jellied veal, turkey, chicken, ox-tongue, veal-tongue, lamb-tongue, pork tongue, tenderloin, hocks, brisket, cooked heart, pigs feet, spiced beef and pork, ham, pressed beef, head-cheese, minced meat, weiner sausages, ham, chicken and tongue, sausages, pork pies, and black and white pudding. Nor do these exhaust the list. In some of the largest establishments poultry is cooked to order, in season or out. You order a roast chicken or turkey, and in an incredibly short time it is delivered ready for the table.

A most interesting feature of the large up-to-date grocery is undoubtedly its process and cold-storage department. No longer do Canadian grocers need to import their prepared meats from the United States. Everything is now manufactured here. The cold-storage plant in many places is sufficiently large to keep meat for months ahead if necessary. In one compartment are stored the ordinary rounds of meat in which there is a regular daily turn over; in another are to be found as early as the month of November, legs of lamb and mutton and chickens frozen solid for next Spring's trade, when these articles will be scarce.

Not an ounce of anything is allowed to go to waste. Scraps go to the sausage-machine; certain of the by-products are manufactured into lard; livers, hearts and other serviceable morsels that cannot be used on the spot are put in pickle, and reach the consumer in the fulness of time under a nom de-plume.

The grocer in question when asked his opinion as to the possibilities of the cooked meat trade for the average retailer, shrugged his shoulders. There would be no trouble in creating a demand for cooked meats, he thought. Somehow or other, people nowadays are apt to catch at anything by which labor is lessened. If they can procure cooked meat at a reasonable price, particularly during the hot weather, other things being equal, they will buy rather than cook it themselves. This rule will not apply to country districts, where meat is cheap as a rule and every housewife prides herself upon her cooking.

A stock of cooked meats, such as cooked ham, spiced beef, bologna, chicken, sausage, and other lines, which will keep for considerable time, cannot but prove an attractive and valuable feature in any retail grocery establishment. Unless a grocer has proper cold-storage facilities however, he had better fight shy of the jellied meat trade. The ordinary refrigerator in which dairy produce, etc., is kept, will not answer. It must have compartments where the temperature can be adjusted to suit the article in storage. It is said that in a good cold-storage plant fowl can be preserved for ten years. A quick turn-over is the prime requisite. Jellied meats must reach the consumer within a day or two, else they begin to turn black and become practically worthless.

Where the grocer has the proper facilities and fairly large clientele the cooked meat trade should offer a good field for development.

Fattening of Chickens.

THE Dominion Department of Agriculture have illustration chicken-fattening stations located at Sandwich, Ont., Stanford, Que., Rogersville, N.B., East Amherst and Northeast Margaree, N.S., Alberton, Glenfinnan, Montague Bridge, Mount Stewart and Eldon, P.E.I. These illustration stations purchase chickens from the farmers for fattening. The stations have an equipment of fattening crates, shaping boards, etc. The chickens are fatted for 24 days in the crates, and at the completion of that time are starved 36 hours, killed by dislocation of the neck, pressed into a square shape and packed into boxes.

This year it is the intention of the Dominion Department of Agriculture to sell fatted farmers' chickens on all the principal Canadian markets and to show the consumers the improved quality of crate-fed chickens. Up to the present time no chickens have been exported by the department to Great Britain. The price received per pound is from 10 to 13 cents, plucked weight. This course will be pursued so that farmers in any part of Canada fattening their chickens can sell them to dealers who recognize the value of fatted chickens, and pay increased prices per pound for them.

London, Ont., Nov. 14.—Four thousand and fifty boxes offered at cheese market to-day. No sales. Bidding from 10 to 10½c.

Canton, N.Y., Nov. 15.—Twin cheese, 10c.; butter, 21c.

Watertown, N.Y., Nov. 14.—Cheese sales, 3,500, at 10 to 10¼c. for large and small.

Belleville, Ont., Nov. 14.—At the meeting of the Cheese Board, held here to-day, there were offered 2,869 white and 290 colored, October and November make. Sales were: Watkins, 60; Alexander, 100; Hodgson, 625; at 10⅜c., and Hodgson, 120 at 10 5-16c.

THE PROVISION MARKETS.
Toronto.

There seems to be an easier tone to the provision markets this week. Some dealers are of the opinion that a quotable change has not yet taken place, while others hold that the market is a half-cent lower than recently. Dressed hogs are being bought cheaper now and are coming in in better quantities, and account in a measure for the easier tendency. The demand keeps fairly good, especially for the north, and promises to hold so at least till the close of navigation. We quote:

Pork, which is so much lower than a year ago, is having a free sale, though the unsteady market has somewhat taken the snap out of business. Beef does not show as great a difference. Prices are more even, tending rather easier. A steady trade is being done. Hams and rolls hold quite high. The business here is largely in the hands of local curers. Lard is very low, and while selling freely, is easy in price. Refined has shown a decline, but not so low in proportion. Fresh meats are easy. In western beef prices are lower than for some time. Domestic is dull. Lamb is plentiful and low. Mutton is freely offered. Pork is in light supply with prices easy. Poultry is more freely offered. We quote :

DAIRY PRODUCE

Toronto.

BUTTER.

The butter market this week has been slow, receipts of good quality stock being light. There has, however, been an improvement in the quantity of dairy butter coming forward owing to the closing of the cheese factories. The demand is good, both for creamery and good quality dairy. We quote :

BUTTER

The market continues firm, the demand being almost entirely for butter for local consumption. The Eastern Townships' make is small, and is being very readily snapped up. At present it is thought that the Eastern Townships' make is much less than last season. We quote finest Eastern Townships, 21 to 22c.; western, 20 to 21c.; fresh dairy rolls, 17 to 17½c.; dairy tubs, 14 to 15c.

CHEESE.

The local market is unchanged. The mild fresh make sells for 11 to 11½c.; Summer strong cheese, 12 to 12½c.

BUTTER

There is little change in price. The market is quite well supplied. There is always a steady sale for really first-class stock. It is not, however, easy to get. It always commands a price. Creamery stock is scarce. We quote :

Cheese.

DIFFERENT minds, different manners. It is the same with cheese, says London, Eng., Grocery. Every country has its own. England has its typical Cheddar, first made in the town of that name. Scotland has its blue cheese, not known outside its borders. Switzerland has Gruyere, which is made of goats' milk, and is full of holes caused by the gases during fermentation. An imitation "Gruyere" chese is at present being imported from America—more Free Trade. Brie is a popular French soft cheese ; and Camembert, originating in Normandy, is another. These cheeses are cured in caves, where the temperature never rises above 12 to 14 degrees. They are ready for marketing in May and November. Roquefort, a celebrated French cheese, is made from the mingled milk of goats and sheep that browse on the thyme-clad banks of the Arno. These cheeses are also ripened in caves, but the temperature is kept at 40 degrees. Akin to the Roquefort cheese is that called Gorgonzola, alleged to be made in Italy, after similar processes. It is milder than Roquefort, and not quite so good.

Provision Notes.

The Brockville Cheese Board complain that the Brockville brand is being used by outside factories.

To Canada belongs the honor of establishing the dead meat trade between America and Britain. Dickson Bros. first made this trade a success in 1873.

The arrivals of Canadian acttle at Liverpool up to November 1 have been 91,000, together with 30,000 sheep. This is double the supply for the corresponding period of last year.

Mr. W. E. Beith, of Carleton Place, cheesemaker, has purchased from Mr. R. E. McLenahan, the cheese factory at Tennyson, and purposes operating it himself next season.

IMPRESSIONS OF THE GREAT WEST

By W. L. E.

WHEN Nature laid out the vast prairies of the Great West and built its magnificent mountains He was in a bountiful spirit. The people of the Great West seem to have inherited the same spirit; towards us, at any rate, they exhibited it. It is true we were occasionally told that the east did not know as much about the Great West as it should, but the next moment they took us to their bosom and were lavish in their kindness towards us. I am sure that if we could have put the mountains in our trunks, rolled up the prairies like a scroll, and carried them away under our arms, we would have been welcome to them. As we were travelling along in a sort of free and easy style, without much regard to schedule time, the hour of our arrival at different points was by no means always certain. But this did not deter the citizens of several places from sitting up nearly all the night or waiting nearly all day for the purpose of giving us a hearty welcome. In one or two instances they waited fully 24 hours for us. The good people of Deloraine, for example, waited fully that long. When we reached that progressive and pretty little place, they had a feast prepared for us in the town hall, which reminded me of an old-time Methodist tea meeting on account of the multiplicity and variety of the good things with which a number of small tables were loaded in the hall, to say nothing of the cordial handshaking with which we were greeted. But their patient waiting seemed to have made all the keener their desire to entertain us. At any rate, if one place in the Great West exceeded all others in the warmth and heartiness of its entertainment, it was Deloraine. The vastness of the prairies and the magnificence of the mountains in the Great West are indelibly impressed upon our memory, but so is the hospitality of its people. Personally, I am in a quandary between two opinions as to what to admire most the Great West or its people.

If there are any doubting Thomases in Eastern Canada in regard to the fruit-growing possibilities of British Columbia I wish they would take a trip to that province about the same time of the year that we did. British Columbians do not boast a great deal about their grapes and peaches, but even these fruits are by no means foreign to that province, but when it comes to apples, pears and plums they do not hesitate to sing their praises. Their plums are delicious, but the particular pride of the British Columbians is in their apples. In size, these apples put Ontario fruit to blush. They are simply giants in the apple family, one of which, in some varieties, would be more than enough to satisfy the appetite of any apple stealing boy. Some of the apples seem by nature to be more designed for a family feast than for the appetite of an individual. Even the varieties common to Ontario and Quebec when grown in British Columbia seem to become ambitious to conform to the peculiarities of the Pacific province and they invariably succeed, at least as far as I could see, and this I had a good opportunity of doing at the exhibition in

The end of Car 7 Major J. S. Hamilton on Duty on Reception Day.

New Westminster, where the extent and variety of the display simply astonished our party. Eastern apples, like eastern people, when they go to British Columbia, seem to take on so much flesh as to in time become almost unrecognizable by their friends. The climate of British Columbia also imparts beautiful and delicate tints to the apples grown in that province. As to flavor and comparison with the fruit grown in Eastern Canada I am not competent to judge. Mr. Palmer, a well-known authority in British Columbia claimed that in point of flavor the apples in his province compared very well with those grown in the east, while the thicker skin which characterized them gave the western apple better cooking qualities. One thing at the New Westminster exhibition that astonished the most of us a great deal was a display of dried prunes grown and cured in that province. Mr. Palmer, who represented the Provincial Government, informed us that the prospects for the development of the prune industry in British Columbia was fairly good as far as climatic conditions were concerned. In some of the valleys in the interior Italian prunes were being grown extensively, and a year ago one firm had evaporated about 10,000 pounds, but what surprised us as much as the exhibit of provincial-grown and evaporated prunes was the packages which contained them. One lot, for example, was put up in a box which at some distant period or other contained California dried apricots, even the label being retained. Another was in the box of an eastern starch company, and again the original label was retained, while the third lot was packed in an old biscuit box. The quality of the prunes was not bad although no attempt had been made to size them, small and large being all packed together, but it struck us as poor judgment indeed that the fruit should have been packed in old, second-hand boxes.

his friend, Mr. H. Drummond-Deane, of Peermaad Travancore, Southern India, and show a number of the beasts shot by the latter, near his estate, during the last two years. In most of the pictures Mr. Drummond-Deane is taken with his quarry. These include a bison bull, measuring 18½ hands at wither; two "bucks," Neilgherry hill goats, a bear, a tiger, and a black panther. Mr. Drummond-Deane is a tea planter of note, and is further distinguished as the inventor of the process, a process still in use, of making Ceylon and Indian green tea. From the pictures herewith published it may be gathered that Mr. Drummond-Deane is also a hunter of no little prowess.

CANADA'S BEET SUGAR INDUSTRY.

TO anyone who is interested in the development of the new industries of our country—and who is there that is not—nothing could be more enjoyable and at the same time more instructive than a visit to one of the beet sugar factories of Canada. Ontario can now boast of four beet sugar factories, located at Dresden, Wallaceburg, Berlin and Wiarton, and the Northwest factory at Raymond, Alta. The first three have a capacity of 600 tons of beets per day and the last, although it has at present a capacity of only 350 tons per day, is so constructed that with very little expense it can double its capacity.

An Indian Tiger.

Of course the first requirement for the success of the beet sugar factory is a plentiful supply of beets. To many, considering the fertility of our soil, this may seem a small matter, but when we consider that the Dresden factory can only obtain a supply of beets sufficient to keep their plant in operation for about six weeks in the year we see that it is a vital question. Let us look into this matter and see if it really pays the farmer to grow beets. The uniform price of beets this year is four dollars per ton for beets yielding 12 per cent. sugar; and an advance of 33 1-3 per cent. in price for every additional one per cent. of sugar in beets. Farmers can produce beets yielding as high as 20 per cent. sugar, and they can grow as many as from 15 to 20 tons to the acre. Taking the average price as $4 per ton and the yield as 15 tons to the acre, we have the farmer getting $60 per acre for growing beets. Now the farmer has two objections to growing beets: in the first case, he dislikes the work connected with beet growing; to get down on his knees and work among roots is always distasteful to the farmer (and especially to the hired man). To drive a binder or a mower is much more congenial work. In the second case, and probably this is the more serious objection, for the high price would probably counteract the first, he considers it impoverishes the soil. At first this objection seems to have considerable weight, for it must be admitted that beets take a great deal of nutriment out of the soil. On the other hand, scientists have found, and it is claimed that the agricultural college staff have reached the same conclusion from experiments, that the nutriment taken from the soil is mostly contained in the top of the beet where we find the green stalks. This, of course, is always cut off and thrown back into the soil. In the lower end of the beet is found the purest sugar juice.

Neilgherry Hill Goats.

As to the price paid for beets, this is affected by the bounty paid by the Ontario Government. They refused at first to give any bounty to the beet sugar industries and it was only when the proposition was made to the Minister of

An Indian Bear.

Agriculture that the bounty should go directly to the farmer by guaranteeing him at least four dollars per ton that $75,000 was voted to be divided among the factories, according to their output. This sum was granted for three years. The manufacturers, some of whom had already bought beets for three dollars and three dollars and a half per ton, were compelled to pay a flat rate of at least four dollars per ton for beets of any description. This gave to the farmer a higher price than he would have otherwise received.

But to come back to the actual manufacture of the beets into sugar. At the Dresden factory, in which about a million dollars has been invested, the beets are stored in a building about 400 feet in length. This building is about 50 feet from the main factory. There are some dozen bins and in the middle of each bin there is what resembles a box drain. Through this a 12-inch stream of water is run; while the men shovel the beets into this they are carried to the main factory, and of course washed at the same time. They are then carried up to the cutters. Before passing into the cutter they are automatically weighed and the weight registered. In passing through the cutter they are cut or shredded into long strips about the size of an ordinary lead pencil. They then pass into a large vat and the sugar juice is taken out by running water through them. The juice is then conducted to the evaporator while the pulp is taken to the drying kiln. It might just be remarked here that this pulp makes an excellent feed for cattle and sells very readily for twelve dollars per ton.

Owing to the fact that the beet sugar factories last year produced sugar of a very fine crystal the belief has become prevalent that this is the only kind of sugar that can be produced from beets. This, however, is not the case, for sugar can be produced as coarse or fine as is wished.

The beet sugar industry should become an important factor in our country. When the farmers find that it is really profitable to grow beets, and when further developments have been made in cold storage, we may look forward to the time when the beet sugar factories will not be running for six weeks in the year, but for a much longer period; when the output will be greatly in excess of the 14,000 barrels per factory, as at present; and when the factories will be much more widely distributed.

W. CLARK'S CANNED MEAT EXHIBIT.

THE Canadian exhibitors who made such creditable displays of Canadian products at the Osaka Exhibition are receiving the thanks of the Japanese authorities for the interest they took in the national exhibition. W. Clark, of Montreal, who made a fine exhibit of his canned meats, has received a letter of acknowledgment, a fac-simile of which appears herewith.

Translated (reading from left to right) it is as follows:

All grocers should carry a full stock of ROYAL BAKING POWDER. It always gives the greatest satisfaction to customers, and in the end yields the larger profit.

BROKERS AND RETAILERS.

COMPLAINT has been heard of late that brokers were dealing with the retail trade direct and quoting wholesale prices. The matter has been taken up by the Ontario Wholesale Grocers' Guild Executive, and a circular addressed to the brokers and manufacturers has been sent out by the secretary, Mr. T. B. Escott, asking for a definition of the position.

The circular reads as follows :

Gentlemen,—Doubtless you are aware that there are springing up in Canada several firms of retailers and others formed into a joint stock company, for the purpose of buying goods at the same price as legitimate wholesale grocers. Two of these firms have lately come into existence in Toronto, one in Hamilton and one in London. Their method of doing business is to divide the profits at stated intervals between themselves. This you can readily see is unfair to outside retailers who are not members of the companies; it is also unfair to the wholesale grocers who have capital invested and carry a large stock for the convenience of the retail trade. I think, therefore, that you will agree with me that the wholesale grocery trade is entitled to the support of the broker and manufacturer against such unfair competition, as these companies are practically co-operative concerns and any broker or manufacturer might just as well sell direct to the retail grocer as to sell to firms of this kind. They style themselves wholesale grocers, but it is plain that they are so only in name. It is my duty to ascertain from you, if possible, your attitude towards firms of this description, and whether or not you consider it proper for you to sell goods to them direct, and also whether you confine your business to the strictly wholesale grocer, or do you sell any of the retail trade in this province.

Factory of T. Upton & Co., Hamilton.

WELL KEPT FACTORY.

During the past season the factory of The T. Upton Co., Hamilton, has been the admiration of many visitors. The vines on the building presented a very pretty effect, and the rockery and floral decorations in the grounds surrounding it reflected great credit on the firm and their staff of employes.

Mr. R. T. Steele, of the firm of Messrs. Lucas, Steele & Co., and who has done excellent work in his position of president of the Hamilton Improvement Society, was enthusiastic in its praise when spoken to with reference to the matter. He described Upton's as one of the prettiest spots in Hamilton, and hoped it might prove an incentive to other factories to make a move in the same direction.

PRINCE EDWARD OYSTERS.

A new chapter has been opened in the oyster business of Summerside, says The Summerside Pioneer, by the importation recently of oysters from New Brunswick. While the imported article is very much inferior to the Richmond Bay and Bedeque oyster, it still counts, and the demand had to be filled somehow. So far, we understand, only a few barrels have been brought over, but if the scarcity continues, it is quite probable that more will follow. Our local fishermen report an unprecedented scarcity, while the windy weather has also contributed to the famine conditions. It looks now as if a rest of several years were required to bring the Richmond Bay Klondyke to its former status.

BEWARE OF MAN WITH TALL HAT.

A man with a high hat enters a grocery. He is smooth and suave. He bets the grocer that the high hat will hold five gallons of molasses. The grocer knows better, and the bet is made. The molasses is poured into the hat, which runs over before the five gallons are exhausted. The man is mad because he loses. He quarrels with the delighted grocer and presently, in an excess of rage, claps the hat on the grocer's head and pulls it down. Then he coolly cleans out the money drawer and hies away; the grocer meanwhile wildly struggling to relieve himself from his sticky extinguisher.

This is the neat little game that has been successfully played on an eastern tradesman, and grocers with molasses to waste and with tills to tap are warned to look out for it.—Cleveland Plain-Dealer.

TENDERS FOR ARMY SUPPLIES.

The War Office has forwarded to the Agricultural Department forms of tender for the supply of bread, forage, groceries, and meat to the troops in South Africa. Tenders must be received at Pretoria by January 19, and further particulars may be had on application to W. W. Moore, Agricultural Department, Ottawa. Canadians have a chance to supply bread, flour, yeast and baking powder, alfalfa, mealies, meal, oat hay, oats, bran, rock salt, linseed, sulphur, green fodder, dry grass for bedding, coffee, tea, chicory, sugar, salt, and pepper, and meats, fresh, frozen, and refrigerated.

BRANTFORD MERCHANTS ORGANIZE.

The retail merchants of Brantford met in the Council Chamber of the City Hall last week and completed the organization of an association. The Dominion secretary, Mr. E. M. Trowern,, and the provincial organizer, Mr. James Eadie, were present and addressed the meeting. The secretary briefly laid the aims and objects of the association before the meeting, and Mr. Eadie stated that he had called upon nearly all the merchants in the city and they had all expressed themselves as being favorable to having an association formed.

The election of officers was then proceeded with, with the following result :

President, E. S. Harris.
1st Vice-Pres., G. H. Day.
2nd Vice-Pres., C. Gress.
Treasurer, F. C. Harp.

ADVERTISING STARCH.

In a recent shipment consisting of an entire train load of starch, The Corn Products Co, of Oswego, N.Y., took advantage of the opportunity and distributed 50,000 sample packages of its products along the route. The train consisted of twenty-four cars, each of which was loaded with 35,000 pounds of starch, making a total of nearly 1,000,000 pounds. This was the largest shipment of its kind on record, and in small towns the inhabitants met the train in a body to receive the promised free package, and, incidentally, to give further evidence to the skeptical that advertising pays.

Best for You.

There will be no half-way satisfaction when you sell Windsor Salt. "It is best for you and your customer, too." And we use the word "best" in its deepest meaning —best by test!

Pure, white, dry, crystaline. The Salt that doesn't cake because every particle of moisture is dried out. Sifted, not ground. "Best for you" because there is no half-way satisfaction in selling it.

A BUSINESS MEN'S PARLIAMENT.

THE indications point to a general election in the not distant future. The party organs are beginning to gather together their wares and dilate on the virtues of their friends and the iniquities of their enemies. The politicians are turning their attention to local organization, and are estimating the effects of the recent redistribution. Committee meetings are the order of the day, or rather of the night. All this portends what? That the battle is soon to be on and the country plunged into the excitement, pleasurable or otherwise, of a royal battle all along the line.

To the politician it is merely a battle, but to the ordinary business man and citizen it is or should be more. The board of directors of this great company of ours, which we delight to call the Dominion of Canada, are about to be elected. Every stockholder, no matter what the size of his share, has a vote and with the exception of in one province, only one. The directors in their five year term of office will raise and disburse something over $300,000,000 on our account. They will direct the policy of our business, decide on capital expenditure, pass by-laws for the regulation of the company's affairs, and generally transact the business which is transacted by the directors of a large and important company like ours.

In electing those directors we have rather peculiar notions. When we elect the directors of a bank or a loan company in which we are financially interested, we invariably choose the men who, by success achieved in their private affairs, have proved their fitness to take a place at the council board of the larger company. He may not be a brilliant talker, but he must be honest, he must be capable or we will not elect him to the directorate of our bank. But when we come to elect the directors of the company known as the Dominion of Canada, we forget all about the principles upon which we acted in choosing other directors. If he is a Liberal, if he is a Conservative, that settles it.

Need we wonder that so many misfits get elected to Parliament?

It is true that the party system prevails with us and is not without its advantages where there are important issues, but that only throws back the problem to the party convention. Why do not the parties bring out business men as candidates?

The blame rests in a measure with the business men themselves; with them rests also the remedy if they will but apply it. They have left the selection of candidates to the professional politicians. If they will turn out and take hold of the party organization they can insist on capable men as candidates.

The party conventions and nominations have in most constituencies not yet been held. There is time yet for the business community to make their influence felt in the selection of the men who are to represent us in the next Parliament. The great development which is just before us demands the trained experienced minds of men of affairs in our national councils. The next parliament should be known as the Business Men's Parliament. The business men of Canada can make it so if they go about it with sufficient energy and determination.

TRANSATLANTIC RATES.

THERE is a flurry among the transatlantic steamship lines owing to the fact that in pursuance of extensive colonization plans the Canadian Pacific is making through rates to the Northwest by means of its recently acquired steamers which cannot be approached by the New York and Boston lines. It is reported that the Canadian Pacific is making very low rates via Halifax and Portland and that the Morgan combination directors have freed the Dominion Line from all agreements in order to meet competition. This applies to Dominion Line's Portland and Montreal services, as its Boston service has been combined with the White Star Line.

If this rate competition results in increased immigration to Canada the rival companies will receive our national commendation and thanks.

FUNCTION OF THE MANAGER.

AN article in last week's GROCER suggests an inquiry into the true function of the manager or head of a business. Has he any right to so overload himself with detail as to be unable to spare the time necessary to receive courteously those who may have business with his firm? We venture to answer no.

The manager has no business to encumber himself with detail. There are plenty of men who, at nominal salaries, can be hired to do routine work. The work of the manager should be something higher. It is his business to organize his staff so that the routine work of the business may run on smoothly without his immediate and constant supervision. His subordinates should be given a share of responsibility and be made answerable for what has been put under their care. If the manager has failed to so organize his work he has demonstrated his incapacity for the managership, and should be relegated to a subordinate position, where he can exercise his talent for detail to advantage, and give place to a man who has a proper conception of his duties.

The manager's true function is the direction of the larger policy of the business, and this he cannot do properly if his time is absorbed with matters of secondary importance. In managing a business the most enterprising and successful leaders have recognized the importance of the personal element. It is a great advantage for the manager to have the personal acquaintance of his customers, actual and possible. For one thing, he will, thereafter, be in a better position to understand their peculiar positions, and wants, and dispositions ; and, moreover, if he is a man of the right stamp he should win their personal confidence, esteem, and regard, a matter of more importance than some may be inclined to concede, as was instanced by an item in the columns of THE GROCER a few weeks ago of a merchant who had been the constant customer of one firm for over thirty years.

Again, the general conditions of trade, the requirements of the market, plans for extending the business, meeting the competition of rivals, are all subjects which should engage the attention of the manager, and are subjects which can only be adequately dealt with by a man who is in constant touch with his constituency, through meeting from day to day those with whom he has business relations.

CANADIAN CATTLE AT ST. LOUIS.

THE decision of the representatives of The Canadian Live Stock Associations not to take part in the St. Louis Exhibition under the present unfair conditions, is one, which although regretted, must be approved.

The stringent conditions governing the exhibition of cattle are such as put Canadians practically out in the cold. A daily newspaper commenting on the conditions says :

> They stipulate, to begin with, that every importer for exhibition purposes must be a citizen of the United States. Then the Customs regulations have been so arranged that if a Canadian animal at the show were to be sold it would be necessary for it to be brought all the way back to Canada before it could be shipped to the buyer, even if he lived only ten miles from the exhibition grounds. This would be necessary in order to collect the duty at the frontier. Further, it is stipulated that all cattle for exhibition must undergo the tuberculin test, but no provision is made for this test in Canada, while if made in St. Louis it would for a time spoil the most healthy animal for show purposes.

The fifty representatives of all the live stock associations in Canada at the meeting recently held at the Rossin House, Toronto, after fully discussing the situation, decided that unless the regulations of the Fair were modified to the same character as those of the World's Fair at Chicago and the Pan American at Buffalo, Canada would not be represented.

While it is desirable that our cattle should be represented at St. Louis our cattlemen are perfectly right in refusing to submit to unjust conditions. As our cattle carried everything before them at Chicago, and were still more signally successful at Buffalo, we are not absolutely dependent upon the St. Louis Fair for the reputation of our cattle.

The Canadian stockmen are perfectly content to exhibit if they are given equitable treatment, and since the meeting above referred to, the Canadian case has been submitted to the St. Louis authorities in black and white, and it is possible that a workable arrangement may yet be arrived at.

SUGGESTION IN DECORATIONS.

PEOPLE are influenced more largely than is generally supposed by suggestion. No one likes to be dictated to or told what to buy, but a delicate suggestion will often turn a customer's mind in a direction quite undreamed of before. In this fact lies the value of a well-conceived window and a cleverly arranged interior. The idea that she should have this or that is suggested to the customer by seeing the article displayed in a more or less attractive manner.

In planning out his campaign for the Christmas trade the grocer should never lose sight of the facts just noted. If he wants to sell seasonable goods he should make everything in his store suggest the season. Christmas should peep out from every corner in the store. Money spent in decorations is a good investment. Evergreens are always in good taste and smack of yuletide and the holiday season. Holly is not expensive, and at once brightens the appearance of the interior and reminds the beholder how a generous holly wreath tied with a bow of red ribbon would look hung over the mantel or in the window at home. A Christmas tree hung with articles from stock which would prove suitable for Christmas presents would be interesting to customers, while at the same time suggesting appropriate gifts for their friends. Everything which is not related to the Christmas trade should be put in the background, and everything of a holiday nature should be put forward and in a manner to suggest its use.

Once get people inspired with the enthusiasm of Christmas and tight purse strings will be unloosened with surprising readiness. People are always ready to buy if their imaginations are sufficiently stimulated. Your Christmas trade will be doubled if you can manage to make your store redolent with the suggestion of Christmas.

ASIATIC TRADE.

AMERICANS are growing alarmed over their declining trade with the Chinese Empire, and are looking askance at the advances Russia is making in that market, while rapidly estimating the lines in which the latter may prove a competitor.

The United States is keenly alive to the importance of the Oriental market, and the whole labyrinth of Russian diplomacy is directed to capturing this commercial prize. In a recent issue of THE GROCER an article from the pen of Mr. J. D. Allan directed attention to the marvellous possibilities of the Oriental market and the natural advantages of Canada in the matter of trade with the trans-Pacific nations.

The keen jealousy of the United States and the unswerving pertinacity of the Russian should be an inspiration for the Canadian. The trade is there, and we are in the most advantageous position, geographically, to secure it, if we will only go after it with sufficient determination.

The trouble with our transcontinental roads has been that by far the greatest amount of traffic has been eastbound. If we can develop this Oriental trade we will have a westbound traffic that will balance up matters and equalize freight rates.

There is only one thing to do, and that is, a vigorous campaign in the Oriental markets. The Government should take hold of the matter and establish commercial agencies there, through whom our manufacturers can get in touch with the merchants of Eastern Asia. The time should come when our Asiatic market is of no less importance than that of Europe.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. J. E. Adams, for over 13 years in business in Omemee, has removed to Lindsay, having purchased the grocery and provision business of T. Blackwell.

Mr. C. W. Gregory, Western Ontario representative of Snowdon, Forbes & Co., Montreal, is at present confined to his home through illness, but expects shortly to be able to be among his customers.

Mr. P. E. Sobotker, representing Borden's Condensed Milk Co., New York, is in Montreal this week in the interests of his company. Mr. Sobotker is visiting the trade in company with Mr. W. H. Dunn, Montreal representative.

Mr. A. J. Williams, Montreal representative of Crosfield, Lampard, Clarke & Co., London, Calcutta and Colombo, is at present in New York. Mr. Williams left on Thursday, November 12, and will visit Philadelphia, Boston and other large eastern centres in the interests of Ceylon and Indian teas.

The High-Grade Coffee & Specialties Co., Ltd., of Ottawa, have opened up a branch office in Toronto, at 167 King street west, Princess Theatre building. The office will be in charge of Mr. R. J. Laughlin. An active campaign in this firm's goods will be made. The success of their brands in the home market has been such as to disprove the old saying, that "a prophet is not without honor save in his own country," and in Ottawa, where the goods are prepared, there are very few stores that do not handle them.

MET IN OTTAWA.

A representative of "The Grocer" when in Ottawa last week ran across a number of old travellers whose interests are directly connected with the grocery and provision trade. At the Grand Union were met Mr. John Christie, representing Carter, Galbraith & Co., Montreal. Mr. Christie has a reputation for knowing teas thoroughly, and as a salesman in that line his orders testify to his ability.

Mr. N. N. Munro, who has for many years represented The Hamilton Coffee & Spice Co., Hamilton, has been spending the past week in Ottawa, Hull and vicinity; and MacLaren's jelly powders, extracts, coffees and spices are in evidence in the stores. Mr. Munro's territory is between Toronto and Montreal. He is an old and experienced grocer and thoroughly knows what will sell and what is required.

Mr. F. W. Mallette, representing The Park, Blackwell Co., Ltd., Toronto, provision merchants, was visiting the trade in Ottawa during the week. Mr. Mallette, who represents his firm in Eastern Ontario, reports business most satisfactory.

Mr. A. J. Hughes, representing The Ozo Co., Ltd., Montreal, was met in Ottawa this week by a representative of "The Grocer." If the number of orders received testify to ability as a salesman, Mr. Hughes certainly holds his own.

SPECIALIZING IN SPECIALTIES.

Lumsden Bros., of Hamilton and Toronto, are closing out the general grocery end of their Toronto wholesale business, which will hereafter be handled by the Hamilton branch. In Toronto it is the intention of the firm to confine themselves to their own specialties, which will be pushed vigorously. The change will take place on December 31. It is rumored that Lumsden Bros. will build a larger canning factory next year. Mr. H. D. Reid will be in charge of the reorganized Toronto office and warehouse.

HINTS TO BUYERS.

Contributors are requested to send news only, not puffs of goods they handle, or the arrival of standard goods that everyone has in stock, or that they are offering goods at close figures, or that they have had an unusually large sale this season.

The Eby, Blain Co., Ltd., are offering a decided Christmas novelty in their line of Christmas stockings. Grocers will find this one of the most profitable and quickest selling lines ever handled.

Three carloads of onions expected by McWilliam & Everist during the week will be sold at prices that will interest the trade.

H. P. Eckardt & Co. are selling shelled walnuts at a very low price.

The St. Lawrence Sugar Refinery Co. draw attention to the fact that their sugars are made from West Indian cane sugar.

McWilliam & Everist have paid special attention to their nut imports this season and buyers will find their stock worthy of attention.

The Eby, Blain Co., Ltd., report that they can now fill all orders promptly for match-safe tacks. Grocers interested in quick-selling Christmas novelties should get sample and quotations.

Henri Jonas & Co., Montreal, are offering their usual stock of crystallized fruits in fancy boxes and baskets. They report a splendid trade in fancy French syrups in decanters.

McWilliam & Everist expect the arrival of three cars of onions during the week.

"Simcoe" brand chicken soup may be had from H. P. Eckardt & Co.

Special prices are offered by Henri Jonas & Co., Montreal, on the balance of their Fall arrival of macaroni, vermicelli and spaghetti.

The F. J. Castle Co., Ltd., Ottawa, advise having filled all their orders in full for canned goods. They have still on hand a large supply of all lines. Dealers open will do well to communicate with them. See their ad. in another column.

The ad. of E. D. Marceau, in another part of this issue, is an interesting inducement to tea buyers. Values offered are specially low.

The attention of grocers handling fancy and high-class grocery specialties is directed to the ad. of Henri Jonas & Co., Montreal, in this week's issue. The goods advertised are exceptionally fine and adapted for fancy hotel, club and private family trade.

Neilson's Mince Meat in pails and tubs is on sale with The F. J. Castle Co., Ltd., Ottawa, who report that the quality of the goods is fast making friends for them in the east.

A full line of Rowat's Pickles, all grades and sizes, has been received by Joseph Grant, Ottawa. Buyers should place orders before cold weather sets in.

New crop Sicily filberts and Tarr. S.S. almonds are in stock with The Eby, Blain Co., Ltd.

Joseph Grant, wholesale grocer, Ottawa, has arriving next week two carloads of No. 1 Scotch herrings in barrels and half barrels, which he quotes at especially interesting figures.

Hudon, Hebert & Cie., Montreal, advise receipt of a round lot of "Sportsman" brand of sardines. As only about 600 cases of these desirable goods were received in Canada this year, catch being short, buyers should find them splendid value.

S. J. Major, Ottawa, advises receipt of carload of fine Japan tea, which he is offering at 17c. This price should clear out the line.

Cleaned currants (1902) in half cases, also 4-Crown layer raisins and finest selected valencias are offered this week by S. J. Major, wholesale grocer, Ottawa.

L. Chaput, Fils & Cie., Montreal, have a large assortment of table raisins in boxes and quarter boxes, in all grades. Also Malaga seeded raisins in 1-K. car. Also Malaga seeded raisins in 1-lb. cartons; sultanas, 1-lb.'s—all 1903 crop and offered at interesting prices.

Trenor's 1902 Valencia raisins, cold-storage kept fruit, in good condition, are offered to the trade this week at 4¾c. per pound, by L. Chaput, Fils & Cie., Montreal.

The Wiarton Beet Sugar Co. inform the trade that their factory is in full operation and turning out an excellent grade of sugar.

So many grocers throughout Canada have shown their appreciation of the special pipe offer being made by W. B. Reid & Co., wholesale tobacconists, Toronto, that it is manifest that a pipe stock is likely to become with many grocers a regular feature. The liberal offer Reid & Co. make should be accepted.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Toronto, November 19, 1903.

GROCERIES.

OPTIMISM is the dominant tone on the street this week. Wholesalers report trade in all staple lines satisfactory and the volume of general business in excess of the corresponding week last year. Both wholesalers and retailers are confident as to the outlook. Collections are very fair. There are few changes to note in the markets for although conditions have shifted somewhat in some lines quotable changes are few. The interest in canned goods centres round corn now that the anxiety relative to tomatoes is relieved. Jobbers have not had their orders filled and a scarcity is anticipated. Coffees continue steady and firm on the local market with strong upward tendency in New York. Spices are still firm, while cloves and black pepper have advanced ¼c. per lb. on the London market. There is no change in the molasses and syrup situation. A fair demand is being met at recent quotations. Rice is quiet. The market is reported bare of finest imported Japan. Tapioca is strong and unchanged. Teas maintain the strong position recently developed. There is a demand locally for cheap teas. Japans are scarce and a fair demand is met for Indian and Ceylon. On the London market Indian has maintained position and Ceylon has strengthened. Foreign dried fruits are being forwarded to retail trade. Valencia raisins are stronger locally and currants are also firmer in consequence of advices from Patras. Bordeaux and Marbot walnuts have advanced 2 to 2½ frs. on primal markets. In sugars, an easier tendency developing in raws has imparted a weaker feeling to New York refined, which at latest advices was being shaded 5c. per 100 lb. for granulated; at time of writing the local market had not been affected. Maple Leaf granulated has been withdrawn from the local list. Berlin lists a No. 1 yellow.

CANNED GOODS.

Jobbing houses are still busy filling back orders for canned goods. Corn is the strong feature just at present and jobbers have not been able to have their orders filled in full by the canners. Tomato orders, however, are being filled all right. Prices are very firm in all the three staple lines, tomatoes, corn and peas. We quote:

COFFEES.

SUGAR.

The dulness noted in our last has been again the prevailing feature and there have been only small sales of raws to United States refiners, totalling about 1,000 tons centrifugals, on spot and to arrive, to The American Sugar Refining Co. These sales have been made on basis of 3 7-16c. duty paid, for 96 test. On this basis the offerings have been light, but an easier feeling has since developed and there are now no buyers at over 3 5-16c. Europe has developed an easier tendency, quotation for 88 beet now being 8s. 5½d., basis f.o.b. Hamburg, for November shipment. This is an equivalent to the parity of 83.78 for 96 test centrifugals, duty paid, New York. The weakness in raws has imparted a weaker feeling to the refined situation and latest advices are that New York refiners are shading granulated .05c. per 100 lb., but so far this has had no apparent effect upon the local situation in Canada, list prices remaining as last advised. The prevailing feeling, however, is one of extreme caution and purchases are only made for absolute requirements, which seems to be the wisest policy to pursue at present time.

Latest cable from Magdeburg, Germany, regarding the growing beet crop reads: "No change in the situation." And this tends to keep the market easy. At same time the apparent reason for the weakness in New York is the prospective ratification of the Cuban reciprocity treaty. When passed this will probably have the effect of releasing the greater part of the 124,500 tons held on the island, along with 23,400 tons in importers' hands at United States ports, and, naturally, pending a settlement of this long outstanding question, the tendency is for refiners and other buyers to hold off. As opposed to this there has been a further reduction in United States stocks by nearly 9,000 tons, receipts for week ending November 11 being 21,447 tons, with meltings maintained at former figures of 30,000 tons, leaving total stock in all hands 112,064, which is fully 73,000 tons less than same time last year. Combined stocks of Europe and America, at latest uneven dates, were 1,194,564 tons, a decrease against same period last year of 5,261 tons. Regarding list of quotations at foot, it will be observed that "Maple Leaf" granulated has been withdrawn from the list. We quote:

SPICES

The market generally is firm and the expectations are for higher prices. As it is cloves are up ¼c. per lb. in London, and Singapore black pepper is also up ¼c. Cocoa butter is considerably dearer. Locally, wholesalers are meeting with a fairly good demand. We quote:

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The situation locally is little changed from last writing. There is a fairly good demand, especially for corn syrup. In New Orleans there has been a good demand for attractive grocery grades molasses, with light offerings. In New York the syrup market has been quiet on former basis. We quote:

RICE AND TAPIOCA.

The demand for these lines is quiet. There is practically no finest imported Japan rice in stock. There are, however, considerable stocks of English milled rice. Tapioca is strong and unchanged. We quote :

TEAS

The tea market continues strong. Locally buyers are still looking for cheap teas and have had to advance a little to get them. Teas for price are up quite ½c. on recent values. Japans are in poor supply. Ceylon and Indian blacks continue very strong, with prices fully maintained, and teas with good cup quality are scarce. Ceylon and Indian greens are unchanged, fair supply with considerable business doing in these sorts. On the London market Indians maintain their position, with fair receipts, and Ceylons are perhaps a little stronger in consequence of diminishing offerings. We quote :

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

The advance in Valencia raisins announced last week has stiffened the knees of some wholesalers who were disposed to shade prices. Valencias are at present quite firm. Currants are firming up. Advices from Patras announce an advance of 3d. to 6d. per cwt. on Filiatra fruit. Higher grades have not advanced in equal proportions. There is no new feature in California fruit. Importations have ceased now and not much more in the jobbing line will be done till after Christmas. A cable from Bordeaux advises shipment of new Bordeaux and Marbot walnuts. The market is considerably stronger, showing an advance of 2½ frs. on Bordeaux and 2frs. on Marbot walnuts. The first dates arrived in New York this last week and will be at hand shortly. Wholesalers continue to report filling of back orders for dried fruits. The splendid quality this year, one remarked, would probably result in large consumption. We quote :

GREEN FRUITS.

The green fruit market is not showing any great activity just at present. Oranges and lemons, however, are being called for in very fair volume and from all accounts apples are meeting with a very good demand. A few choice California tomatoes to take the place of the Canadian article now off the market were seen this week. They sell at from $2.50 to $3 per box of 20 lb. net. Jamaica oranges are a little easier. We quote :

VEGETABLES.

The vegetable market has been dull this week partly on account of the large quantities being sold from door to door. Potatoes are meeting with a large demand for Winter use, turnips also are well enquired for. Onions are slightly easier, while radishes, mushrooms and mint are more scarce and higher. Celery is not so high as it has been and pumpkins are dull and lower. We quote :

GRAIN, FLOUR AND BREAKFAST FOODS.

GRAIN.

The grain markets are generally quiet this week and prices a little easier. Manitoba wheat No. 1 hard, has dropped ½ to 1½c. Manitoba northern is 2 to 3½c. easier. Oats are 1c. firmer. Peas are 1c. easier. We quote :

QUEBEC MARKETS.

Montreal, November 19, 1903.

GROCERIES.

TRADE during the week has been rather on the quiet side. Travellers' reports, while fairly encouraging, do not show the plenitude of orders that might be expected towards close of navigation. Remittances are reported as fairly satisfactory on the whole, very few renewals being asked on the 4th. In teas the market has shown a dullness not noticeable for many months, very few large orders having been booked. All brokers report trade very quiet and no special feature to enlarge upon. The demand for Ceylon and Indian greens seems to have eased off. Japans continue firm with fair number of inquiries for common to medium ; stocks are light and closely held. China blacks and greens are quiet. The sugar market is dull and little is doing. The fluctuations in beets are too trifling to make any change here. Molasses is a little easier in Barbados grade, though trade is dull, unusually so, and jobbers can only attribute the falling off in orders to the high prices ruling and the trade taking up corn syrups. Coffees continue firm ; prices locally are generally advanced from 1 to 2c. per lb. Spices of all kinds are high with exception of ginger. Singapore pepper is reported 120,000 bags short of last year's crop and higher figures must follow. In canned goods the interesting feature has been the buying in by brokers and others of corn, one dealer having turned over 1,000 cases at 92½c. net. Jobbers generally are asking $1 and some even holding out for $1.05. It is claimed that a good deal of the buying was for Canadian canners' account, to fill orders in full. The foreign dried fruit trade is fair. New dates have made their appearance with some of the jobbers. Grenoble walnuts are receiving attention as it is rumored that Mr. Carret, of Tullins, is following in the footsteps of Messrs. E. M. Dadelzsen & Co., Bordeaux, with a view of cornering the supply. Figs are turned over freely. In green fruits no changes are noted. Apple shipments to Liverpool and other English ports are of record character, though prices have dropped 1s. per bbl. abroad. Spanish onions in cases are firm. Crates are all sold. Rice and tapioca are quiet. A good trade in fish has been done during the week. Frozen western fish are coming in now, the fresh fishing being finished. Oysters are arriving freely though only in common grades. Vegetables are quiet, potatoes ruling somewhat easier on account of the mild weather prevailing lately.

Deliveries of eggs are now almost nil and advanced prices are being cheerfully paid. The bean market seems to have found its level at prices quoted below. Dealers continue to complain that they cannot get any buckwheat honey, for which there is a constant enquiry. The association of makers of evaporated apples expired on November 15 and individual makers are now free to offer at independent figures. The flour market is quiet at the decline noted in last issue. Pot and pearl barley are scarce and hard to obtain. Heavy deliveries of oats are expected from the West next week, but at time of writing there is very little doing. The hide market is now very quiet after weeks of exceptional activity. Unless United States prices show a rally there is apt to be a slump on the local market.

SUGAR

The markets are very quiet and buying is done in very small quantities. In fact the market is featureless. New York raw sugar quotations gre steady. The Russian sugars that have lately come to hand have been placed principally in the hands of the manufacturing trade and in no way affect local conditions. We quote :

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

A fair business is being done in corn syrup. The high prices ruling for Barbados molasses during the past three or four months have thrown the trade into using corn syrups.

We are advised this morning from a large manufacturer of Barbados molasses that prices are a trifle easier. Local jobbers are still asking from 39 to 41c. for good quality Barbados. We quote :

TEAS.

The situation in tea during the past week has been a very quiet one. Ceylon blacks are in fairly good demand and London markets are reported strong with an advance of ½d. in common. Indians are in fairly good demand with no change in prices to report. In China blacks everything has been cleared up in London under 5d. at auction, or equal to 6d. here. Japans continue firm. Good medium quality is reported at 18½, while finer grades are ranging from 21 to 23c. We quote :

COFFEE.

Maracaibos are reported an advance of ½c. in New York this week. Other coffees unchanged and firm at the late advance. Mostly all the grinders here have advanced their prices and as the statistical position is strong the chances are for maintenance of the advanced prices for some time. We quote :

SPICES.

Spices of all kinds are very firm with higher prices in view for everything except ginger. Cloves are still keeping up at a high figure. Singapore pepper. — The world visible supply is 120,000 bags less than this time last year and this shortage largely accounts for the high prices ruling. 15c. f.o.b. New York for black Singapore pepper, and 20 to 25c. for Zanzibar cloves are looked upon as the likely prices that will have to be paid before many more months are over. We quote :

CANNED GOODS

The feature this week in canned goods has been a strong demand for corn. The jobbers are asking $1 to $1.05. There has been considerable buying done for outside account, and we are advised of the sale of 1,000 cases at 90c. to 92½c. net. The general feeling among the trade is that corn will see still higher figures. Tomatoes are quoted at $1 to $1.05. Salmon continues scarce and although there is no change reported from last week there is a disposition to hold out for somewhat higher figures. We quote :

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

Enquiries for carload lots of Valencia raisins have been received from Winnipeg during the week which local jobbers have been unable to accept, owing to the first and further arrivals being well-booked up. In currants, the market continues much as before notwithstanding that over 30,000 tons have been taken off the Patras market under retention of the currant bank laws. When it is considered that Canadians use only 2,000 tons per annum the amount that is withdrawn may be appreciated. Early reaction is looked for. Grenoble walnuts.—It is rumored that Mr. Carret, of Tullins, following in the footsteps of Messrs. E. M. Dadelszen & Co., Bordeaux, is this year buying with a view of a corner. GREEN FRUITS.

There are no changes to note this week. The local demand is very good for apples. Foreign markets show a decline of about 1s. per bbl. Shipments from this side are keeping up wonderfully well but there will be a falling off in a few weeks when navigation will close. Oranges are slow sale at present. Lemons are scarce and stocks very light. Spanish onions are firm, large cases selling from $2 to $2.15. There are no crates on the market. We quote :

FISH.

The fish trade during the week is generally good. The colder weather stimulated sales. Frozen western fish such as dore and pike are coming in now in carload lots, fresh fishing being finished. Haddies still remain scarce. Herrings and green cod are also scarce as yet, though it is expected that more plentiful arrivals will come to hand next week. Dried and smoked fish are in fairly good demand. Oysters are arriving freely, but mostly in the common grades, which are, however, not in good favor with the trade. The best grades of Curtain Island oysters are scarce. We quote :

VEGETABLES.

Steady market prevailing in all lines. Potatoes are dull at 55c. to 57½c. in carload lots and farmers are selling in jobbing lots at 63 to 65c. Some good sized lots of Early Rose were sold at 63 to 65c. per bag of 90 lb. The late mild weather is responsible for easier feeling prevailing; future prospects however are for higher prices and dealers are looking to pay 60c. next week in carload lots. Canadian red onions are scarce and quoted at $3.50 to $3.75 ; yellow $2.50 to $3 ; imported American yellow onions $1.50 per bag of 80 lb. Spanish onions in large cans are selling at $2.10 to $2.15. COUNTRY PRODUCE.

EGGS.

The deliveries have practically stopped and advanced prices are paid without a murmur. It is evident that stocks are light for if there were very much in the country the high prices would bring them out. We quote late Fall gathered select stock 23c., select 22c., straight fresh 20c, Montreal lime 19c. There are few low-grade eggs on the market.

BEANS.

It is still dangerous to hazard an opinion as to the ultimate course which the bean market will take, but the opinion is now freely expressed among the trade that prices have about reached their level. We make no change in the quotations which we gave in last issue as these prices are being followed pretty closely. Goods on spot are still scarce and for immediate shipment higher prices than those quoted below would be asked in most cases. We quote :

HONEY.

To our previous reports there is nothing to add. Buckwheat honey continues in strong demand but there is none offering on the local market and in the absence of actual transactions prices are nominally the same. Comb honey also continues in good demand and offerings are light. Of other grades the market has all that it can stand and although producers are offering very low prices buyers are very slow to accept. We quote the following prices to the retail trade :

EVAPORATED APPLES.

Prices as given in last issue remain unchanged. The association of evaporators formed some time ago expired on November 15 and individual evaporators are now at liberty to sell at any prices. So far there has been no appreciable difference in the situation and we again quote the following prices to the retail trade :

FISH.

Fresh fish are in better supply with a quantity of nice mackerel and halibut on the market. In dry fish price of pollock keeps low as compared with codfish, and sales continue limited. TRADE NOTES.

W. F. Hatheway & Co. have received some very nice New Orleans molasses in barrels which they offer low.

Jones & Schofield have a large shipment of seeded seedless California raisins in pound cartons. While the fruit is small it is good and the price is attractive.

Seely's pure codfish, without a bone, is meeting a good demand.

Cream of tartar is very scarce in the local market.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, November 17, 1903.

FROM now until the end of the year demand will be pretty heavy for shipment to outports and places without railway communication which have to buy sufficient now to last them until next Spring. From all over the province, with the possible exception of Sydney, the very best reports are coming in and travellers' sales are large. In one particular only is there ground for disappointment and that is in the matter of collections. Not that these are any worse than usual, but merchants had their anticipations in this regard raised to a high pitch, thinking that with the high prices being received for produce and the abundant employment of all classes of labor, all old scores would be wiped off the ledger and current liabilities promptly met. The warehouses along the line of the D.A. Ry. are filled with apples awaiting shipment to the English markets. The Furness-Withy Steamship Co. is this year affording shippers an excellent service and in addition the steamships of the C.P.R. Winter service from St. John will call here for apple cargoes, commencing with the Lake Champlain, on November 28. The superior quality of the Nova Scotia apples has this year commanded for them an excellent price in England. The exhibit now displayed by the Nova Scotia Government at Crystal Palace, London, has attracted much interest.

The market for flour and feed is very firm and there has been no change in price, excepting in Manitobas, a couple of brands of which are slightly lower. Cornmeal has dropped ten cents on the barrel and Canadian hand-picked beans have also declined slightly. Feeds are steady and jobbers' prices are unchanged, although some of the mills have raised their quotations owing to increased demand. There is a good demand for oatmeal, as the consumption is now increasing.

* * *

In burning oils there has been a further advance of one cent per gallon on all grades and there is a very firm feeling in this commodity. Spanish onions have been advanced 25 cents per case. Filberts are lower here than last year notwithstanding the reported shortage in French and Chili crops. Moderate quantities of Jamaica oranges are now arriving by regular steamers. They are subject to considerable waste and sell repacked at $5.50 to $6 per barrel. A large consignment of Sable Island cranberries sold at the wharf last week for $6 per barrel. Bananas are 50 cents a bunch higher than last Autumn owing to the damage caused by the storm in Jamaica some months ago.

Importers at Halifax and St. John are sending large quantities of molasses to upper province dealers. One firm has so far received western orders for more than forty carloads and is shipping at the rate of four or five cars a day. This is chiefly Barbados. Of course under these conditions prices are firm. The market for refined sugar is very quiet as orders are of a purely hand to mouth character and there is no speculative demand whatever. Prices remain unchanged and the market featureless.

* * *

Arrivals of P.E.I. produce are heavy at the wharves. Potatoes sell at 35 cents and oats 40 cents. Buying of cheese is at a standstill as the factories are demanding higher prices for the tail ends of the season than dealers are willing to pay. Septembers and the first weeks of October seem to have been about all absorbed. There is a decidedly firmer feeling in butter, especially in choice creamery. Eggs are scarce and high at 21 cents.

OTTAWA TRADE GOSSIP.

RETAIL trade in all lines is reported rather quiet. Merchants are complaining that money is scarce. Of course at this season of the year trade is generally dull and does not usually brighten up until Christmas trade sets in. In order to secure discounts for city taxes payments have to be made before November 30, which is one cause assigned for short payments on account. As soon as sleighing commences, which is looked for any day, the farmers' trade ought to brighten things up. The sugar market has been steady for some time. Prices are the same as last quoted : Granulated in bags, $4.12 ; in barrels, $4.17. Yellows in bags, $3.42 ; in barrels, $3.47.

Molasses are still quoted high. At present the demand is only fair.

The coffee trade is brisk as is usual at this season.

Wholesalers report an increasing demand for Ceylon green teas.

Choice butter is becoming scarce. Creamery is quoted at 23 to 23½c. for pound blocks and is in good demand.

Eggs are quoted at 18 to 18½c. for limed stock and 22 for boilers ; new laid 25 to 30c. on local market.

Potatoes in round lots sell at 70 to 75c., in small quantity, 80c.

Flour is still firm at $4.55 a bbl. for patents, $4.25 for bakers', $4.10 for family. Rolled oats is worth $3.50 to $4 a bbl.

In feed, shorts is quoted at $20, bran $18 and provender $20.

Oats on market are worth 34 to 37c.

Cheese is sold at 12c. by jobbers.

At the fruit exchange large quantities of apples are being sold at the sales which are held Monday, Wednesday and Friday of each week. No. 1 stock is bringing $2.90 to $3.25. No. 2, $2 to $2.65; odd varieties of inferior grades, $1.50 to $2.00.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

Winnipeg, Nov. 16, 1903.

THE general grocery trade is pursuing the even tenor of its way with scarcely a ripple on the surface of the stream of business to indicate change of prices. The increasingly cold weather of the week has stimulated trade in grocery lines, from the fact that it has stirred up trade in heavy clothing, boots and shoes, all through the country, and the housewives in purchasing one line have not overlooked others.

Although Christmas trade has not been much talked of, the fact that Christmas is only six weeks away is beginning to be apparent, and everything indicates a heavy trade in fine goods for the Christmas season.

The wheat trade of the week has been slow and dull. Exporters could not handle wheat at the prices asked, and sellers were not willing to take lower bids. There has been a shortage of cars also, and, as nearly all elevators on the C.P.R. are full, there being over 5,000,000 bushels in interior elevators last Saturday night, a number of the larger elevator companies have ceased buying for the time being, claiming there is no possibility of getting more wheat out before navigation closes than they now have in the elevators. There is more in this situation than meets the eye, and there will be more extended news to give a little later on. The farmers are in fine shape for the Winter. It is claimed that never in the history of the West has so much Fall work been well and satisfactorily done, and the outlook for the next crop is simply splendid. There is no doubt that at the prices paid, the farmers have done exceedingly well with the crop so far marketed in spite of the lowering of the grade due to bad weather early in September.

FLOUR AND FEED.

The trade in flour, both export and domestic, is good, and the price holds firm at the quotation of $2.35 for No. 1 patent that has been quoted so long. Rolled oats are higher, as has been anticipated all along, and the 20-lb. sack is quoted at $1.85 to $1.90. There is a very active demand for milling oats with very light offerings. Beans have eased off a little. As is usual at this time there is a good demand for beans looking to the supply of lumber and wood camps. Should snow come reasonably early the bush work will be heavy this season. Contractors have been calling for men for the bush for a couple of weeks, and preparations are well forward to take advantage of the first snow.

The week has been marked by the arrival of the first Ontario evaporated apples of the season. The quality is fine but the price is high, being 6¾c. per pound, with indications of a further advance.

The only happening of interest to smokers has been the advance of all forms of Wills' Capstan tobacco 5c. per pound.

CATTLE AND PRODUCE.

The export business is about wound up, and the season has been a very poor one, both from point of numbers and prices, the one being accounted for by the other. It is difficult to obtain satisfactory particulars, but it seems pretty well authenticated that ranchers doing their own shipping, instead of selling outright to exporters, have not found the business very profitable. Exporters certainly cannot have made much money, as their shipments have been too light. The domestic market has been almost overstocked with cattle, and prices for butchers have been and still are very low, though it must be confessed the retail price of meat has not declined in consequence. The prices quoted are: Export cattle, nominally, 3 to 3¼., point of shipment, and butchers, 2¼ to 2½c., point of shipment.

HOGS.

The supplies of live hogs are again increasing, and the price continues at 5¼c. for the best grades of hogs. Country-dressed hogs are beginning to arrive, and for these the prices range from $6.25 to $7.25, according to the class of hogs.

BUTTER.

The supplies of dairy butter coming in are small, and the larger percentage of it is of poor quality. Dealers are offering 20c. for choice sweet dairy fit for table use when put up in bricks, and 16c. for tubs. Where creamery butter is being sold by commission houses it is quoted at 22½c. per pound for the 56-lb. box of September make.

CHEESE.

There is a quiet trade in cheese, as retail houses buy as they need from the jobbers. Ontario is quoted at 14 and Manitoba at 13½c.

EGGS.

Very limited supplies are received, and dealers offer 20c., Winnipeg, for case lots. New laid eggs, in a retail way, are worth 40c. per dozen, and the supplies are very light.

POULTRY.

The increasingly cold weather is bringing out poultry, and a fine line of dressed geese have been offered this week. Dealers pay 10c. for them in a wholesale way.

NOTES.

Smellie Bros. & Co., of Russell, who have for years been regarded as among the most enterprising general merchants of the West, to meet the requirements of their ever growing trade, have erected a handsome store at Binscarth, the point where the Russell branch leaves the main line of the C.P.R. north-western road. The store will be occupied in time for the Christmas trade. There are not many city stores that have a more up-to-date equipment than Smellie Bros. & Co.

The Raymond beet sugar industry was formally opened last week, with 150 men working in two shifts of 75 each. The plant is lighted by electricity, and can be seen for many miles. It is expected the season will run about 60 days and will give 2,500,000 pounds of sugar.

The Winnipeg office of The American Tobacco Co. has been moved to the Oddfellows' Block, corner of McDermot avenue and Princess, where they will have greatly enlarged quarters.

CAPE TOWN EXHIBITION.

Mr. J. G. Jardine, commercial agent for Canada in South Africa, who is shortly coming home on a visit, has sent the Trade and Commerce Department plans and a prospectus of the Industrial Exhibition to be held at Cape Town in November, 1904. If the Canadian Government decide to put up their own buildings the Exhibition people would allow them 75 per cent. off the tariff rates for space.

MODERN STORE-LIGHTING METHODS.

THE question as to what is the best means of illuminating stores is being discussed freely by the grocery trade. It is an admitted fact that in these modern times a merchant to be up to date must illuminate his store properly, not merely having enough light to barely see the goods, but he must light up his store brilliantly and make it attractive, showing his goods off to the best advantage, and drawing the attention of the passerby.

It is surprising how easily our senses are influenced. Nine persons out of ten are attracted by a brilliantly-lighted store, and the same percentage of buyers will follow that light, rather than hunt up a neighboring store which is half-lighted and looks dingy.

A well-lighted store has a "come-in-and-see-me" appearance, while a poorly-lighted store has a cold, uninviting aspect. Do merchants realize this sufficiently? Is it not false economy to use out-of-date means of lighting stores, when by using modern methods they can be made attractively brilliant at about the same cost as the old-fashioned ways. Great strides have been made in this line by science and the ingenuity of man. One of the latest inventions is what is called the Turner gas arc lamp, which is constructed in such a way as to produce from a cluster of four mantles 500 candle power of light, and that from burning only 16 feet of gas per hour. This is about the same amount of gas consumed in two of the ordinary old-fashioned gas jets, which at their best would only produce some 50 candle power. The scientific principle by which this result is obtained is, first, the super-heating of the gas, which causes the gas to expand; secondly, allowing the expanded gas to mix with air as it passes from a retort in the lamp to the burner. In this way a small amount of gas super-heated, mixed with the right proportion of air (or the oxygen in air) will produce an illuminating power from eight to ten times more than ordinary gas.

FIRST PERSIAN DATES.

THE first cargo of the 1903 crop of Persian dates arrived in New York last week per steamer Gorjistan several days behind schedule. The cargo, says The New York Journal of Commerce, included about 110,000 boxes of Hallowee, Khadrawee and Sairs, there being, however, comparatively few of the last named variety. The vessel left Bussorah on October 1 last, and was due on November 5, but rough weather in the Red Sea is said to have delayed her. Early reports current in the market stated that some damage to the cargo had been sustained, but the importers give out the information that the fruit is in good condition, the captain of the vessel reporting that the cargo is undamaged. A considerable business in the first tide dates direct has been done on the opening basis of 4c. for Hallowee, 4⅛c. for fancy and 3⅞c. for Khadrawees. These prices still rule, and the unsold balance of the cargo is offered on these terms.

Old dates on the spot are quoted freely at 3¾c. for Hallowee, 3½c. for Khadrawee, and 3c. for Sairs, with packages as to brand quoted at from 4½c. to 6c., the latter figure for pitted fruit. Packages new crop are quoted at from 4¾c. to 5¼c., 30 1-lb. cartons to the case. New crop dates via first ti e steamer to London are offered at 3¾c. for Hallowee, 3½c. for Khadrawee, and 3c. for Sairs, with a possibility that these figures can be shaded as to time of arrival. Dates via London are made due here toward the end of the month. It is reported that a good business via London has been done.

The second cargo direct now reported on the way per Muristan is made due here about the end of the month. This vessel is said to have about 130,000 boxes. No prices have been named on the cargo up to the present time.

CALIFORNIA DRIED FRUITS.

THE season in California has presented some unusual features, the most prominent of which has been the exceptionally light buying for forward delivery, says the N. Y. Journal of Commerce. The actual consuming trade is held to be quite as large if it does not exceed in volume that of a year ago, but jobbers and other large distributors have departed from their usual practice of providing in advance for their probable requirements. Two reasons are assigned in the trade for this action, either of which might in itself be sufficient to curtail operations in forward contracts, and when combined seem to afford ample ground for the disinclination of buyers to make large commitments against possible future needs.

Buyers in this, as in most other lines of trade, have been made somewhat nervous by the uncertainty of the financial outlook, and hence have been the more ready to be influenced to withhold orders by the comparatively high prices with which the season was inaugurated by the sellers on the Coast. They have therefore fallen naturally into the practice of drawing upon the ample stocks in first hands as the goods are needed, but while this creates a rather lively movement in the principal staples it imparts to the trade something of a retail character and deprives the situation of much of the interest usually attaching to it at this time of the year, when the season of largest consumption is opening, and the trade is accustomed to large deals in these commodities. It has had other effects of greater moment, notable the restrictions placed upon the seeded raisin trade in the East. Because of what they consider the high price of loose raisins and the retail nature of trade in their product, a number of the eastern seeders, estimated by some as one-half of the number engaged in the business, are shut down awaiting more favorable conditions.

PACIFIC COAST PRUNES.

In connection with prunes a mail advice from San Francisco says: "The carry-over crop of last year's prunes demoralized the eastern markets at the opening of the present season. These goods were offered one-half cent lower than new fruit of the same grade, and as the quality of the old stock was good, buyers did not care to pay more for the new fruit. It is evident that the influence of the Oregon shipments has been injurious. Prunes from that state are offered in New York on a 2¾c. basis. As the estimate of the Oregon crop is placed at 1,000 cars this season, this supply must be reckoned with in establishing prices. A factor in the prune trade this year will be the European demand, since the failure of the French crop compels that country to secure its fruit from foreigners. Large orders have been received for California prunes from France, and hundreds of tons have gone forward, but purchasing houses have difficulty in shipping fast enough to fill orders."

COFFEE SITUATION AT HAVRE.

F. Metz & Co., writing from Havre under the date of October 29, say of coffee: "The advance starting in New York is very unpleasant for the great majority of the European arbitrage people; with the heavy premiums existing in New York it has been for years a well paying business to sell in New York against coffee in store, against importations from Brazil or purely as arbitrage. In declining or unchanged markets such trades brought good profits to the seller in New York, but this has ceased to be the case since New York has become leader of the advance; we estimate the amount sold in New York for Havre account alone at nearly 400,000 bags, and in a further advance the margin question may become a very awkward factor."

THE ORANGE COMBINATION.

Referring to the orange situation with special reference to the position of the combination a mail advice from the Coast has the following: "In all, over 40 agencies are now prepared to handle the business of the organization, and upward of 150 salesmen will be engaged in soliciting orders for the golden fruit during the coming season. Mr. Naftzger states that every important city in the country will be occupied by a representative of the agency, and exclusive agents will canvass thoroughly and continuously every carlot town in the United States. He is of the opinion that although this state will have considerable citrus competition to meet there is little reason to fear it, and says that if the country continues in its present prosperous condition there should be a satisfactory market for every box of our fruit. Regarding the proposition to flood the market early in the season with California oranges, selling them cheap, if necessary, to encourage consumption with the hope of advancing the prices later, Mr. Naftzger believes it might be practicable if the quality of our fruit is good enough at the time to warrant the undertaking. As to transportation facilities he expresses the opinion that the railroads are making strenuous efforts to prepare for the handling of the large citrus crop, and believes that there will not be much cause for complaint on this score."

THE CURRANT SITUATION.

In reviewing the currant situation Hills Brothers' Company, New York, say that following the Herminie, which arrived yesterday, there is nothing further on the way to the United States except the steamers Aquelija and Alberta, recently sailed. The former will bring about 1,600 tons and the latter about 900 tons. Inasmuch as both vessels will have to proceed to other ports for additional cargo they are not expected to arrive here for some time. The Aquelija may get here about December 10, and the Alberta a week or ten days later. The market in Greece has advanced, and exhibits a decidedly firmer tone. The Currant Bank continues to buy fruit daily, and up to the present probably has absorbed almost, if not quite, 20,000 tons. The growers are not showing so much anxiety to force their holdings, and in consequence the entire situation is much more cheerful.
